A semantic note first: this family has two especially important core ideas:

2. something pleasant or advantageous that you are fortunate to have

We should keep these connected rather than splitting every luxury product or experience into a separate meaning.

giving an impression of high quality, comfort, refinement, and pleasurable indulgence—something nicer and more premium than an ordinary basic product.

10. luxuriant = vegetation/hair/growth abundant and rich — 茂盛的; 濃密的

「花園裡長滿了茂盛繁密的植物。」

Practice 20

> “She has thick, luxuriant hair.”

「她有一頭濃密豐厚的頭髮。」

luxuriant = 植物、毛髮等生長得非常茂盛、濃密或豐富的

Not:

> a luxuriant hotel ❌

For a hotel:

> a luxurious hotel ✅

Important distinction: luxury vs luxurious luxury

usually a noun:

> “They live in luxury.”

「他們過著奢華的生活。」

or before another noun:

> “a luxury hotel”

「豪華酒店」

luxurious

an adjective describing the quality/feeling:

> “The hotel is luxurious.”

「這間酒店非常豪華舒適。」

So:

luxury hotel

luxurious hotel

Both work, but:

* luxury hotel = 高端豪華酒店這個類別

* luxurious hotel = 酒店本身給人奢華舒適的感覺

Important distinction: luxurious vs expensive

These are not the same.

expensive

= costs a lot of money

luxurious

= feels exceptionally comfortable, refined, high-quality, and indulgent

Something can be:

> expensive but not luxurious

= 很貴, 但一點也不豪華舒服

And something relatively inexpensive can still feel luxurious.

That distinction is especially important in your advertisement sentence.

Important distinction: luxury vs necessity

A classic contrast.

necessity

= something needed

luxury

= something desirable but not essential

> “For some commuters, noise-cancelling headphones feel more like a necessity than a luxury.”

「對某些通勤人士來說, 降噪耳機與其說是奢侈品, 不如說更像必需品。」

This is a very natural expression.

Important distinction: luxury vs comfort comfort

= absence of physical/emotional discomfort

luxury

= comfort plus an additional sense of superior quality, indulgence, exclusivity, or expense

A basic chair can be:

> comfortable but not luxurious

「坐得舒服, 但並不豪華。」

Your sentence deliberately uses both ideas:

> comforting + luxurious because they do not mean the same thing.

Important distinction: luxury vs premium

luxury

often implies:

- * exclusivity
- * indulgence
- * prestige
- * superior materials/experience

premium often means:

- * higher tier
- * higher quality
- * higher price than standard

> “a premium subscription”

= 高級付費方案

Calling it a luxury subscription would usually sound odd unless it genuinely provides an extravagant/high-end experience.

Important distinction: luxurious vs lavish

luxurious

= very comfortable, refined, high-quality

lavish

= extremely generous, abundant, or expensive, sometimes excessively so

> “a luxurious room”

「豪華舒適的房間」

> “a lavish wedding”

「極其豪華鋪張的婚禮」

Lavish often emphasizes large amounts/extravagance more strongly.

Important distinction: luxurious vs luxuriant

This one is essential:

luxurious

= 奢華舒適的

* luxurious hotel

* luxurious fabric

* luxurious experience

luxuriant

= 茂盛濃密的

* luxuriant vegetation

* luxuriant hair

* luxuriant growth

One letter difference, very different usage.

Countability note: luxury

Uncountable = state/style of luxurious living

> “They lived in luxury.”

「他們過著奢華生活。」

Countable = one non-essential pleasure/item

> “A private pool is a luxury.”

「私人泳池是一種奢侈享受。」

Plural = individual luxuries

> “They gave up several luxuries.”

「他們放棄了幾項奢侈享受。」

Family-extension note

After the full family sweep, the useful modern family includes:

- * luxury — uncountable = 奢華; 豪華享受
- * a luxury = 非必需但令人享受的事物
- * little luxury = 生活中的小奢侈／小享受
- * the luxury of + noun/-ing = 難得擁有的時間、自由、選擇或餘裕
- * luxury + noun = 高端／豪華／奢侈品級的
- * luxurious = 豪華舒適而富享受感的
- * luxuriously = 奢華地／高級舒適地
- * luxuriate = 盡情享受舒適／愉悅
- * luxuriant = 茂盛濃密的(相關但不同義)

Useful compounds:

- * luxury goods = 奢侈品
- * luxury brand = 奢侈／高端品牌

* luxury hotel = 豪華酒店
* luxury car = 豪華汽車
* luxury market = 奢侈品／高端市場

There is also informal luxe, meaning stylishly luxurious/high-end, but it is much less essential for a general learner, so I would keep it as recognition vocabulary rather than core family vocabulary.

For your original sentence

> “...made the product seem useful, comforting, and luxurious.”

The exact meaning is:

luxurious = 廣告令耳機看起來不只是實用工具, 而是一件具有高級質感、舒適體驗和享受感的產品

So the natural Chinese could be:

> 「令產品看起來既實用、令人安心舒適, 又顯得高級而有奢華享受感。」

And importantly, luxurious here does not simply mean “expensive.” The advertisement is making the headphones feel like a premium, pleasurable experience, not merely a costly object.
