

Word family: grant / grants / granted / granting

Base word: grant

Third-person singular: grants

Past tense: granted

Past participle: granted

 -ing form: granting

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞)

Useful constructions/extensions: grant permission, grant a request, grant someone access, grant someone a right, grant that..., granted that..., take something for granted, take someone for granted, grant money, research grant, government grant

Your passage contains:

> “As she gets older, I try not to take her presence for granted, because I know that one day these visits will become memories...”

Here, take someone/something for granted means:

to stop fully appreciating someone or something because you assume they will always be available, present, or unchanged.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> take her presence for granted

you know your grandmother will not always be there.

So you try not to behave as though:

- * seeing her every week is guaranteed forever;
- * her presence is something automatic;
- * there will always be another chance to visit;
- * you do not need to appreciate the time you have with her now.

Meaning: To fail to appreciate someone or something properly because you assume they will always be there or available.

繁體中文: 因為把某人 / 某事視為理所當然、認為會一直存在，而沒有充分珍惜或感激

中文翻譯: **

> “I try not to take her presence for granted.”

「我提醒自己不要把她仍然陪在身邊這件事視為理所當然，而要好好珍惜。」

So:

take someone for granted = 把某人的付出 / 存在視為理所當然，不懂得珍惜

This is the exact passage meaning.

1. take something for granted (把某事視為理所當然) — 不懂珍惜；理所當然化

This is the exact construction used in your passage.

Meaning: To assume something will always exist or continue, so you stop appreciating its value.

Practice 1 — Original

> “I try not to take her presence for granted.”

「我盡量不把她的陪伴*視為理所當然*。」

Practice 2

> “People often take good health for granted until they become ill.”

「人們常常把健康*視為理所當然*，直到生病才懂得珍惜。」

Practice 3

> “Don’t take your free time for granted.”

「不要把自己的空閒時間*視為理所當然*。」

take something for granted = 因認為某事會一直存在，而忽略它真正的價值

2. take someone for granted (把某人的付出 / 存在視為理所當然) — 不珍惜某人

A very important interpersonal use.

Practice 4

> “He realized that he had been taking his family for granted.”

「他意識到自己一直把家人的付出視為理所當然。」

Practice 5

> “She felt that her partner was taking her for granted.”

「她覺得伴侶把她的付出當成理所當然。」

take someone for granted = 習慣某人的存在 / 幫助後，不再充分感激、珍惜或尊重對方

This is especially close to your passage.

3. take it for granted that... (想當然地認為.....) — 理所當然地假設

A related but slightly different pattern.

Practice 6

> “I took it for granted that she would come.”

「我想當然地以為她會來。」

Practice 7

> “We cannot take it for granted that the plan will succeed.”

「我們不能想當然地認為這個計劃一定會成功。」

take it for granted that... = 沒有充分證據或思考，就直接假設某件事一定是真的 / 會發生

This differs slightly from:

> taking a person for granted which often emphasizes lack of appreciation.

4. grant = formally give or allow something (正式給予 / 准予) — 授予；批准

Now we move to the ordinary verb grant.

Meaning: To formally give someone something they have requested, earned, or been officially allowed to have.

Practice 8

> “The university granted her permission to delay the exam.”

「大學*批准*她延遲考試。」

Practice 9

> “The court granted the request.”

「法院*批准了這項請求*。」

grant = 正式 / 有權力地給予、批准某項權利、要求、許可或待遇

5. grant permission (批准 / 准許) — 給予許可

Practice 10

> “The manager granted permission for the event.”

「經理*批准了*舉辦活動。」

Practice 11

> “Permission was granted to enter the building.”

「進入大樓的*許可已獲批准*。」

grant permission = 正式准許某人做某件事

More formal than:

> give permission.

6. grant a request (批准請求) — 准予 ; 答應

Practice 12

> “The judge granted his request.”

「法官*批准了他的請求*。」

Practice 13

> “Her request for extra time was granted.”

「她延長時間的要求*獲得批准*。」

grant a request = 有權力的人 / 機構同意正式請求

7. grant someone access (准予進入 / 使用權) — 授予存取權 ; 准許使用

A major modern administrative/technology use.

Practice 14

> “The administrator granted me access to the files.”

「管理員*授予我存取檔案的權限*。」

Practice 15

> “Only managers are granted access to the system.”

「只有經理獲*准許存取這個系統*。」

grant access = 正式給某人進入、查看或使用某地方 / 系統 / 資料的權限

8. grant someone a right/privilege (授予權利 / 特權) — 授予

Practice 16

> “The agreement grants workers certain rights.”

