

Absolutely — hang is a very strong polysemy target because your passage uses it here:

> “I can imagine hanging it in the living room...”

Here hang means to attach a picture to a wall so that it is supported from above. But the word also has major meanings involving suspending objects, clothes, body posture, execution, lingering/staying, and several very common fixed expressions.

Word family: hang / hung / hanged / hanging

Base word: hang

Verb forms: hang, hangs, hung, hanging

Special past form: hanged for execution by hanging

Noun: hang (較少見) / hanging

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun-related forms (相關名詞)

Important irregularity:

> hang → hung → hung

> for ordinary meanings

but:

> hang → hanged → hanged

> when meaning execute someone by hanging

Meaning in your passage: hang = attach/display something from above or on a wall — 掛 ; 懸掛

Your sentence:

> “I can imagine hanging it in the living room...”

Here hang means:

> to attach the artwork to the wall so that it is displayed and supported from above.

繁體中文 :

把畫作固定並掛在牆上展示 ; 懸掛

Natural translation:

> “I can imagine hanging it in the living room.”

Important distinction: hang vs suspend

hang

common, everyday:

= 掛起 / 懸掛

suspend

more formal/technical:

= 懸吊、懸置

> hang a painting

> = 掛畫

> suspend equipment from the ceiling

> = 把設備懸吊在天花板

Important distinction: hang vs put put

very general:

= 放置

hang

specific:

= 支撐點在上方，物體向下垂 / 掛著

> put the picture on the table

> = 把畫放桌上

> hang the picture on the wall

> = 把畫掛牆上

Important distinction: hang vs display

hang

describes the physical method of positioning.

display

describes the purpose: showing something.

> hang the painting

> = 掛畫

> display the painting

> = 展示畫作

A painting can be displayed without being hung.

Important distinction: hang vs attach attach

= fasten one thing to another.

hang

= attach in such a way that it is supported from above.

> attach a label

> = 貼 / 固定標籤

> hang a lamp

> = 懸掛燈具

Important distinction: hung vs hanged

This is the most important grammar contrast.

Normal meanings:

> hang → hung

> "She hung the picture."

> = 她掛了那幅畫。

Execution:

> hang → hanged

> “The prisoner was hanged.”

> = 囚犯被處以絞刑。

Excellent MCQ material.

Important distinction: hang in the air vs float in the air

You curated float earlier.

float

= gently move or remain suspended.

hang

= remain noticeably present or stationary.

> dust floated in the air

> = 灰塵在空中飄浮

> smoke hung in the air

> = 煙霧瀰漫、停留在空氣中

Different nuance.

Important distinction: hang over vs cover

cover

physically or generally spread over something.

hang over

often figurative:

= continue to threaten or affect something negatively.

> clouds covered the city

> = 雲覆蓋城市

> uncertainty hung over the city

> = 不確定感籠罩城市

Important distinction: hang — physical vs computing

Physical:

> “The picture hung on the wall.”

= 畫掛在牆上。

Computing:

> “The computer hung.”

= 電腦卡死 / 當機。

Completely different domain.

Important distinction: hang — transitive vs intransitive

Transitive:

> “She hung the picture.”

= 她把畫掛起。

Intransitive:

> “The picture hung above the sofa.”

= 畫掛在梳化上方。

Same core concept, different grammar.

Important distinction: hanging vs hung hanging

= ongoing state/action or adjective

> hanging lamp

> = 吊燈

hung

= past/past participle

> “The lamp was hung yesterday.”

= 那盞燈昨天掛好了。
