Your passage contains:

> “It taught me that confidence does not appear out of nowhere; it grows when you do hard things anyway.”

Here, appear means:

to suddenly come into existence or become present/noticeable.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> confidence does not appear out of nowhere

appear means:

to suddenly become present or seem to come into existence.

The sentence says that confidence is not something that:

* magically arrives;

* suddenly exists without cause;

* appears without effort.

Instead, it develops gradually through experience.

Meaning: To come into existence or become present/noticeable, especially suddenly.

「所有參加者都應在九點到場。」

Practice 70

> “He failed to appear.”

「他沒有到場 / 露面。」

This use sounds more formal than:

> come / arrive.

36. appear to someone (在某人看來) — 在.....看來

A less common but established construction.

Practice 71

> “It appeared to me that she was nervous.”

「在我看來，她似乎很緊張。」

Practice 72

「起初，任務似乎不可能完成。」

appear + evaluative adjective = 根據表面 / 證據形成暫時判斷

40. appear out of thin air (憑空出現) — 突然冒出；彷彿憑空出現

A strong idiomatic expression close to your passage.

Practice 79

> “Confidence does not appear out of thin air.”

「自信不會憑空出現。」

Practice 80

> “The solution didn’t just appear out of thin air.”

「解決方案並不是無緣無故突然冒出來的。」 appear out of thin air = 看似沒有來源、原因或準備地突然出現

Important distinction: appear vs look

This is one of the most important learner contrasts.

often relies especially on visual appearance:

> “She looks nervous.”

= 從她的外表 / 表情看，她很緊張。

appear

is broader and more formal:

> “She appears nervous.”

= 根據整體情況，她似乎很緊張。

*Appear need not be based purely on visual evidence.

Important distinction: appear vs seem

These are very close.

seem

is extremely common and neutral.

often sounds slightly more formal and can suggest:

> based on available evidence/observable signs.

Compare:

> “It seems difficult.”

> “It appears difficult.”

Both:

「看來很困難。」

The second is often a little more formal.

Important distinction: appear vs become

appear

= become visible/present or seem.

become

= actually change into a new state.

Compare:

> “She appeared confident.”

= 她看起來有自信。

> “She became confident.”

= 她真的變得更有自信。

This difference is crucial.

Important distinction: appear = come into existence vs become

In your passage:

> “confidence does not appear out of nowhere”

means:

> confidence does not suddenly show up / come into existence.

But:

> “confidence grows”

describes its gradual actual development.

So the passage deliberately contrasts:

appear suddenly with:

grow gradually.

Important distinction: appear vs emerge

appear

= become visible/present.

emerge

often emphasizes:

- * gradually coming out;
- * becoming known;
- * developing from something less visible.

> “A pattern emerged from the data.”

suggests gradual discovery/development.

Important distinction: appear vs arise

appear

= become visible/present.

is common for:

- * problems;
- * questions;
- * opportunities;
- * situations developing.

> “A problem arose.”

= 問題出現了。

> “A problem appeared.”

possible, but “arose” may sound more natural for a situation developing.

Important distinction: “appear vs show up”

“appear”

= neutral/formal.

“show up”

= informal and often means:

- * arrive;
- * become visible;
- * appear unexpectedly.

> “He appeared at the meeting.”

formal/neutral.

> “He showed up at the meeting.”

more conversational.

Important distinction: “appear vs arrive”

“arrive”

focuses on reaching a place.

focuses on becoming present/visible.

> “He arrived at nine.”

= 九點到達。

> “He finally appeared.”

= 他終於露面了。

Appear may imply that people were waiting/expecting to see him.

Important distinction: appearance = looks vs appearance = showing up

Compare:

> “Her appearance changed.”

= 她的外貌改變了。

versus:

> “Her appearance at the event surprised everyone.”

= 她在活動上的現身 / 出席令大家驚訝。

Same noun, different concept.

Important distinction: appearances vs reality

appearance

= what something seems like from outside.

= what is actually true.

> “Appearances can be misleading.”

= 表象可能令人誤判。

This is why:

> appear ≠ be

Important distinction: make an appearance vs attend attend

= be present at an event.

make an appearance

often suggests:

- * show up briefly;
- * appear publicly;
- * presence itself is noteworthy.

> “She attended the event.”

neutral.

> “She made an appearance at the event.”

suggests her showing up was notable.

Important distinction: appear in vs appear on Collocation matters.

Usually:

> appear in a film/book/article/list > appear on TV/screen/stage/programme/list?

