Important distinction: beauty vs beautiful

beauty

noun:

> “the beauty of the painting”

= 畫作的美

beautiful

adjective:

> “a beautiful painting”

= 美麗的畫作

So:

> beauty = 美 / 美感

> beautiful = 美麗的

Important distinction: beauty vs attractiveness

attractiveness

= degree of being appealing/attractive.

beauty

= stronger aesthetic idea of being beautiful.

A product can be attractive because of price or usefulness, not necessarily because of beauty.

Important distinction: beauty vs charm

You curated magic earlier, and charm is nearby conceptually.

beauty

= aesthetic pleasing quality.

charm

= pleasant personal or stylistic attractiveness.

A place can be:

* beautiful because of scenery;

* charming because of atmosphere/character.

Not identical.

Important distinction: beauty vs elegance

beauty

broad aesthetic appeal.

elegance

= graceful, refined simplicity/style.

A design can be elegant without being conventionally beautiful.

Important distinction: beauty vs prettiness

beauty

broader/deeper and often more serious.

prettiness

usually light, pleasing attractiveness.

> beauty of Monet's work

> = Monet 作品的美感

> prettiness of a decoration

> = 裝飾的漂亮感

Important distinction: beauty vs beautiful in your passage

Your source:

> "that gentle beauty"

is an abstract noun:

> 柔和的美感

If rewritten:

then:

> 這幅畫很美。

Important distinction: beauty — appearance vs advantage

This is one of the strongest polysemy contrasts.

Appearance:

> “the beauty of the lake”

= 湖泊的美景 / 美感

Advantage:

> “The beauty of the system is its simplicity.”

= 這個系統的妙處是簡單。

The second has nothing to do with physical appearance.

Important distinction: the beauty of X vs the advantage of X

the beauty of X

often praises an elegant, especially appealing feature.

the advantage of X

neutral practical benefit.

> “The advantage is lower cost.”

= 優點是成本較低。

> “The beauty is that it needs no maintenance.”

= 妙處是完全不用保養。

Beauty sounds more appreciative/elegant.

Important distinction: beautiful vs pretty

beautiful

stronger, broader, more serious.

pretty

often lighter/cuter/pleasant-looking.

> beautiful painting

> = 很美的畫作

> pretty flowers

> = 漂亮可愛的花

Not absolute, but useful learner contrast.

Important distinction: beautiful vs handsome

often used for women, places, objects, art, experiences, etc.

handsome

often used for men and sometimes substantial/impressive objects/buildings.

But usage varies by context.

Important distinction: beautiful vs attractive

beautiful

= aesthetically very pleasing.

attractive

> attractive price

> = 吸引人的價格

but not:

> beautiful price normally

Important distinction: beautiful vs picturesque

broad aesthetic praise.

> beautiful person

> picturesque village

> picturesque person  normally

Important distinction: beautifully vs very very simply intensifies an adjective/adverb.

beautifully

can mean “in an elegant/excellent way”.

> “The system works beautifully.”

does not mean:

> “The system works in a visually beautiful way.”

It means:

> 運作得非常順利 / 出色。

Excellent MCQ contrast.

Important distinction: beautify vs decorate

decorate

beautify

= make more beautiful overall.

You can beautify a place by:

- * planting trees
- * cleaning it
- * improving lighting

without necessarily decorating it.

Important distinction: beauty vs beauty industry

Abstract:

> beauty

> = 美 / 美感

Industry modifier:

> beauty industry

> = 美容 / 美妝產業

Here beauty refers to appearance care, not philosophical/aesthetic beauty.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

- * beauty — aesthetic quality = 美 / 美感
- * beauty — physical attractiveness = 美貌
- * beauty — natural scenery = 自然之美 / 美景
- * a beauty — person = 美人
