Important distinction: choose vs select

choose

very general and everyday:

= 選擇

select more formal and often implies careful selection according to criteria.

> choose a frame

> = 選一個畫框

> select candidates for interview

> = 按準則挑選面試候選人

So select can sound more systematic.

Important distinction: choose vs pick pick more informal/conversational.

choose

neutral and slightly broader.

> “Pick a colour.”

> = 隨便 / 直接選個顏色。

> “Choose a colour.”

> = 選一個顏色。

Both are natural, but pick often sounds more casual.

Important distinction: choose vs decide

choose

= select among alternatives.

decide

= reach a conclusion about what to do/believe.

> “I chose the blue frame.”

= 我選了藍色畫框。

> “I decided to buy the blue frame.”

= 我決定買藍色畫框。

So:

> choose = 選哪個

> decide = 作出決定

Important distinction: choose vs prefer prefer

= like one option more.

choose

= actually select it.

> “I prefer the wooden frame.”

= 我較喜歡木框。

> “I chose the metal frame.”

= 我最後選了金屬框。

Preference does not guarantee final choice.

Important distinction: choose vs opt opt

= make a deliberate choice, often between courses of action.

Usually:

> opt for + noun

> opt to + verb

Choose is much broader and more everyday.

Important distinction: choose between vs choose from choose between emphasizes alternatives being compared.

> choose between A and B choose from emphasizes the pool/range.

> choose from ten designs

Useful grammar distinction.

Important distinction: choose to do vs happen to do

choose to do

= deliberate decision.

happen to do

= occurs by chance/circumstance.

> “She chose to stay.”

= 她有意決定留下。

> “She happened to stay.”

= 她碰巧留下 / 當時剛好留下。

Very different agency.

Important distinction: choose not to vs fail to choose not to = deliberate non-action.

fail to

= did not do it, possibly because of inability, neglect, or mistake.

> “He chose not to answer.”

= 他有意不回答。

> “He failed to answer.”

= 他沒有回答 / 未能回答。

Important nuance.

Important distinction: choice vs decision

choice emphasizes options and selection.

decision emphasizes the conclusion reached.

> “It was a difficult choice.”

= 選項之間難以取捨。

> “It was a difficult decision.”

= 作出最終決定很困難。

They often overlap.

Important distinction: choice vs option

option

= one available possibility.

choice

can mean:

* the act of choosing

* selected result

* range of options

> “You have three options.”

= 有三個選項。

> “You have a choice.”

= 你有選擇權 / 你可以選。

Very important.

Important distinction: choice vs preference

preference

= what you like more.

choice

= what you actually choose or the freedom to choose.

You can have a preference but make another choice because of cost or practicality.

Important distinction: first choice vs first option first choice

usually:

the person/thing you most prefer.

> “This frame is my first choice.”

= 這是我的首選。

first option often:

the first possibility in a list/plan.

Not necessarily the favourite.

Important distinction: choice — act vs range

Act:

> “Making the choice was hard.”

= 作選擇很難。

Range:

> “There is a wide choice.”

= 可選範圍很廣。

Same noun, different meaning.

Important distinction: choice — noun vs adjective

Noun:

> “That was a good choice.”

= 那是個好選擇。

Adjective:

> “choice ingredients”

= 精選 / 上等食材。

The adjective use is secondary but genuinely distinct.

Important distinction: chosen vs choice

chosen

= selected.

choice

= selection, selected option, or options available.

> chosen design

> = 被選中的設計

> good choice

> = 好選擇

Important grammar note: choose + noun / choose to + verb

Natural:

> choose the painting
> choose to buy the painting

Not normally:

> choose buying the painting ❌

Use:

> choose to buy

Important grammar note: choose someone as / choose someone for choose someone as + role

> “They chose her as chair.”

= 選她擔任主席。

choose someone for + role/task

> “They chose her for the project.”

= 選她參與這個項目。
