

Word family: mind / minds / minded / mindful / mindless / mindset

Base word: mind

Plural: minds

Past tense: minded

Past participle: minded

-ing form: minding

Related forms: mindful, mindless, mindset

Useful constructions/extensions: my mind goes blank, change your mind, make up your mind, keep/bear in mind, have something in mind, mind your own business, mind the gap, do you mind...?, never mind, in my mind, on my mind, frame/state of mind, peace of mind, open-minded, absent-minded, mindset

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞) / related adjective and noun forms (相關形容詞及名詞)

Your passage contains:

> “My heart would race, my mind would go blank, and I would start imagining the worst.”

Here, mind refers to:

your mental thinking process — your ability to think, remember, and form words.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> my mind would go blank

mind means the mental faculty responsible for thinking, remembering, concentrating, and producing ideas.

The phrase:

> go blank

means that, because of nervousness, you suddenly cannot think of what to say or remember what you intended to say.

Meaning: The part of a person responsible for thinking, remembering, and awareness.

繁體中文: 人的思考、記憶和意識活動; 這裡特別指因緊張而突然無法思考或想不起要說甚麼

中文翻譯:

> “My heart would race, my mind would go blank...”

「我會心跳加速, 腦袋一片空白／突然想不起要說甚麼……」

-minded = 具有某種思考方式、態度或性格傾向的

This is a productive family pattern.

Important distinction: mind vs brain

This is one of the most important learner contrasts.

is the physical organ inside the skull.

> “The brain controls many body functions.”

「大腦控制很多身體功能。」 mind

usually refers to:

- * thinking;
- * awareness;
- * memory;
- * imagination;
- * feelings/mental activity.

> “My mind went blank.”

「我腦袋一片空白。」

In everyday Chinese both may sometimes be translated using 「腦」, but the English concepts differ:

brain = 生理器官

mind = 心智／思考與意識

Important distinction: mind vs heart

Your sentence gives both:

> “My heart would race, my mind would go blank...”

heart

here = physical nervous reaction

mind

here = mental/cognitive reaction

Figuratively:

heart often represents emotion.

mind often represents thought/reason.

Compare:

> “My heart says yes, but my mind says no.”

= 感情想答應，但理智不同意。

Important distinction: mind vs thought

mind

= the mental faculty / whole mental space.

thought

= one particular idea produced by the mind.

> “A thought entered my mind.”

= 一個想法進入我的腦海。

So:

mind = 思考系統／心智

thought = 一個具體想法

Important distinction: mind vs memory

memory

focuses specifically on:

- * storing;
- * remembering;
- * recalling past information.

mind

is broader and includes:

- * thinking;
- * imagining;

- * deciding;
- * remembering;
- * awareness.

So memory is one function of the mind.

Important distinction: on my mind vs in my mind

These are often confused.

on my mind

= I keep thinking/worrying about it.

> “The presentation is on my mind.”

= 我一直惦記著簡報。

in my mind

can mean:

- * in my imagination;
- * in my opinion;
- * in my mental picture.

> “In my mind, the room looked much bigger.”

= 在我的想像／印象中，房間大很多。

Important distinction: change your mind vs change of heart change your mind

focuses on:

> changing an opinion, choice, or decision.

change of heart

often suggests:

> a deeper emotional/attitudinal change.

Compare:

> “I changed my mind about the meeting time.”

neutral practical decision.

> “I had a change of heart and decided to help.”

deeper emotional shift.

Important distinction: make up your mind vs decide

They are close.

decide

is the standard neutral verb.

make up your mind

often emphasizes:

* hesitation beforehand;

* finally reaching a decision.

> “I finally made up my mind.”

= 我終於拿定主意。

Important distinction: keep in mind vs remember

remember

= retain/recall information.

keep in mind

= actively keep an important factor in consideration.

> “Remember the meeting is at nine.”

= 記得九點開會。

> “Keep in mind that the audience is not technical.”

= 要留意／記住觀眾不是技術背景。

The second often affects how you act or decide.

Important distinction: mind = object vs care

In:

> “I don’t mind.”

mind means:

> object / feel bothered.

It does not mean:

> think.

So:

> “Do you mind waiting?”

= 你介意等嗎？ not:

> 你思考等待嗎？

This verb use is a major learner trap.

Important distinction: Do you mind...? — answer logic

This is very important.

Question:

> “Do you mind if I open the window?”

If you say:

> “No, I don’t mind.”

you mean:

可以, 我不介意。

If you say:

> “Yes, I do mind.”

you mean:

我介意, 最好不要。

Because the question is literally asking:

> “Would this bother you?”

Important distinction: mind vs look after

When mind means care for:

> “Can you mind the children?”

= 可以幫忙照看孩子嗎？

This is especially British/Irish.

In broader international English:

> look after the children is often clearer.

Important distinction: mindful vs careful mindful of = consciously aware of and considering something.

careful

= taking precautions to avoid mistakes/danger.

Compare:

> “Be mindful of your audience.”

= 要顧及觀眾。

> “Be careful not to trip.”

= 小心不要絆倒。

They overlap but differ in emphasis.

Important distinction: mindless vs absent-minded

mindless

can mean:

* requiring no thought;

* lacking reason/thought.

absent-minded

= unintentionally distracted/forgetful.

> “mindless work”

= 無需思考的工作

> “an absent-minded professor”

= 心不在焉／健忘的教授

Not interchangeable.

Important distinction: mind vs mindset

mind

= the general mental faculty.

mindset

= a relatively stable pattern of beliefs/attitudes that shapes how you interpret situations.

> “My mind went blank.”

= 我的腦袋一片空白。

> “I developed a more confident mindset.”

= 我建立了更有自信的心態。

Family-extension sweep

For your original passage

> “My heart would race, my mind would go blank”, and I would start imagining the worst.”

The exact meaning is:

mind = 負責思考、記憶、組織語言和產生想法的心智能力

Therefore:

> my mind would go blank

= 「我的腦袋會突然一片空白／我會突然想不起要說甚麼」

This is a very natural description of a stress response during public speaking.

Your sentence contrasts two reactions:

> my heart would race

> = 身體上的緊張反應

> my mind would go blank

> = 思考／記憶上的緊張反應

So the key mapping in your passage is:

mind = 思維／心智

mind goes blank = 因緊張而突然無法正常思考或回想內容

The most important learner contrasts are:

> my mind went blank

> = 我的腦袋一片空白

> it's on my mind

> = 我一直惦記著它

> in my mind

> = 在我腦海／在我看來

> change your mind

> = 改變主意

> make up your mind

> = 下定決心

> keep it in mind

> = 記住／留意它

> it slipped my mind

> = 我一時忘了 > peace of mind

> = 安心 > presence of mind

> = 臨危不亂

> Do you mind?

> = 你介意嗎？ > mind the gap

> = 小心空隙 > mind your own business

> = 別多管閒事 > open-minded

> = 思想開放的 > mindset

> = 心態／思維模式

So mind is far richer than simply:

> mind = 腦袋

and in your original sentence, it specifically refers to your ability to think and recall words temporarily shutting down under pressure.