There is overlap, but common patterns include:

- * in a film
- * in a report
- * on television
- * on screen
- * on a list

Choose according to the medium/container metaphor.

Important distinction: appear in court vs go to court

appear in court

= formally attend court as part of legal proceedings.

go to court

can mean:

- * physically go there;
- * start/use legal proceedings.

Appear in court is more specifically procedural.

Important distinction: appear for someone vs represent someone

In legal use:

> a lawyer appears for a client

means:

> formally represents that client in court.

This is a specialist legal construction.

Important distinction: appearance vs presentation

These can be confused for learners.

appearance

= how someone/something looks, or the act of appearing.

presentation

= the act/material of presenting information.

> “Her appearance was professional.”

= 她外表專業。

> “Her presentation was professional.”

= 她的簡報 / 演示很專業。

Very different.

Important distinction: appearance vs impression

appearance

= outward look/observable form.

impression

= mental effect/opinion formed by the observer.

> “His appearance was calm.”

= 外表平靜。

> “He gave the impression of being calm.”

= 他給人平靜的感覺。

Important distinction: disappear vs go away

disappear

= become no longer visible/present.

go away

can mean:

- * physically leave;
- * problem/feeling cease.

> “The image disappeared.”

= 圖像消失。

> “The pain went away.”

= 痛楚消失。

They overlap in abstract contexts but differ in imagery.

Family-extension sweep

The practical appear family is rich in visibility, impression, arrival, publication, performance, and appearance:

- * appear — become visible = 出現
- * appear suddenly = 突然出現
- * appear from/out of nowhere = 憑空出現
- * appear — arise/come into existence = 出現 / 產生
- * appear — become noticeable = 顯現
- * appear — seem = 看來 / 似乎
- * appear + adjective = 看起來.....
- * appear to be = 似乎是.....
- * appear to + verb = 似乎做.....
- * it appears that = 看來.....
- * appear at an event = 到場 / 現身
- * appear in public = 公開露面
- * make an appearance = 露面 / 出席
- * appear in a film/show = 出演
- * appear on TV/radio = 上電視 / 電台亮相
- * appear as + role = 以某身份 / 角色出現
- * appear in a publication = 刊登 / 出版
- * appear on a list/page/screen = 顯示 / 列出
- * appear in court = 出庭
- * appear for someone legally = 代表某人出庭
- * appearance — looks = 外貌
- * appearance — showing up = 出現 / 露面
- * appearance — outward impression = 表象

* for appearances' sake = 為了表面好看
 * keep up appearances = 維持表面形象
 * outward appearance = 外在表象 * disappear = 消失
 * disappearance = 消失 / 失蹤
 * reappear = 再次出現
 * guest appearance = 客串 / 嘉賓亮相
 * appear out of thin air = 憑空出現

The main semantic branches are:

- > become visible / present
- > come into existence / become noticeable
- > seem / give an impression
- > arrive / show up
- > perform / be featured
- > be published / displayed
- > formal/legal attendance

For your original passage

> “It taught me that confidence does not appear out of nowhere; it grows when you do hard things anyway.”

The exact meaning is:

appear = 突然變得存在 / 可感受到；出現

Therefore:

> confidence does not appear out of nowhere

= 「自信不會憑空出現 / 無緣無故突然產生」

The contrast with the second half is important:

> appear out of nowhere

> = suddenly exist with no obvious cause versus:

> grow

> = develop gradually over time

Your sentence therefore says:

> confidence is not instant

but:

> confidence is built gradually through experience and action

So the key passage mapping is:

appear = come into existence / become present

The most important learner contrasts are:

> a message appeared on the screen

> = 螢幕上出現訊息

> a problem appeared

> = 問題出現了 > confidence appeared

> = 自信開始出現 / 產生

> she appears calm

> = 她看來很冷靜

> she appears to understand

> = 她似乎明白 > it appears that...

> = 看來.....

> he appeared at the meeting

> = 他在會議上現身

> she appeared in a film

> = 她出演電影

> the article appeared in a magazine

> = 文章刊登在雜誌上 > his name appears on the list

> = 他的名字在名單上 > appear in court

> = 出庭 > appearance

> = 外貌；出現 / 露面；表象

> disappear

> = 消失 > reappear

> = 再次出現

So appear is much richer than simply:

> appear = 出現

and in your original sentence it specifically means:

“to suddenly come into existence or become present — something confidence does not do without experience and effort.”
