Key contrasts

38. communication vs conversation

conversation

= a spoken exchange between people

對話；交談

communication

= the much broader process of conveying and exchanging meaning

溝通；交流

Communication can happen through:

- * conversation
- * writing
- * gestures
- * images
- * technology
- * silence in some contexts

So every conversation involves communication, but not all communication is conversation.

39. communication vs contact

contact

= connection or interaction with someone

聯絡；接觸

communication

= actual exchange or transmission of information/meaning

溝通；傳達

> 我們的*溝通品質改善了*。

40. communication vs interaction

interaction

= reciprocal action or behavior between people or things

互動

communication

= exchange of information or meaning

溝通

Interaction may involve communication, but it can also involve actions without a clear message.

41. communication vs information

information

= facts or knowledge being conveyed

資訊；資料

communication

= the process by which information or meaning is shared

溝通；傳達

Compare:

> The report contains useful information.

> 報告包含有用的*資訊*。

> The team needs better communication.

> 團隊需要更好的*溝通*。

42. communication vs expression

expression

= showing or conveying thoughts, emotions, or ideas

表達

communication

= successful sharing between sender and receiver

溝通

You can express something without successfully communicating it.

This distinction is especially important in the passage.

Countability

43. communication — usually uncountable for the process

When meaning the general process:

- * good communication
- * effective communication
- * communication between teams

Not usually:

- * a good communication ✗

Example

Good communication is essential.

良好的溝通非常重要。

44. a communication — countable formal message

When meaning an individual official message:

- * a communication
- * several communications

Example

We received a communication from the office.

我們收到辦公室的一份正式通知。

This countability distinction is useful.
