Important distinction: grow vs increase

grow

often suggests:

* gradual development;

* organic change;

* increasing size/strength over time.

increase

is more neutral and numerical.

Compare:

> “My confidence grew.”

natural and developmental.

> “My confidence increased.”

also correct, but more analytical.

For your passage, grow feels more organic and personal.

Important distinction: grow vs develop

grow

focuses on becoming:

- * bigger;
- * stronger;
- * greater;
- * more mature.

is broader:

> become more advanced/complex/formed.

Compare:

> “Confidence grows through experience.”

> “Presentation skills develop through practice.”

Both are natural, but emphasis differs.

Important distinction: grow vs become

become

= general change of state.

grow

often implies:

> gradual change over time.

Compare:

> “She became angry.”

could be sudden.

> “She grew angry.”

suggests anger increased gradually.

This gradual quality is important.

Important distinction: grow vs build

For confidence:

confidence grows

= confidence gradually becomes stronger, often naturally through experience.

build confidence

= actively develop/create confidence through actions.

Your passage could support both perspectives:

> doing hard things builds confidence

and:

> confidence grows through doing hard things.

Important distinction: grow vs improve improve

= become better.

grow

= become greater/stronger/more developed.

> “My English improved.”

= quality got better.

> “My confidence grew.”

= amount/strength increased.

They can overlap but measure different dimensions.

Important distinction: grow + adjective vs get + adjective

Both can express change.

is very common and conversational:

> get tired

> get nervous

grow

often sounds more gradual or literary/formal:

> grow tired

> grow nervous

So:

grow = gradually become get = become, often neutral regarding speed.

Important distinction: grow older vs get older

Both mean:

> become older.

get older

is more everyday.

grow older

can sound slightly more reflective/literary.

Important distinction: grow up vs grow

grow

= increase/develop generally.

grow up

specifically often means:

> mature from childhood into adulthood.

> “The child is growing.”

= size/development increasing.

> “The child is growing up.”

= maturing toward adulthood.

Important distinction: grow into vs become

grow into emphasizes:

> gradual development into a role/form.

> “She grew into a leader.”

become

simply states the result:

> “She became a leader.”

The first highlights the process.

Important distinction: grow into vs grow out of

grow into

= become suitable for / develop into.

> grow into the role grow out of

can mean:

1. become too big for something;
2. mature beyond a habit/fear;
3. develop from an earlier source.

These different constructions depend heavily on context.

Important distinction: grow out of vs outgrow

For clothes/habits, they are very close.

> “He grew out of the jacket.”

> “He outgrew the jacket.”

Both:

「他長大後穿不下那件外套。」

Outgrow is a single transitive verb and often more compact.

Important distinction: grow on someone vs like immediately

grow on someone

= liking develops gradually.

> “The song grew on me.”

like immediately

= positive reaction from the beginning.

This expression specifically implies the initial reaction was weaker or negative.

Important distinction: grow from vs come from come from

grow from

= develop gradually out of that source.

> “The idea came from a conversation.”

= conversation was the source.

> “The project grew from a simple idea.”

= project gradually developed from that initial idea.

Important distinction: grow a business vs run a business

grow a business

= expand it.

run a business

= manage its day-to-day operations.

A person can run a business without growing it.

Important distinction: grow a business vs start a business

= create/begin it.

grow

= expand it after it exists.

Natural sequence:

> start a business → run it → grow it.

Important distinction: growth vs increase

often emphasizes:

- * process;
- * development over time;
- * expansion.

increase

can refer simply to a rise in number/amount.

> “personal growth”

very natural.

> “personal increase”

not natural in that meaning.

Important distinction: growth = development vs growth = mass

Context matters greatly.

Abstract:

> “personal growth”

= 個人成長

Medical:

> “a growth on the skin”

= 皮膚上的增生 / 腫塊

Same noun, completely different meaning.

Important distinction: growing = developing vs growing = increasing

Developing:

> “a growing child”

= 正在成長的孩子

Increasing:

> “growing concern”

= 日益增加的憂慮

The shared idea is:

> becoming greater over time.

For your original passage

> “It taught me that confidence does not appear out of nowhere; it grows when you do hard things anyway.”

The exact meaning is:

grow = 隨著時間和經驗逐步發展並變得更強

Therefore:

> confidence grows

= 「自信逐漸建立 / 增強」

The contrast with appear is especially important:

> appear out of nowhere

> = 突然、毫無來源地出現

versus:

> grow

> = 逐漸發展、慢慢變強

Your sentence therefore presents confidence as a process, not an instant feeling.

The logic is:

- > do difficult things
- > → gain experience
- > → discover that you can cope
- > → confidence gradually grows

So the key passage mapping is:

grow = develop gradually and become stronger

The most important learner contrasts are:

> confidence grows

> = 自信逐漸增強

> grow in confidence

> = 變得更有自信

> grow stronger

> = 逐漸變強

> children grow

> = 孩子成長

> grow up

> = 長大

> plants grow

> = 植物生長

> grow vegetables

> = 種植蔬菜

> grow a beard

> = 蓄鬍子

> grow tired

> = 漸漸疲倦

> grow to like something

> = 慢慢開始喜歡某物

> grow into a leader

> = 成長為領袖

> grow out of a fear

> = 逐漸擺脫恐懼

> grow apart

> = 逐漸疏遠

> grow on me

> = 我慢慢開始喜歡它

> grow a business

> = 發展 / 擴展業務

> growing concern

> = 日益增加的憂慮

> personal growth

> = 個人成長

> economic growth

> = 經濟增長

So grow is far richer than simply:

> grow = 生長

and in your original sentence it specifically means:

“to develop gradually through experience and become stronger over time.”
