A useful semantic point first: mention does not have many completely unrelated core meanings. Its central idea is very stable:

Useful to recognize; not important for ordinary active vocabulary.

15. forementioned = previously mentioned (正式書面語) — 前述的; 上述的

This is a useful formal family extension.

Meaning: Already mentioned earlier in a document or discussion.

Practice 30

> “The forementioned features are included in the standard model.”

「上述／前述的功能都包括在標準型號中。」

Practice 31

> “The forementioned problems must be addressed before launch.”

「在推出產品前，必須處理前述的問題。」

forementioned = 在前面的文字或討論中已經提及的

This is quite formal. In everyday English, people usually say:

* the features mentioned above

* the features I mentioned earlier

Important distinction: mention vs say

say

Broadly means expressing something in words.

> “She said the battery lasts twenty hours.”

「她說電池可以使用二十小時。」

mention

specifically suggests briefly referring to something, often without much detail.

> “She mentioned the battery life.”

「她提到了電池續航力。」

So:

say = 說出內容

mention = 順帶／簡短提到某項內容

Important distinction: mention vs discuss

Very important.

= briefly refer to discuss

= talk about something in detail, often considering different aspects

> “The ad mentioned battery life.”

「廣告提到了電池續航力。」

> “The review discussed battery life in detail.”

「評測詳細討論了電池續航力。」

Therefore:

mention ≠ discuss in detail

Important distinction: mention vs refer to

They overlap.

mention

usually means explicitly saying/writing the person or thing.

refer to

can be broader and somewhat more formal:

- * mention

- * point to

- * mean

- * describe something by a term

> “The report refers to several earlier studies.”

「報告提及幾項較早期的研究。」

But refer has other meanings that mention does not.

Important distinction: mention vs point out

mention

= simply refer to something

point out

= deliberately draw attention to something because the speaker considers it important or relevant

> “She mentioned the price.”

「她提到了價格。」

> “She pointed out that the price had increased.”

「她特別指出價格已經上升。」

So point out is usually more deliberate/emphatic.

Important distinction: mention vs bring up***

mention***

can be brief and neutral.

bring up***

often means introducing a topic into a conversation.

> “He brought up the problem during dinner.”

= 他吃飯時提出了那個話題。

Because we are keeping phrasal verbs out by default, I would recognize this contrast but not expand it into a full phrasal-verb lesson here.

Important grammar point: mention does not normally take “about”***

A common learner error:

> “She mentioned the problem.”

not:

> “She mentioned about the problem.”

Likewise:

> “He mentioned that the train was late.”

not:

> “He mentioned about that the train was late.”

mention already contains the idea of “talking about.”

Important grammar point: mention doing, not normally mention to do

> “She mentioned working there before.”

not normally:

> “She mentioned to work there before.”

But you can say:

> “She mentioned to me that she had worked there before.”

Here, to me identifies the listener; it is not part of an infinitive.

Family-extension note

Following our Golden Manual, useful members/extensions include:

- * mention something = 提到某事
- * mention that... = 提到.....
- * make mention of = 提及
- * a brief mention = 簡短提及
- * social-media mention = @提及／點名標註
- * not to mention = 更不用說
- * don't mention it = 不用客氣
- * worth mentioning = 值得一提
- * as mentioned earlier/above = 如前所述／如上文所述
- * honourable mention = 榮譽提名／特別表揚
- * unmentionable = 難以啟齒／不宜提及的
- * aforementioned = 上述的／前述的

Most of these still grow from the central idea:

> bringing someone/something briefly into speech, writing, or attention

For your original sentence

> “At the same time, the ad mentioned practical features like comfort, battery life, and sound quality...”

The exact meaning is:

mention = 簡短提及或指出某項內容，讓人知道它存在或值得注意，但不一定作詳細解釋

So here:

> the ad mentioned practical features

= 廣告亦有實際地提到舒適度、電池續航力和音質等產品特點，而不是只談抽象感受。

That detail matters because it helps explain the next part:

> “...so it still felt believable.”

The advertisement was emotional, but it also gave enough concrete product information to remain credible.
