Meaning in this passage

> Being with him feels like opening a window and letting fresh air into a stuffy room.

Here, fresh means:

clean, cool, pleasant, and not stale — 清新的；新鮮的

So:

fresh air = 清新空氣；新鮮空氣

中文翻譯：

和他相處，就像打開一扇窗，讓清新的空氣進入一個悶焗的房間。

The larger sentence is metaphorical: Leo makes life feel less stale and repetitive.

MCQ-ready definition:

freshness = 新鮮、清新或具有新意的品質

Important distinction 1: fresh vs new

These overlap, but are not identical.

new something has recently been made, bought, created, etc.

> a new phone

新手機

fresh

often emphasizes:

- * recently produced
- * not stale
- * clean
- * newly available
- * renewed

> fresh bread

新鮮麵包

A phone can be new, but normally not fresh.

Important distinction 2: fresh vs clean

clean

free from dirt.

fresh

can mean clean, but usually adds a sense of:

- * pleasantness
- * coolness
- * newness
- * lack of staleness

> clean air

乾淨空氣

> fresh air

清新空氣

The overlap is real, but fresh is more sensory.

Important distinction 3: fresh vs cool

cool air

emphasizes temperature.

fresh air

emphasizes clean, moving, pleasant air.

Fresh air can be cool, but does not have to be.

Important distinction 4: fresh vs stale

A major opposite pair.

fresh

recent, pleasant, not old.

stale

old, no longer fresh, especially food/air.

> fresh bread ↔ stale bread

> 新鮮麵包 ↔ 不新鮮 / 變硬的麵包

> fresh air ↔ stale air

> 清新空氣 ↔ 悶濁空氣

This contrast is central to your passage metaphor.

Important distinction 5: fresh vs frozen

fresh food

not preserved by freezing, typically recently produced.

frozen food

kept at freezing temperature for storage.

Neither is automatically "better"; the words describe condition/process.

Important distinction 6: fresh water vs clean water

fresh water

= non-salty water

clean water

= water free from harmful dirt/contamination

Sea water can be clean but not fresh water.

Fresh water can theoretically be polluted and therefore not clean.

Important distinction 7: fresh idea vs original idea

fresh idea

new, lively, different from existing thinking.

original idea

not copied; independently created.

An idea can be fresh without being completely original.

Important distinction 8: fresh perspective vs new perspective

Very close.

Fresh perspective often carries an additional positive nuance:

a new perspective that helps because it is not stuck in old assumptions

That makes it especially close to your passage theme.

Important distinction 9: fresh start vs restart

fresh start

figurative/emotional:

= start again without carrying old problems forward.

restart

more mechanical/neutral:

= start again after stopping.

> make a fresh start

重新做人 / 重新開始

> restart the computer

重新啟動電腦

Important distinction 10: fresh from vs fresh out of

fresh from X

just finished/left X:

> fresh from university

剛大學畢業

fresh out of X

have just run out of X:

> fresh out of milk

牛奶剛好用完

Very different.

Important distinction 11: fresh vs refreshed

fresh

can describe current energetic state:

> I feel fresh.

我覺得很精神。

refreshed

emphasizes that energy has been restored after tiredness/rest:

> I feel refreshed after sleeping.

睡過後我覺得精神恢復了。

Important distinction 12: refreshing vs refreshed

refreshing

causes the effect:

> a refreshing shower

令人精神一振的淋浴

refreshed

receives the effect:

> I feel refreshed.

我感到精神恢復了。

Same pattern as:

* boring / bored

* exciting / excited

Important distinction 13: fresh air literal vs metaphorical freshness

In your sentence, fresh air is literal inside the image:

> open a window → let fresh air in

But the full comparison is metaphorical:

> Leo brings freshness into adult life.

So we should not redefine fresh air itself as "new ideas." The metaphor arises from the sentence as a whole.

Family-extension note

Fresh is a strong polysemy word because one broad idea—

newly produced, not stale, clean, renewed, or recently occurring —extends across several domains:

1. food

- * fresh bread
- * fresh fruit

2. air / environment

- * fresh air
- * fresh breeze

3. recentness

- * fresh evidence
- * fresh wound
- * fresh snow

4. newness in thought

- * fresh idea
- * fresh approach
- * fresh perspective

5. renewal

- * fresh start
- * feel fresh
- * refreshed

6. special lexicalized sense

- * fresh water = 淡水

The important conservative split is that fresh bread, fresh evidence, and fresh ideas all preserve a broad concept of recent/new and not stale, while fresh water is a more specialized established sense.

Master comparison

Form / expression	Traditional Chinese	Core idea
-----	-----	-----
fresh air	清新空氣	clean/not stale air
fresh food	新鮮食物	recently produced

refreshing idea/attitude	耳目一新的	pleasantly different refreshment	提神；恢復精神	restoration
refreshments	茶點	drinks/snacks
freshness	新鮮；清新；新鮮感	quality of freshness

For your original sentence

> Being with him feels like opening a window and letting fresh air into a stuffy room.

Here:

fresh = 清新的；不悶濁的；令人舒服的

So:

fresh air = 清新空氣

The contrast is:

stuffy air → stale, closed, uncomfortable fresh air → clean, moving, revitalizing

And metaphorically:

adult routine → stale and repetitive

Leo's presence → fresh, lively, imaginative

So the natural Traditional Chinese is:

> 和他相處，就像打開一扇窗，讓*清新的空氣*進入一個悶焗的房間。

The deeper idea is that Leo brings freshness into the speaker's everyday life.