「協議*賦予員工某些權利*。」

Practice 17

> “Membership grants you access to additional services.”

「會員資格讓你享有額外服務的使用權。」

grant someone a right/privilege = 正式給予某人法律、制度或身份上的權利 / 待遇

9. grant = give something requested (答應給予) — 准予 ; 給予

A broader formal use.

Practice 18

> “She was granted more time.”

「她獲*准予更多時間*。」

Practice 19

> “The prisoner was granted an interview.”

「囚犯獲*准許接受一次會面*。」 grant = 某有權力者正式同意給予某人所要求 / 允許的東西

10. grant = admit something is true (承認某點) — 承認 ; 姑且承認

A major separate verb sense.

Meaning: To admit that a point, statement, or argument is true, often before making a different argument.

Practice 20

> “I grant that the task is difficult.”

「我*承認*這項任務很困難。」

Practice 21

> “He granted that she had a point.”

「他*承認*她的說法有道理。」

grant that... = 承認某件事為真 , 即使之後仍可能提出不同觀點

This is much more formal than:

> admit.

11. granted (即使如此 / 姑且承認) — 誠然 ; 的確

A common discourse marker.

Practice 22

> “Granted, the plan is expensive, but it may still be worthwhile.”

「誠然，這個計劃很昂貴，但仍可能值得。」

Practice 23

> “Granted, she made a mistake, but the reaction was too harsh.”

「的確，她犯了錯，但大家的反應太嚴厲了。」 granted = 承認前面的事實成立，再補充、限制或轉折另一觀點

This is formal-to-neutral written/spoken English.

12. granted that... (姑且承認.....) — 即使承認 ; 假定

Practice 24

> “Granted that the evidence is incomplete, the conclusion is still reasonable.”

「即使承認證據並不完整，這個結論仍然合理。」

Practice 25

> “Granted that he was tired, his behaviour was still unacceptable.”

「即使承認他當時很累，他的行為仍然不能接受。」 granted that... = 承認某個前提成立，然後說明主要結論仍然不變

13. grant = noun: money given for a purpose (補助金 / 撥款) — 資助 ; 補助金

A major separate noun sense.

Meaning: Money given by an organization, government, university, etc. for a particular purpose, usually without being repaid like a loan.

Practice 26

> “She received a research grant.”

「她獲得了一筆研究資助。」

Practice 27

> “The organization provides grants to small charities.”

「這個機構向小型慈善團體提供補助金。」

grant = 由政府、學校、基金會等為特定用途提供的資助款項

14. research grant (研究資助) — 研究經費 ; 研究補助

Practice 28

> “The team received a research grant for the project.”

「團隊為這個項目獲得了一筆研究經費。」

Practice 29

> “She applied for a research grant.”

「她申請了一筆研究資助。」 research grant = 為進行研究項目而提供的正式資金

15. government grant (政府補助) — 政府資助 ; 政府撥款

Practice 30

> “The business received a government grant.”

「這家公司獲得了一筆政府補助。」

Practice 31

> “The project depends partly on government grants.”

「這個項目部分依靠政府撥款。」 government grant = 政府為特定項目、企業、個人或機構提供的資助

16. student grant (學生助學金) — 助學金

A common education use in some regions.

Practice 32

> “She received a student grant to help with living costs.”

「她獲得了一筆學生助學金以支付生活費。」

Practice 33

> “The grant covered part of his tuition.”

「這筆助學金支付了部分學費。」

student grant = 為學生教育 / 生活費用提供、通常不用像貸款一樣償還的資助

Regional terminology varies.

17. grant = official transfer/giving of rights/property (正式授予) — 授予 ; 給予

A legal/formal extension.

Practice 34

> “The licence grants the user the right to use the software.”

「許可證授予使用者使用軟件的權利。」

Practice 35

> “The document grants authority to the committee.”

「文件賦予委員會權力。」

grant = 透過正式文件、法律或制度賦予權利、權限或利益

18. granted = officially given/approved (獲准 / 獲授予) — 已批准 ; 已給予

The ordinary past participle.

Practice 36

> “Her application was granted.”

「她的申請獲批准。」

Practice 37

> “They were granted permission to stay.”

「他們獲准留下。」

be granted = 某項要求、權利、許可等正式獲得批准 / 給予

Do not confuse this with:

> take for granted.

19. grant = concede a point in argument (讓步承認) — 承認某一點

A debate/argument subtype of sense 10.

Practice 38

> “I’ll grant you that.”

「這一點我承認你說得對。」

Practice 39

> “I grant you that the first option is cheaper.”

