Secondary but established modern technical vocabulary.

Important distinction: add vs increase

add

usually means putting something extra into/onto something.

> “Add sugar.”

「加糖。」

increase

means make the total amount/level larger.

> “Increase the temperature.”

「提高溫度。」

So:

> add five dollars

> = 再加五元

> increase the price by five dollars

> = 把價格提高五元

Related but structurally different.

Important distinction: add vs include

You curated include/count earlier.

add

= introduce something that was not there before.

include

= contain something as part of the whole.

> “Add tomatoes to the salad.”

= 把番茄加入沙律。

> “The salad includes tomatoes.”

= 沙律包含番茄。

Important distinction: add vs attach

add

broad:

put something extra into a whole.

attach

physically/digitally join one item to another.

> add a photo to the report

> = 把照片加入報告

> attach a photo to the email

> = 把照片附加到電郵

Important distinction: add vs contribute

add

can directly increase a quality:

> “The flowers add colour.”

contribute

means help produce part of a result.

> “The flowers contribute to the welcoming atmosphere.”

Both may translate as 「增添 / 促成」, but contribute emphasizes being one factor among several.

Important distinction: add to vs add

add X to Y

= 把 X 加入 Y

> “Add sugar to the tea.”

add to Y

= increase/intensify Y

> “The noise added to my stress.”

= 噪音加重了我的壓力。

Very important structural contrast.

Important distinction: add up vs add up to

add up

1. calculate total
2. make sense

add up to

= total/result in

> “The numbers add up.”

can mean:

「數字對得上 / 說得通。」

> “The numbers add up to 100.”

= 「數字總和是 100。」

Important distinction: addition vs additional

addition

noun:

> an addition to the garden

> = 花園新增的東西

additional

adjective:

> additional plants

> = 額外植物

Do not confuse the word class.

Important distinction: addition vs extension

For buildings:

addition

especially AmE:

= added part of a building.

extension

especially BrE:

= 加建部分

So:

> house addition

> house extension

can refer to similar things regionally.

Important distinction: added value vs value

value

= worth/usefulness.

added value

= extra worth created by a feature, process, service, or improvement.

> basic value

> vs

> value created beyond the basic product.

Important distinction: additive vs addition

addition

= act/result of adding.

additive

= substance that is added, or technical adjective meaning cumulative/additive.

> addition of salt

> = 加鹽這個行為

> food additive

> = 食品添加劑

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:
