

Absolutely — end is a very strong Tier 1 target because your passage uses it in:

> “her influence did not end when the classes ended.”

Here, end means to stop / come to a conclusion. But the word also has major noun meanings such as the final part of something, the physical farthest point, a purpose/result, someone’s side of an arrangement, and several fixed expressions such as in the end, at the end, end up, put an end to, and make ends meet.

Word family: end / ends / ended / ending / endless

Base word: end

Third-person singular: ends

Past tense / past participle: ended

-ing form / noun: ending

Related forms: endless, endlessly

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞) / related adjective and adverb forms (相關形容詞及副詞)

Useful constructions/extensions: end a class, class ends, at the end, in the end, by the end, end of the road, end of a table, end result, end goal, end up, put an end to, come to an end, make ends meet, ending, endless

Your passage contains:

> “Her influence did not end when the classes ended.”

Here, end means:

to stop continuing; to come to a conclusion.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> her influence did not end

the idea is:

> the classes finished

> but

> her impact continued.

And in:

> when the classes ended

ended means:

> the classes came to a conclusion.

So the same word appears twice with the same broad core concept:

something stops continuing.

Meaning: To stop happening or existing; to come to a conclusion.

繁體中文：  結束；停止持續；告一段落

中文翻譯： **

> “Her influence did not end when the classes ended.”

「她的影響並沒有隨著課堂結束而停止。」

This is the exact passage meaning.

「最終結果比預期更好。」

Practice 29

> “Different methods can lead to the same end result.”

「不同方法可以帶來相同的最終結果。」 end result = 一連串行動 / 過程最後得到的結果

15. end = aim / purpose (目的) — 目的 ; 目標

A more formal abstract sense.

Practice 30

> “Education should be a means to an end, not an end in itself.”

「教育應該是達成目的的手段，而不一定是目的本身。」

Practice 31

> “They used different methods to achieve the same end.”

「他們用不同方法達到同一個目的。」 end = 最終希望達成的目的 / 目標

Formal but important.

16. means to an end (達成目的的手段) — 手段 ; 工具

A major idiom.

Practice 32

> “Money is sometimes seen as a means to an end.”

「金錢有時被視為達成某個目的的手段。」

Practice 33

> “The job was simply a means to an end.”

「那份工作只是一個達成其他目標的手段。」 means to an end = 本身不是最終目的，而是幫助達成其他目標的方法

17. an end in itself (本身就是目的) — 本身具有價值的目的

Practice 43

> “He ended up staying late.”

「他最後還是留到很晚。」

end up doing = 最後結果是進行了某項行動，可能與原計劃不同

22. end up + adjective/noun (最後變得 / 成為) — 結果變成

Practice 44

> “The situation ended up worse than before.”

「情況最後變得比以前更差。」

Practice 45

> “He ended up a teacher.”

「他最後成為了老師。」

end up = 最後到達某種狀態 / 身份

The noun construction is possible but end up becoming is often more natural.

23. end up in/at + place (最後來到某處) — 結果到了

Practice 46

> “We took the wrong road and ended up in another town.”

「我們走錯路，最後去了另一個小鎮。」

Practice 47

> “How did we end up here?”

「我們怎麼會最後來到這裡？」 end up somewhere = 經過一連串事件後最終到了某地

end in X = 某個過程最後產生 X 這個結果 / 狀態

26. end in failure/success/disaster (以失敗 / 成功 / 災難告終) — 最後結果

Practice 52

> “The plan ended in failure.”

「計劃最後以失敗告終。」

Practice 53

> “Their efforts ended in success.”

「他們的努力最後取得成功。」

end in + result noun = 某過程最後導致指定結果

27. end with vs end in (最後是..... vs 導致.....) — 重要區別

end with

often names:

> the final item/event.

> “The lesson ended with a quiz.”

end in

often names:

> the result/outcome.

> “The dispute ended in violence.”

Not an absolute rule, but very useful.

28. end = death / destruction (生命終結 ; 毀滅) — 終結 ; 死亡

A stronger contextual extension.

Practice 54

> “The accident ended his career.”

「那宗意外終結了他的職業生涯。」

Practice 55

> “The disease eventually ended his life.”

