Important distinction 1: experience countable vs uncountable

This is the biggest learner trap.

Countable an experience

one event you went through.

> It was a strange experience.

那是一段奇怪的經歷。

Uncountable experience

knowledge/skill accumulated over time.

> She has a lot of experience.

她很有經驗。

Not:

> She has many experiences ❌

> if you mean professional skill.

Important distinction 2: experience vs event

event

something that happens.

experience

what someone personally goes through and feels.

Kevin's apology is an event.

The whole misunderstanding and its emotional effect form the narrator's experience.

Important distinction 3: experience vs memory

experience

what actually happened to you.

memory

your mental recollection of it afterward.

> the experience was painful

> 那次經歷很難受

> the memory still hurts

> 那段回憶仍令人難受

Important distinction 4: experience vs knowledge

knowledge

what you know.

experience

what you have learned through doing/living through something.

You can have theoretical knowledge without practical experience.

Important distinction 5: experience vs skill

experience

exposure and practice accumulated over time.

skill

ability to perform something well.

Experience often builds skill, but they are not identical.

Important distinction 6: experience vs expertise

experience

time and exposure.

expertise

high-level specialized knowledge and skill.

Someone may have years of experience without being an expert.

Important distinction 7: experience in vs experience of Useful tendency:

experience in

often field/area:

> experience in marketing

市場推廣經驗 experience of

often personal encounter:

> experience of discrimination

被歧視的經歷

There is overlap, but this distinction is very useful.

Important distinction 8: experience as noun vs experience as verb

Noun

> It was a difficult experience.

那是一段困難的經歷。

Verb

> We experienced difficulties.

我們遇到了困難。

Important distinction 9: experience vs undergo

experience

broad and natural for feelings/events.

undergo more formal and often used for processes or procedures.

> experience stress

承受壓力

> undergo surgery

接受手術

Important distinction 10: experienced vs experienced something

Same spelling family, different grammar.

experienced teacher

adjective = 有經驗的老師

experienced difficulty

verb = 曾經遇到困難

Context matters.

Important distinction 11: experienced vs mature

experienced

has done something many times.

mature

emotionally/developmentally grown and sensible.

Experience can contribute to maturity, but they are not synonyms.

Important distinction 12: experience vs practice

practice

repeatedly doing something to improve.

experience

broader exposure and learning from real situations.

Practice can create experience.

Important distinction 13: user experience vs user interface

user experience / UX overall feeling and ease of using a product.

user interface / UI

actual screens, buttons, menus, and interaction surface.

Good UI contributes to good UX, but they are not the same.

Important distinction 14: customer experience vs customer service

customer service

specific support/help given to customers.

customer experience

whole journey:

- * advertising
- * purchase
- * product use
- * support
- * follow-up

Much broader.

Important distinction 15: work experience has two senses

General

professional experience:

> five years of work experience

五年工作經驗

BrE education context

short placement:

> do work experience at a company

到公司做短期職場體驗

Context matters.

Family-extension note

Experience has several major modern branches:

1. countable personal event

- * a difficult experience
- * personal experience

2. uncountable accumulated knowledge

- * years of experience
- * gain experience

3. verb: undergo/encounter

- * experience stress
- * experience difficulty

4. verb: actively participate

- * experience local culture

5. person with accumulated skill

- * experienced
- * inexperienced

6. learning method

- * experiential learning

7. product/service perception

- * user experience
- * customer experience

8. commercial/leisure activity

- * cultural experience
- * dining experience

For your passage, the exact branch is:

experience = the complete personal event the narrator went through

For your original sentence

> In fact, the whole experience taught me something quite important...

Here:

experience = 從被錯怪、感到難堪，到對方認錯和真誠道歉的整段親身經歷

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 其實，整件經歷也讓我學到一個很重要的道理。

The key learner distinction is:

> an experience = 一次經歷

> experience = 經驗 / 閱歷

In this passage, it is clearly the countable personal-event sense.
