

Word family: away / away from

Base word: away

Part of speech: adverb (副詞) / adjective (形容詞 , 主要出現在固定或體育用法)

Your sentence:

> “Even after a short chat, I often walk away feeling lighter and more awake.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, away means from the place, person, or situation where you currently are; leaving it behind as you move elsewhere.

The speaker means that after the conversation ends, he leaves Mr. Wong and continues on his way while feeling mentally lighter and more alert.

繁體中文：從原本所在的人、地方或情境離開，向另一處移動

中文翻譯：

> “Even after a short chat, I often walk away feeling lighter and more awake.”

「即使只是短短聊幾句，我往往在離開之後也會覺得心情更輕鬆、頭腦更清醒。」

Here:

walk away = 從某人或某個地方走開 / 離開

1. away = to/from another place; not here (位置 / 移動) — 離開；向別處；不在這裡

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: Moving or being at a distance from a particular person, place, or starting point.

Practice 1 — Original

> “I often walk away feeling lighter and more awake.”

「我往往在走開 / 離開之後覺得心情更輕鬆、頭腦更清醒。」

Practice 2

> “She turned and walked away.”

「她轉身走開了。」

Practice 3

> “He lives several kilometres away.”

「他住在幾公里以外。」 away = 離開某個參照點，或位於距離該參照點一段距離的位置

Common:

- * walk away
- * move away
- * far away
- * miles away
- * run away

These retain the broad distance/separation from a reference point concept.

2. away = absent / not at home or usual place (不在場) — 外出；不在；離開原處

Away can describe someone who is not in their normal or expected place.

Practice 4

> “She is away this week.”

「她這個星期不在 / 外出了。」

Practice 5

> “He is away on business.”

「他正在出差 / 因公外出。」 be away = 暫時不在平常所在的家、工作地點或其他固定地方

This is closely related to Meaning 1, but the focus is absence rather than movement.

For database counting, I would usually merge it with #1 under:

> being separated from the usual/reference location

3. away = continuously / repeatedly (持續動作) — 不停地；持續地

This is a genuinely different adverbial use.

Meaning: Continuously or repeatedly doing an action, often for some time.

Practice 6

> “She was typing away at her computer.”

「她一直在電腦前不停地打字。」

Practice 7

> “The children chatted away happily.”

「孩子們開心地不停聊天。」 verb + away = 某個動作持續或反覆進行一段時間

Common:

- * work away
- * type away
- * chat away
- * hammer away

The idea here is not physical distance.

4. away = gradually disappearing/removing (逐漸消失 / 去除) — 漸漸消失；消除

In some constructions, away indicates that something is progressively removed, reduced, or disappears.

Practice 8

> “The pain slowly faded away.”

「疼痛慢慢消退了。」

Practice 9

> “The rain washed the dirt away.”

「雨水把污垢沖走了。」 away = 某物逐漸離開原來位置、被移除，或完全消失

This is a figurative development of physical separation.

5. away = stored/put aside (存起 / 收起) — 收好；存起來

In some verb combinations, away means putting something into storage or a proper place.

Practice 10

> “Please put the books away.”

「請把書收好。」

Practice 11

> “She packed the winter clothes away.”

「她把冬季衣物收起來存放。」 away = 把物件移離眼前或日常使用位置，放到指定的收納地方

This is normally a fixed construction with verbs such as:

* put away

* pack away

* store away

So I would treat this as a construction rather than a separate core sense of bare away.

6. away = into the distance / no longer present (消失於遠處) — 遠去；離去

Practice 12

> “The car drove away.”

「那輛車開走了。」

Practice 13

> “The sound gradually died away.”

「聲音逐漸遠去 / 消失。」 away = 向遠處移動，最後不再留在原處或不再能被感知

This is very closely connected to Meaning 1 and would normally be merged with it.

7. away = immediately / without hesitation in fixed expressions (立即開始 / 儘管做) — 儘管；馬上

A few conversational expressions use away in a special way.

Practice 14

> “Can I ask you something?”

> “Ask away.”

「我可以問你一件事嗎？」

「儘管問吧。」

Practice 15

> “If you have questions, fire away.”

「如果有問題，儘管問 / 直接問吧。」

verb + away = 表示可以自由地、毫不猶豫地開始或繼續某個行動

This is idiomatic and should be treated as a fixed-expression extension.

8. away = sports: playing at opponent's venue (體育) — 作客的；客場的

As an adjective/adverb in sports, away means playing at the other team's ground rather than your own.

Practice 16

> “They have an away game this weekend.”

「他們這個週末有一場作客比賽。」

Practice 17

> “The team won 2–0 away.”

「球隊在客場以二比零勝出。」 away = 在對手主場進行比賽，而不是在自己的主場

This is a distinct domain-specific sense.

Important distinction: away vs far

away

focuses on separation from a reference point.

> “The station is five kilometres away.”

far focuses on large distance.

> “The station is far from here.”

So:

away = 離某處有一段距離

far = 距離很遠

Important distinction: away vs absent

away

often means temporarily elsewhere.

> “She is away this week.”

absent

means not present where expected, and is more formal.

> “She was absent from class.”

So away is more conversational and location-based.

Important distinction: away vs off

They overlap in some movement expressions but are not generally interchangeable.

away

emphasizes increasing distance from a point.

off

often emphasizes separation, departure, or removal from a surface/place.

> “He walked away.”

= 他走開了。

> “He took his shoes off.”

= 他脫下鞋子。

Different core functions.

Important distinction: walk away vs leave

walk away

creates an image of physically moving away on foot and can also imply disengaging from a situation.

leave is broader:

> depart from a place, person, job, relationship, etc.

In your sentence:

> “walk away feeling lighter”

is vivid because it describes both the physical departure and the emotional state afterward.

Family-extension note

Away has little derivational morphology. Its richness comes mainly from constructions and fixed expressions:

- * walk away
- * far away
- * be away
- * work away
- * fade away
- * put away
- * ask away
- * away game

Under the Golden Manual, these should be grouped by genuine underlying semantic concepts rather than each being counted as a separate lexical meaning.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
away — distance/separation	從某個人、地方或參照點離開，或位於距離該點一段距離的位置
be away — absent	暫時不在平常或預期所在的地方；屬於「離開參照地點」的同一核心概念
verb + away — continuous action	某個動作持續或反覆進行一段時間
away — removal/disappearance	某物逐漸被移走、減弱、消失或離開原來狀態
away — sports	在對手主場而不是自己的主場進行比賽；作客 / 客場
ask/fire away	表示可以毫不猶豫地開始或繼續某個行動；屬於固定口語用法

For your original sentence

> “Even after a short chat, I often walk away feeling lighter and more awake.”

The exact meaning is:

away = 從原本所在的人、地方或情境離開，向另一處移動

So:

> walk away

= 走開 / 離開

and:

> walk away feeling lighter

= 離開時感覺心情更輕鬆

For your database, I would count 4 genuinely useful core meanings for away:

1. distance/separation from a place or reference point
2. continuous/repeated action — work away, chat away
3. removal/disappearance — fade away, wash away
4. sports — away/客場

I would merge be away into #1, and treat put away, ask away, fire away, and similar constructions as fixed or verb-dependent extensions rather than inflate the core count.