「疾病最後奪去了他的生命 / 終結了他的生命。」 end someone's life/career = 令其生命 / 事業無法繼續

This is still based on “stop continuing,” but semantically important.

29. the end = death/destruction (末日 / 終結) — 結束 ; 毀滅

Practice 56

> “They thought it was the end.”

「他們以為一切都完了。」

Practice 57

> “That mistake was not the end of his career.”

「那個錯誤並沒有令他的事業就此完結。」

the end = 某件重要事情徹底停止存在 / 繼續

Context determines intensity.

30. end = final stage of life/career/period (末期) — 晚期 ; 末段

Practice 58

> “Near the end of his career, he became a teacher.”

「在他職業生涯後期，他成為了老師。」

A common sports/location use.

Practice 60

> “The teams changed ends.”

「兩隊交換了場地兩端。」

Practice 61

> “They scored at the other end.”

「他們在球場的另一端得分。」

end = 球場、場地等其中一端

32. end = telephone/device side (通訊另一端) — 電話另一邊

Practice 62

> “There was silence at the other end of the line.”

「電話線的另一端一片沉默。」

Practice 63

> “Someone laughed at the other end.”

「電話另一頭有人笑了。」

the other end = 通訊連線另一方的人 / 位置

33. end of the line (終點 / 走到盡頭) — 終點 ; 無法再繼續

A major idiom.

Practice 82

> “This is the end point of the route.”

「這裡是路線的*終點*。」

Practice 83

> “The system sends data to an endpoint.”

「系統把數據傳送到一個*端點*。」 *endpoint = 路程 / 流程的終點 ; 在技術領域亦指通訊或服務端點***

Technical meaning depends on field.

Important distinction: end vs finish

These overlap strongly.

end

can be intransitive or transitive:

> “They ended the class.”

finish

often emphasizes:

> completing an activity/task.

> “I finished my homework.”

You would not normally say:

> “I ended my homework.”

unless you mean you stopped it, not necessarily completed it.

So:

finish = complete

end = stop/come to a conclusion

Important distinction: end vs stop

stop

= cease doing/happening.

end

= come to the final point/conclusion.

A class can:

> stop temporarily

without:

> ending.

So end often sounds more final.

Important distinction: end vs complete

complete

= finish all required parts.

end

= simply stop/finish.

A meeting may end without every topic being completed.

Important distinction: end vs close

end

= broad cessation/conclusion.

close

often refers to formally bringing something to a conclusion:

- > close a meeting
- > close a case
- > close an account.

They overlap in some contexts, but close often has a procedural sense.

Important distinction: at the end vs in the end

This is crucial.

at the end

= at the final point of a time/place/thing.

- > “At the end of the lesson...”

= 在課堂結束時。

in the end

= finally, after everything happened.

- > “In the end, I agreed.”

= 最終我同意了。

Location/time position vs final outcome.

Important distinction: by the end vs at the end

at the end

= exactly around the final point.

by the end

= any time up to and including the final point.

> “Finish it by the end of the day.”

= 最遲今天結束前完成。

Important distinction: end with vs end in

end with

= final item/event is X.

end in

= final result/outcome is X.

> “The argument ended in silence.”

A useful collocational distinction.

Important distinction: end up vs end

end

= stop.

> “The meeting ended.”

end up

= eventually arrive at a result/state.

> “We ended up talking for hours.”

End up is about outcome, not cessation.

Important distinction: end up vs become become

= change into a state/identity.

end up

= eventually find yourself in that state, often after an unexpected process.

> “She became a teacher.”

neutral transition.

> “She ended up becoming a teacher.”

emphasizes eventual outcome, perhaps not originally planned.

Important distinction: the end vs ending

the end

= final point/part generally.

ending

= especially the way a story, film, event, relationship, etc. concludes.

> “I liked the ending.”

more natural for a film/story.

Important distinction: end result vs result result

= outcome.

end result

= emphasizes the final outcome after the entire process.

Often end is emphatic rather than adding a totally separate concept.

Important distinction: end = purpose vs goal

end

= purpose/objective; formal.

= ordinary explicit objective.

> “a means to an end”

is fixed and common.

But in everyday conversation:

> goal

is usually more natural.

Important distinction: means to an end vs end in itself

means to an end

= useful because it achieves something else.

end in itself

= valuable as the final purpose itself.