「我承認第一個選擇比較便宜。」

I grant you that... = 在討論中承認對方某一點成立，但不代表完全同意其整體立場

20. I'll grant you that (這點我承認) — 這一點我同意

A useful fixed expression.

Practice 40

> “He can be difficult, but he works hard—I'll grant you that.”

「他可能很難相處，但他的確很努力——這一點我承認。」

Practice 41

> “The design is attractive, I'll grant you that.”

「這個設計確實很吸引，這點我同意。」

I'll grant you that = 承認對方提出的一個有限論點成立

Important distinction: take for granted vs be granted

This is the most important family contrast for your passage.

take something for granted

= 把某事視為理所當然

> “I took her support for granted.”

be granted something

= 被正式給予 / 批准某事

> “I was granted permission.”

These meanings are completely different.

Important distinction: take someone for granted vs take it for granted that... **

Person:

> “Don’t take your family for granted.”

= 不要不懂珍惜家人。

Focus:

> appreciation.

Clause:

> “Don’t take it for granted that they will help.”

= 不要想當然地認為他們一定會幫忙。

Focus:

> assumption.

The underlying idea is similar:

> assuming something without questioning it,

but the natural Chinese meaning changes.

Important distinction: take for granted vs assume assume = believe something is true without full proof.

take for granted

often means:

> assume it so automatically that you do not question or appreciate it.

Compare:

> “I assumed she would come.”

neutral factual assumption.

> “I took it for granted that she would come.”

stronger sense of unquestioned expectation.

Important distinction: take someone for granted vs neglect

take someone for granted

= fail to appreciate someone because their presence/help feels automatic.

neglect someone

= fail to give someone proper care or attention.

A person can take someone for granted without completely neglecting them.

Important distinction: take for granted vs appreciate

These are close opposites in your passage.

take someone for granted

= fail to value them enough.

appreciate someone

= recognize and value their worth/presence.

Your passage says:

> grandmother is getting older

therefore:

> do not assume her presence will always continue

> → appreciate the time now.

Important distinction: grant vs give give

= very broad everyday verb.

grant

= usually more formal and often involves:

- * authority;
- * permission;
- * rights;
- * requests;
- * official approval.

> give permission

everyday.

> grant permission

formal/official.

Important distinction: grant vs allow allow = permit someone to do something.

grant

= formally give permission/right/request.

Compare:

> "They allowed us to enter."

ordinary.

> "They granted us permission to enter."

more formal and institutional.

Important distinction: grant vs approve approve a request/application

= formally decide it is acceptable.

grant a request

= approve it and give what was requested.

So:

> approve focuses on the decision.

> grant

focuses more on officially giving the requested thing/right.

Important distinction: grant vs award

These overlap in formal giving.

grant

= give/allow officially.

award

= give something because of achievement, competition, merit, or formal decision.

> award a prize

very natural.

> grant permission

very natural.

A scholarship may be:

> awarded or:

> granted

depending on emphasis.

Important distinction: grant vs provide provide

= make something available.

grant

= formally authorize/give.

> provide access can mean technically make access available.

> grant access means authorize the person to have access.

Important in technology/admin English.

Important distinction: grant access vs give access

Both are natural.

give access

= everyday/general.

grant access

= formal/system/administrative authorization.

For software permissions:

> grant access

is especially common.

Important distinction: grant = admit vs admit

admit

= acknowledge that something is true.

grant

in argument:

= concede that a point is true, often temporarily or partially.

> “I admit I was wrong.”

personal acknowledgment.

> “I grant that the proposal has advantages.”

formal argumentative concession.

Important distinction: granted vs however

granted

= first acknowledge a point.

however

= introduce contrast.

Often they work together conceptually:

> “Granted, it is expensive. However, it is reliable.”

Granted concedes.

However contrasts.

Important distinction: granted vs admittedly

These are close.

granted

= yes, I accept this point, but...

admittedly

= it must be admitted that...

Both commonly introduce concession.

Granted can sound slightly more conversational/debating.

Important distinction: grant noun vs loan

grant

= money normally provided for a specified purpose and generally not repaid.

loan

= money borrowed and normally repaid.

This is crucial.

> research grant

≠ research loan.

Important distinction: grant vs scholarship

grant

= broad category of financial funding.

scholarship

= educational financial support, often linked to merit, need, talent, or criteria.

A scholarship can function similarly to a grant, but the terms are not interchangeable in every system.

Important distinction: grant vs subsidy

grant

= a sum of money formally provided for a purpose.

subsidy

= financial support intended to reduce costs or support an industry/activity.

A government may provide either, but the policy function can differ.

Important distinction: grant vs funding funding

= general money available for an activity/project.

grant

= a particular formal award of money.

