這個詞有時會出現在心理學相關討論中。

MCQ-ready definition:

sexual frustration = 因性欲或親密需要長期未能滿足而產生的挫折感

Important distinction 1: frustrated vs frustrating

Very important.

frustrated

describes the person feeling the emotion.

> I am frustrated.

我感到很挫折。

frustrating

describes the thing causing the emotion.

> The problem is frustrating.

這個問題很令人挫折。

So:

person = frustrated

cause = frustrating

Important distinction 2: frustrated vs angry

frustrated

usually caused by:

- * being blocked,
- * lack of progress,
- * repeated failure,
- * inability to achieve something.

angry

broader strong displeasure.

You can be frustrated without being truly angry.

In your passage, Kevin's frustration then develops into harsh behaviour.

Important distinction 3: frustrated vs annoyed

annoyed

irritated by something unpleasant.

frustrated

especially annoyed because you cannot achieve, fix, or progress with something.

> annoyed by loud music

被嘈吵音樂惹煩

> frustrated by slow progress

因進度太慢而挫折

Important distinction 4: frustrated vs disappointed

disappointed

結果沒有符合希望。

frustrated

something is blocking progress or preventing success.

> disappointed with my grade

對成績失望

> frustrated because I can't improve it

因為怎樣也提升不了而挫折

Important distinction 5: frustrated vs upset

upset

broad emotional unhappiness/distress.

frustrated

specific emotional response to obstruction.

In the passage:

* Kevin is frustrated because he thinks progress is blocked.

* the speaker is upset because Kevin publicly blamed them unfairly.

Excellent contrast.

Important distinction 6: frustrated vs stressed

stressed

under pressure.

frustrated

unhappy because progress is blocked.

Stress can cause frustration, but they are not the same.

Your passage shows exactly that:

- > stress had got the better of him
- > → he became frustrated
- > → he blamed someone too quickly

Important distinction 7: frustrated vs irritable

frustrated

there is usually a specific obstacle or failure.

irritable

generally easy to annoy.

Kevin may be irritable because of stress, but he becomes frustrated because he thinks the group is being delayed.

Important distinction 8: frustrate = make someone feel frustrated vs frustrate = prevent success

This is the central polysemy split.

Emotional

> The delay frustrated me.

延誤令我很挫折。

Obstruction

> The delay frustrated our plans.

延誤阻礙了我們的計劃。

Same verb, but:

* first → affects person's emotion

* second → prevents plan/effort from succeeding

Important distinction 9: frustrate vs prevent prevent simply stop something from happening.

frustrate

often implies active obstruction or making success impossible.

> The lock prevented entry.

門鎖阻止進入。

> Security frustrated the attempt to break in.

保安措施挫敗了闖入企圖。

Frustrate is more formal in this obstruction sense.

Important distinction 10: frustrate vs hinder

hinder

make progress more difficult or slower.

frustrate

may imply the plan or effort ultimately fails.

> Traffic hindered our progress.

交通阻礙進度。

> The storm frustrated our attempt to reach the summit.

暴風令我們登頂的企圖失敗。

Important distinction 11: frustration vs irritation

frustration

comes from being blocked or unable to achieve something.

irritation

comes from being annoyed by something unpleasant.

> frustration with slow progress

對進度緩慢感到挫折

> irritation at constant noise

被持續噪音弄得煩躁

Important distinction 12: frustration vs disappointment

frustration

focuses on obstacle/process.

disappointment

focuses on undesirable result.

They can occur together.

Important distinction 13: out of frustration vs in frustration

Both are common.

in frustration

describes emotional state while doing something.

> He sighed in frustration.

他挫折地嘆氣。

out of frustration

emphasizes frustration as the reason/motive.

> He shouted out of frustration.

他因挫折而大叫。

Important distinction 14: frustrated with vs frustrated by frustrated with often:

* person

* system

* ongoing situation

> frustrated with my teammate

對隊友很無奈 frustrated by

often emphasizes cause:

> frustrated by the delay

被延誤弄得很挫折

There is overlap.

Important distinction 15: frustratingly

frustratingly + adjective/adverb

means something happens in a way that causes frustration.

> The instructions were frustratingly vague.

說明*模糊得令人煩躁*。

Practice

> Progress was frustratingly slow.

進度慢得令人挫折。

MCQ-ready definition:

frustratingly = 以令人感到挫折或不耐煩的方式

Family-extension note

Frustrate has two especially important semantic branches:

1. emotional frustration

- * frustrate someone
- * feel frustrated
- * frustrating situation
- * frustration

Core idea:

something blocks what you want, causing emotional distress

2. prevent success

- * frustrate an attempt
- * frustrate a plan
- * frustrate someone's efforts

Core idea:

something blocks the actual goal itself

These two senses are closely related:

> block goal → cause frustration

That semantic relationship explains why the same word covers both.

For your original sentence

> At one point, he suddenly got frustrated and said, in front of the whole group, that I had not uploaded my part on time and that I was holding everyone back.

Here:

*got frustrated = 因為他以為進度受到阻礙，所以突然變得煩躁、惱火和挫折

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 當時他突然變得很*煩躁 / 因進度受阻而感到挫折，然後當着全組人的面指責我。

For this passage, *「煩躁」 is the smoothest Chinese in the running translation, while *「因事情不順而產生挫折感」 gives the most precise dictionary-style meaning.