Important conceptual pair.

Important distinction: your end vs your side

your end

= your side of a process/system/communication.

your side

= broader and more everyday.

> “Everything is fine at my end.”

common in workplace/technical communication.

Important distinction: endless vs infinite

infinite

= literally without limit, often mathematical/formal.

endless

= may literally or figuratively seem not to end.

> endless meetings

does not mean mathematically infinite meetings.

Important distinction: endless vs long

long

= extended length/duration.

endless

= so long/repetitive that it feels like there is no end.

Stronger and more expressive.

Important distinction: ending vs end

ending

often focuses on:

> the final sequence/content.

end

can mean:

> the final point itself.

> “The ending was sad.”

= the conclusion content was sad.

= at the final point.

Important distinction: end = physical point vs end = temporal conclusion

Compare:

> “the end of the rope”

= 繩的一端。

> “the end of the lesson”

= 課堂結束 / 末段。

Same spatial metaphor extends into time.

Important distinction: make ends meet vs end

The idiom:

> make ends meet

means:

> have enough money for basic expenses.

It cannot be understood by translating end as “結尾.”

The phrase must be learned as a whole.

Family-extension sweep

The practical end family is exceptionally rich across cessation, final position, outcomes, purpose, eventual results, and idioms:

- * end — stop/finish = 結束
- * end something = 終止某事
- * come to an end = 告終
- * bring to an end = 使結束
- * put an end to = 終止 / 制止
- * the end — final part = 結尾 / 末尾
- * at the end of = 在……末尾
- * by the end of = 到……結束時為止
- * in the end = 最終
- * end — physical point = 一端 / 盡頭
- * end result = 最終結果
- * end — purpose = 目的
- * means to an end = 達成目的的手段
- * end in itself = 本身就是目的
- * at your end = 你那邊 / 你方
- * end up = 最後變成 / 結果
- * end with = 以……作結
- * end in = 以某結果告終
- * end someone's career/life = 終結事業 / 生命
- * end of the line = 終點 / 走到盡頭
- * dead end = 死路 / 無出路
- * loose end = 未完成細節 / 手尾
- * at a loose end = 閒著無事可做
- * endless = 無盡 / 沒完沒了
- * endlessly = 不停 / 無休止地
- * ending — story/event = 結局 / 結尾
- * ending — grammar = 詞尾
- * endpoint = 終點 / 端點

The main semantic branches are:

> stop / come to a conclusion

> final part or point

> physical extremity

> final result > purpose or objective

> one side of a process/system

> eventual outcome through “end up”

plus several highly productive idioms.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
end — verb	某件事停止繼續並到達結束點

endpoint	路程、流程或技術系統中的終點 / 端點

For your original passage

> “Strictly speaking, I was only her student for two years, but her influence did not *end when the classes ended***.”

Both occurrences share the core idea:

> stop continuing / come to a conclusion

But they refer to two different things:

the classes ended

= the formal lessons finished.

her influence did not end

= the effect she had on you continued.

That contrast is exactly what makes the sentence effective:

> formal relationship ends

> but

> personal influence continues

So:

> class ended

> = 課堂結束

but:

> influence did not end

> = 影響沒有停止 / 沒有隨之結束

The most important learner contrasts are:

> The class ended.

> = 課堂結束了。

> They ended the discussion.

> = 他們結束了討論。

> come to an end

> = 告終

> put an end to the problem

> = 終止問題

> at the end of the class

> = 在課堂結束時

> by the end of the week

> = 到星期末為止

> in the end

> = 最終 / 到頭來

> the end of the road

> = 路的盡頭

> end result

> = 最終結果

> a means to an end

> = 達成目的的手段

> at my end

> = 我這邊 > end up staying

> = 最後還是留下

> end with a question

> = 以問題作結

> end in failure

> = 以失敗告終

> dead end

> = 死路 / 無出路

> tie up loose ends

> = 把未完成的事情收尾 > endless discussion

> = 沒完沒了的討論

> the ending of the story

> = 故事結局

So end is far richer than simply:

> end = 結束

and in your original passage it specifically means:

“the formal classes came to a conclusion, but the teacher’s lasting influence continued beyond that ending.”
