

Absolutely — frame is a very strong polysemy target because your passage uses it here:

> “...once it was properly framed.”

Here framed means placed inside a surrounding structure, usually wood or metal, so the artwork can be protected and displayed. But frame also has major meanings involving supporting structures, body build, image borders, perspective/context, constructing something, falsely accusing someone, video frames, and grammatical/mental framing.

Important distinction: frame vs border

frame

often a separate supporting structure around something.

the edge/boundary itself, or decorative line around an area.

> picture frame

> = 畫框

> decorative border around a page

> = 頁面邊框 / 花邊

A frame can include a border, but they are not identical.

Important distinction: frame vs structure

frame

often means the supporting skeleton.

structure

broader:

the whole arrangement of parts.

> steel frame

> = 鋼架

> building structure

> = 建築整體結構

Important distinction: frame vs skeleton

frame

supporting framework of an object/building/body.

skeleton

literal bones, or figuratively the bare basic outline.

> bicycle frame

> = 單車車架

> human skeleton

> = 人體骨骼

They overlap metaphorically but are not interchangeable.

Important distinction: frame vs shape

frame

= supporting structure/body build.

shape

= external form/outline.

> small frame

> = 骨架較小

> round shape

> = 圓形外形

Important distinction: frame vs screen

In video:

frame

= one individual image in the sequence.

screen

= physical display area/device.

> freeze a frame

> = 定格一個影格

> look at the screen

> = 看螢幕

Important distinction: frame vs shot

In film/photography:

frame

can mean the visible composition area or one individual video image.

shot

= a continuous recorded camera take or one photograph depending on context.

So:

> one second of video contains many frames.

A shot normally contains many frames.

Important distinction: frame vs perspective

perspective

= point of view.

frame

= the conceptual boundaries and presentation structure through which the issue is understood.

> perspective = 觀點

> frame = 框架 / 設定問題方式

A frame can shape which perspectives seem relevant.

Important distinction: frame vs phrase

When discussing language:

phrase

= choose particular words.

frame

= organize the whole idea/question in a particular conceptual way.

> “How would you phrase the question?”

= 你會怎樣措辭？

> “How should we frame the question?”

= 我們應從甚麼角度 / 方式設定這個問題？

Important distinction: frame vs accuse

accuse

= claim that someone did something wrong.

frame

= deliberately make an innocent person appear guilty, usually through false evidence.

So:

> accuse someone

> = 指控某人

> frame someone

> = 栽贓某人

Much stronger and more specific.

Important distinction: framed artwork vs framed person

Same form, completely different meanings:

Art:

> “The painting was framed.”

= 畫作被裱框。

Crime:

> “He was framed.”

= 他被栽贓。

Excellent MCQ contrast.

Important distinction: frame — physical vs conceptual

Physical:

> steel frame

> = 鋼架

Conceptual:

> theoretical frame

> = 理論框架

Same underlying idea:

> a structure that gives shape and boundaries.

This is why the abstract use developed naturally.

Important distinction: time frame vs deadline

time frame

= broader period during which something happens/should happen.

deadline

= exact final time by which something must be completed.

> time frame: September–November

> = 九月至十一月的時間範圍

> deadline: 30 November

> = 11 月 30 日最後期限

Important distinction: frame of reference vs frame of mind

frame of reference

= system/perspective used to interpret something.

frame of mind

= current psychological state.

> scientific frame of reference

> = 科學參照框架

> calm frame of mind

> = 平靜心境

Very different.

Important distinction: framing vs frame rate

Both derive from frame, but belong to completely different domains.

framing

= issue presentation / visual arrangement

frame rate

= number of video frames per second

Excellent family-level MCQ contrast.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

* frame — picture/photo border = 畫框 / 相框

* frame — verb: artwork = 裝框 / 裱框
 * frame — supporting structure = 框架 / 骨架
 * door/window frame = 門框 / 窗框 * frame — body build = 體格 / 骨架
 * frame — glasses = 鏡框
 * frame — video image = 影格 / 幀
 * frame rate = 幀率 / 影格率
 * frame — camera composition = 畫面 / 取景範圍
 * frame — conceptual structure = 理解框架
 * frame — present an issue = 界定 / 以某方式表述
 * frame a question/argument = 組織 / 擬定 / 表述
 * frame someone = 栽贓 / 誣陷
 * frame — construction verb = 搭建骨架
 * be framed by = 被.....環繞 / 襯托
 * time frame = 時間範圍 / 時限
 * frame of reference = 參照系 / 理解框架
 * frame of mind = 心境 / 心態
 * framing — presentation = 框架設定 / 表述方式
 * framing effect = 框架效應
