Important distinction: comfort vs convenience

Especially useful for products.

comfort

= how physically or emotionally pleasant something feels

> “The headphones provide excellent comfort.”

「耳機佩戴起來很舒適。」

convenience

= how easy something is to use or how much time/effort it saves

> “Wireless charging adds convenience.”

「無線充電增加使用便利性。」

Something can be comfortable but inconvenient, or convenient but uncomfortable.

Important distinction: comfort vs relief

comfort

often means an ongoing state of physical or emotional ease.

relief

emphasizes the reduction or removal of something unpleasant that was already present.

> “The soft chair gave me comfort.”

「柔軟椅子令我很舒服。」

> “Taking off the tight shoes brought immediate relief.”

「脫掉過緊的鞋後，我立即感到如釋重負／不適減輕。」

Important distinction: comfortable vs comforting

Very important.

comfortable

= physically or emotionally at ease

> “The chair is comfortable.”

「椅子坐起來舒服。」

> “I feel comfortable with her.”

「跟她一起我很自在。」

comforting

= causes emotional reassurance

> “Her words were comforting.”

「她的說話很令人安心。」

So:

comfortable → 感到／提供舒適

comforting → 提供情緒安慰

Important distinction: comfortable vs comforting person

> “She is a comfortable person.”

> This is generally not the normal way to mean 「她很會安慰人」.

Instead:

> “She is a comforting presence.”

「她的存在令人安心。」

or:

> “I feel comfortable around her.”

「我在她身邊感到很自在。」

Important distinction: comfort vs luxury

comfort

= absence of discomfort; physical/emotional ease

luxury

= expensive or special enjoyment beyond basic needs

A hotel can be:

comfortable but not luxurious

= 住得很舒服, 但並不豪華。

Important distinction: comfortable vs convenient

comfortable

= pleasant for the body/mind

convenient

= easy, suitable, or saving effort/time

> “This chair is comfortable.”

「這張椅子坐得舒服。」

> “This location is convenient.”

「這個地點很方便。」

Important grammar/countability note: comfort

Usually uncountable when meaning physical/emotional ease:

> “These headphones provide excellent comfort.”

Not normally:

> “an excellent comfort” ❌

Countable when referring to a person/thing that brings reassurance:

> “It was a comfort to hear her voice.”

「聽到她的聲音令人感到安慰。」

Plural comforts

often means pleasant conveniences:

> “the comforts of home”

「家中的各種舒適享受／便利」
