Important distinction 1: fill vs full fill usually verb:

= make something full.

adjective:

= containing as much as possible.

> Fill the bottle.

把瓶子裝滿。

> The bottle is full.

瓶子是滿的。

Important distinction 2: fill vs fill up

fill

does not always emphasize complete fullness.

fill up often emphasizes becoming completely or nearly full.

> Fill the glass with water.

把水倒進杯子。

> Fill the glass up.

把杯子倒滿。

Important distinction 3: fill with vs fill by

Standard pattern:

> fill X with Y not usually:

> fill X by Y

So:

> fill the scrapbook with photos is the correct structure.

Important distinction 4: be filled with vs be full of

These are very close.

be filled with

often emphasizes what has been put into something or what now occupies it.

be full of describes the resulting state more directly.

> The album was filled with photos.

相簿裏放滿照片。

> The album was full of photos.

相簿裏有很多照片。

In your passage, filled with fits the handcrafted/process feel nicely.

Important distinction 5: fill a room vs fill up a room

fill a room

occupy or spread throughout the room.

> Music filled the room.

音樂充滿房間。

fill up a room

often suggests people/objects gradually occupy all available space.

> Guests filled up the room.

客人把房間擠滿。

Important distinction 6: fill a gap vs close a gap

fill a gap

provide what is missing.

close a gap

reduce/eliminate difference or distance between two sides.

> fill a gap in services

填補服務缺口

> close the income gap

縮小收入差距

Important distinction 7: fill a role vs take a role fill a role ensure someone occupies the position.

take a role

a person accepts/assumes the role.

> The company filled the role.

公司找到人填補職位。

> She took the role.

她接下了這個角色。

Important distinction 8: fill in vs fill out

For forms:

fill in especially common in BrE.

fill out especially common in AmE.

Both mean completing the form.

But fill in has additional senses:

* fill in a blank

* fill someone in

* fill in for someone

Important distinction 9: fill someone in vs tell someone tell someone very broad.

fill someone in specifically give missing background/details.

> Tell me what happened.

告訴我發生了甚麼。

> Fill me in on what happened.

把我之前不知道的詳情告訴我。

Important distinction 10: fill in for someone vs replace someone fill in for temporary substitution.

replace can be permanent.

> She filled in for him for one day.

她代替了他一天。

> She replaced him permanently.

她永久接替了他。

Important distinction 11: filling noun vs filling adjective

Noun

> sandwich filling

三文治餡料

Adjective

> a filling meal

很飽肚的一餐

Same form, different function.

Important distinction 12: filler vs filling filling material inside something.

filler

material/content specifically used to fill empty space or add bulk.

They overlap physically, but filler often emphasizes its functional role as “something used to fill.”

Family-extension note

Fill has a very strong semantic core:

make empty space become occupied

From that literal idea, English develops:

1. physical containers

- * fill a bottle
- * filled with photos

2. spaces

- * fill a room
- * fill the air

3. emotions

- * fill someone with joy

4. gaps/needs

- * fill a gap
- * fill a need

5. roles/jobs

- * fill a vacancy

6. commercial/administrative completion

- * fill an order
- * fill a prescription
- * fill in a form

7. information

- * fill someone in

8. temporary substitution

- * fill in for someone

9. family nouns

- * filling
- * filler
- * refill

So the metaphor remains highly coherent:

empty / missing → occupied / supplied / completed

For your original sentence

> It was a scrapbook filled with printed photos, short captions, little notes, and a few tickets and receipts from family outings we had shared over the years.

Here:

filled with = 裏面放滿了 / 裝滿了

The scrapbook did not necessarily have literally every millimetre occupied. Filled with naturally means it contained many meaningful items.

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 那是一本剪貼簿，裏面*放滿了*沖印照片、簡短文字說明、小紙條，以及一些票根和收據。

For this passage, 「放滿了」 sounds especially natural because the contents are physical keepsakes arranged inside a scrapbook.
