Practice 29

> “The film creates a believable future world.”

「這部電影創造了一個雖然虛構但內在合理、令人信服的未來世界。」

believable = 即使內容是虛構的, 其細節和邏輯仍真實一致, 令人願意相信

This belongs to the same broad credible/plausible meaning as #13.

15. believably = in a convincing/credible way — 令人信服地; 真實可信地

This word is valid, though less common than believable.

Practice 30

> “She played the role believably.”

「她把角色演得真實可信、令人信服。」

Practice 31

> “The story develops believably.”

「故事的發展符合人物和情境邏輯，令人覺得可信。」

believably = 以符合現實或內在邏輯、足以令人相信的方式

In everyday writing, English often prefers:

> “in a believable way”

rather than using believably repeatedly.

16. believer = person who believes something (相信某件事的人) — 相信者; 信奉者

Practice 32

> “He is a firm believer in lifelong learning.”

「他非常相信並支持終身學習這個理念。」

「他沉浸在一個虛構想像的世界裡。」

make-believe = 明知並非真實、但刻意假裝或想像它是真的***

Important distinction: believe vs believe in***

This is crucial.

believe someone***

= accept that what the person says is true

> “I believe her.”

「我相信她說的話。」

believe in someone***

= have confidence in the person's ability or potential

> “I believe in her.”

「我相信她的能力／我對她有信心。」

Very different meanings.

Important distinction: believable vs believable-looking

believable

= credible in a broad sense

A:

* story

* excuse

* character

* advertisement

* performance

can be believable.

realistic

often emphasizes resemblance to real life.

> “The acting was realistic and believable.”

「演技既逼真自然，也令人信服。」

Important distinction: believable vs credible

They overlap strongly.

believable

= easy enough to believe; seems realistic or plausible

credible

= deserving belief because there is good reason/evidence to trust it

Compare:

> “a believable character”

> = 一個令人覺得真實自然的角色

> “a credible scientific source”

> = 一個有可靠依據、值得信任的科學來源

For your advertisement, both could work, but:

believable emphasizes the impression the ad gives.

Important distinction: believable vs plausible

plausible

= reasonably possible or logically convincing

> “a plausible explanation”

「合情合理、可能成立的解釋」

believable

= capable of being believed by a person

They overlap, but plausible often sounds more analytical.

Important distinction: believable vs trustworthy

believable

describes the claim/story/impression.

trustworthy

usually describes a person/source/organization that can be relied upon.

> “The explanation is believable.”

「解釋聽起來可信。」

> “She is trustworthy.”

「她是值得信任的人。」

Usually:

> a trustworthy story

is possible but less natural than a believable story when you mean the story itself sounds true.

Important distinction: belief vs opinion

opinion

= a personal judgment/view

> “In my opinion, the ad is effective.”

belief

= something a person accepts as true, often held more deeply or firmly

> “His belief is that honesty builds trust.”

So belief can be stronger/deeper than a casual opinion.

Important distinction: belief vs faith

belief

broadly means accepting something as true.

often implies strong trust, sometimes without complete proof, and is especially common in religious contexts.

> “religious beliefs”

> = 宗教信念

> “faith in God”

> = 對上帝的信仰

They overlap but are not identical.

Important spelling note: believe vs belief

This family causes a classic spelling error:

* believe → verb

* belief → noun

* plural of belief → beliefs

Not:

> believes as the plural noun ❌

Compare:

> “She believes the story.”

> Here believes is a verb.

> “She has strong beliefs.”

> Here beliefs is the plural noun.

Family-extension note

Following our Golden Manual, useful members/extensions include:

* believe something = 相信某事是真的

* believe someone = 相信某人的說話

* believe in someone = 對某人有信心

* believe in an idea = 認同／信奉某理念

* belief = 信念／相信

* belief in = 對.....的信心

* believable = 合理可信的

* believably = 令人信服地

* believer = 相信者／信徒

* disbelief = 不相信／難以置信

* suspension of disbelief = 暫時擱置懷疑、投入虛構作品
 * unbelievable = 難以置信; 非正式「驚人地好」
 * believe it or not = 信不信由你
 * make-believe = 假裝／虛構想像
