documentary source = 作為研究 / 歷史證據的文件紀錄來源

Important distinction: documentary vs document

documentary

usually:

> factual film/programme

document

usually:

> written/digital record

> documentary about Monet

> = 關於 Monet 的紀錄片

> document about the exhibition

> = 關於展覽的文件

Very different despite the shared root.

Important distinction: documentary — noun vs adjective

Noun:

> “We watched a documentary.”

= 我們看了一部紀錄片。

Adjective:

> “documentary photography”

= 紀實攝影

> “documentary evidence”

= 文件 / 文獻證據

So documentary does not always mean a film.

Important distinction: document vs record

document

as noun:

usually a written/digital information object.

record

can be any stored evidence/information, including:

- * written
- * audio
- * database entry
- * historical fact

As verbs:

> document an event

> = 系統地記錄並保存事件

> record an event

> = 記錄事件，範圍更廣，也可錄音 / 錄影

Document often sounds more systematic/evidential.

Important distinction: document vs file

document

= content-bearing written/digital item.

file

= stored computer object/container.

A Word document is a file, but not every file is a document.

Examples:

- * image file
- * audio file
- * document file

Important distinction: document vs certificate

document

broad:
any formal written record.

certificate specific:

official document certifying a fact/status/qualification.

So:

> certificate = 一種 document

but:

> not every document is a certificate.

Important distinction: document vs documentation

document

= one individual file/document.

documentation

= an organized body/set of documents, or the process of recording.

> “Read the document.”

= 閱讀那一份文件。

> “Read the documentation.”

= 閱讀整套說明資料 / 文檔。

This is one of the most important family contrasts.

Important distinction: documentation vs evidence

documentation

= documents supplied or created as records.

evidence

= anything that helps prove a claim.

Documentation can be evidence, but evidence can also be:

- * physical objects
- * testimony
- * photographs
- * measurements

So:

> documentation = 文件紀錄

> evidence = 證據

Important distinction: documentation vs manual

documentation

broad technical information:

- * API reference
- * setup guide
- * examples
- * architecture notes

manual

usually a structured user/instruction guide.

A manual may be one part of the documentation.

Important distinction: document vs document something

Noun:

> “I opened the document.”

= 我打開文件。

Verb:

> “I documented the process.”

= 我記錄了流程。

Same spelling, different part of speech and meaning.

Important distinction: documented vs proven

documented

= reliable records/evidence exist.

proven

= established as true or effective to a stronger evidential standard.

> documented case

> = 有紀錄的個案

does not automatically mean:

> every interpretation has been proven.

Very important academic distinction.

Important distinction: documented vs recorded recorded

= captured/stored.

documented

= systematically recorded, often with supporting detail/evidence.

> “The concert was recorded.”

= 演唱會被錄音 / 錄影。

> “The restoration was documented.”

= 修復過程被系統地記錄。

Important distinction: documentary vs fictional film

documentary

= non-fiction; presents real-world subjects.

fiction film

= primarily invented story/characters.

However, documentaries can still involve:

- * editing
- * narrative choices
- * interpretation

So “documentary” means non-fiction form, not “perfectly neutral reality”.

Important distinction: documentary vs news report

news report

usually:

- * short
- * tied to current events
- * focused on timely reporting

documentary

usually:

- * longer
- * more developed
- * explores a subject in depth

Both can be factual, but format and purpose differ.

Important distinction: documentary vs biopic

documentary

uses factual/non-fiction presentation.

biopic

is a dramatized fictional film based on a real person's life.

So:

> Monet documentary

> = Monet 紀錄片

> Monet biopic

> = 以演員演繹 Monet 生平的傳記電影

Important distinction: documentary photography vs ordinary photography

documentary photography

aims to record real people/events/social conditions with informational or historical value.

photography

is the broader medium.

So all documentary photography is photography, but not all photography is documentary.

Important distinction: documentation — technical vs administrative

Technical:

> API documentation

> = API 技術文檔

Administrative:

> supporting documentation

> = 證明文件 / 佐證資料

Same noun, different domain.

Family-extension sweep
