MCQ-ready definition:

re-edit = 對已經編輯過的內容再次進行修改或剪輯

Important distinction 1: edit vs revise

edit

often focuses on improving wording, organization, correctness, formatting, or presentation.

revise can mean rework content more substantially; in BrE it also means 溫習 for an exam.

> edit an essay

修改作文

> revise an essay

重新修改 / 重寫部分內容

> revise for an exam

溫習考試

They overlap, but revise can imply broader reconsideration.

Important distinction 2: edit vs proofread

Very important.

edit

may change:

- * wording
- * structure
- * length
- * style
- * content

proofread

mainly checks final surface errors:

- * spelling
- * punctuation
- * typos
- * formatting

> edit first

> proofread at the end

So proofreading is usually narrower.

Important distinction 3: edit vs rewrite

edit

modify existing material.

rewrite

write a substantial part again.

> I edited the paragraph.

我修改了一段。

> I rewrote the paragraph.

我把那段重新寫了一遍。

Important distinction 4: edit vs correct

correct

fix something wrong.

edit

broader; a sentence may be correct but still need editing for clarity or style.

So:

> editing ≠ only correcting errors

Important distinction 5: edit vs format

edit

changes content or presentation broadly.

format

changes layout/appearance:

- * font
- * spacing
- * headings

Editing slides may include formatting, but formatting is only one part of editing.

Important distinction 6: edit vs update

edit

change existing content.

update

make information current.

> edit the report

修改報告

> update the figures

更新數據

An update usually involves editing, but not every edit is an update.

Important distinction 7: edit text vs edit video

Text

> edit a report

修改 / 編輯報告

Media

> edit a video

剪輯影片

Same English verb, different natural Chinese translations.

Important distinction 8: edit a photo vs manipulate a photo

edit a photo

neutral broad modification.

manipulate a photo

often suggests more substantial alteration and can carry a negative implication if used deceptively.

So ordinary cropping or brightness adjustment is simply editing.

Important distinction 9: edit out vs delete delete remove something, especially from digital content.

edit out

remove something specifically as part of an editorial or media-production process.

> delete a file

刪除檔案

> edit out a scene

剪掉場景

Important distinction 10: edit down vs shorten

shorten

general make shorter.

edit down

shorten specifically by selectively removing content.

> edit the interview down to five minutes

透過剪輯把訪問縮至五分鐘

Important distinction 11: editor = person vs editor = software

Person

> newspaper editor

報紙編輯

Software

> text editor

文字編輯器

Same noun, radically different referent.

Important distinction 12: editor vs author

author/writer

creates the original content.

editor

reviews, selects, organizes, or improves it.

One person can do both roles, but they are conceptually different.

Important distinction 13: editor vs publisher

editor

works on content.

publisher

is responsible for producing/distributing the publication or is the publishing organization.

Important distinction 14: editorial adjective vs editorial noun

Adjective

> editorial decision

編採決定

Noun

> an editorial

社論

Context determines the meaning.

Important distinction 15: editable vs edited

editable

can be changed.

edited

has already been changed.

> editable document

可編輯文件

> edited document

已修改文件

Family-extension note

Edit has several major modern branches:

1. modify written/document content

- * edit an essay

- * edit slides

- * edit a report

2. professional publishing

- * edit a magazine

- * editor

- * copy-edit

3. film/video

- * edit a film

- * video editing

- * edit out

4. image/digital content

- * edit a photo
- * editable file

5. noun: individual modification/version

- * make edits
- * final edit

6. software

- * text editor
- * photo editor

7. editorial family

- * editorial decision
- * editorial = 社論

The underlying semantic core is:

take existing material and deliberately change or arrange it to produce a better or final version

Master comparison

For your original sentence

> I was editing the final slides, checking the order of speakers, and trying to make sure that everything was under control.

Here:

editing = 在簡報前檢查並修改最後版本的投影片

This could involve:

- * changing wording,
- * correcting errors,
- * rearranging content,
- * adjusting layout,
- * trimming unnecessary material.

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 我當時正在修改最後的投影片、確認每個人的發言順序，並且努力確保一切都在掌握之中。

For this context, 「修改」 sounds slightly more natural than formal 「編輯」, because the speaker is personally fine-tuning presentation slides rather than acting as a professional editor.