So:

> a grant is a type/source of funding.

Important distinction: granted permission vs permission granted

Both mean the same basic thing.

Active:

> "The manager granted us permission."

Passive:

> “We were granted permission.”

Noun/passive-style notice:

> “Permission granted.”

= 許可已批准。

Different grammatical framing, same core formal-giving sense.

Important distinction: granted = given vs granted = admittedly

Compare:

> “She was granted access.”

= 她獲授予存取權。 versus:

> “Granted, the process is slow.”

= 誠然，流程很慢。

Same spelling, different grammatical functions.

Important distinction: grant that... vs take it for granted that...

These can look confusing.

grant that X

= 承認 X 是真的。

take it for granted that X

= 未經質疑便假定 X 是真的。

Almost opposite discourse attitudes:

> grant = consciously concede > take for granted = assume automatically.

Important distinction: granted right vs natural right

granted right

= right formally given by an authority/document/system.

natural/inherent right

= right considered to belong to someone independently of a particular grant.

Useful legal conceptual distinction.

Family-extension sweep

The practical grant family has four especially important branches:

- * take something for granted = 把某事視為理所當然 / 不珍惜
- * take someone for granted = 把某人的存在 / 付出當成理所當然
- * take it for granted that... = 想當然地假設.....
- * grant permission = 正式批准 / 准許
- * grant a request = 批准請求
- * grant someone access = 授予存取 / 進入權限
- * grant rights/privileges = 授予權利 / 特權
- * be granted something = 獲正式批准 / 授予
- * grant that... = 承認某一點為真
- * I'll grant you that = 這一點我承認
- * granted = 誠然 / 的確
- * granted that... = 即使承認 / 姑且承認.....
- * a grant = 補助金 / 撥款
- * research grant = 研究資助
- * government grant = 政府補助
- * student grant = 學生助學金

The main semantic branches are:

> formally give / allow > concede or admit a point

> financial funding and the important lexicalized expression:

> take for granted = assume automatically / fail to appreciate

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
take something for granted	因認為某事會一直存在 / 繼續，而沒有充分珍惜或感激
take someone for granted	習慣某人的陪伴 / 付出後，把它視為理所當然而缺乏珍惜
take it for granted that...	沒有充分證據或思考，便直接假設某事一定為真 / 會發生
grant — formally give	由有權力的人 / 機構正式給予、批准某項權利、許可或待遇
grant permission	正式准許某人做某件事
grant a request	有權力的人 / 機構正式同意某項請求
grant access	正式授予進入、查看或使用某地方 / 系統 / 資料的權限
grant a right/privilege	透過制度、法律或身份正式賦予某人權利 / 待遇
be granted	某項要求、許可、權利等正式獲得批准 / 給予
grant that...	在討論中承認某項說法 / 事實成立
I'll grant you that	承認對方某一個有限論點說得對
granted	誠然 / 的確；先承認一點，再提出轉折或限制
granted that...	即使承認某前提成立，主要結論仍然成立
grant — noun	政府、學校、基金會等為指定用途提供、通常不用償還的資助款項
research grant	為研究項目提供的正式研究經費
government grant	政府為特定活動、企業或個人提供的補助 / 撥款
student grant	為學生學習 / 生活費提供的助學資助

For your original passage

> “As she gets older, I try not to take her presence for granted, because I know that one day these visits will become memories...”

The exact meaning is:

take someone/something for granted = fail to appreciate someone/something because you assume it will always be there

Therefore:

> take her presence for granted

= 「把她仍然陪在身邊這件事視為理所當然，而沒有好好珍惜」

This is especially important because the next part explains why:

> “one day these visits will become memories”

In other words:

> she is here now

> but > her presence is not permanent.

So the speaker deliberately tries to avoid the common human tendency to think:

> “There will always be another Sunday.”

Instead:

> appreciate her now

> visit her now

> learn from her now.

The most important learner contrasts are:

> take your family for granted

> = 把家人的付出視為理所當然 > take good health for granted

> = 把健康視為理所當然 > take it for granted that she will come

> = 想當然地認為她一定會來

> grant permission

> = 批准許可

> grant a request

> = 批准請求

> grant someone access

> = 授予存取 / 進入權限

> be granted permission

> = 獲准

> I grant that you are right

> = 我承認你是對的

> Granted, it is difficult...

> = 誠然，這很困難.....

> a research grant

> = 研究資助

> a government grant

> = 政府補助

So grant is much richer than simply:

> grant = 給予 / 批准

and in your original passage, the crucial family expression is:

“take her presence for granted” = to assume her presence will always be there and therefore fail to value it fully — something the speaker consciously tries not to do.