Key contrasts

40. hit vs strike

hit

= common everyday word for physical impact

打；擊；撞

strike

= often more formal, forceful, or deliberate; also has additional meanings

擊打；襲擊

Compare:

* The ball hit the wall.

* Lightning struck the tree.

In some contexts both are possible, but hit is generally more conversational.

41. hit vs beat

hit someone

= strike once or unspecified number of times

打某人

beat someone

= strike repeatedly; can also mean defeat

毆打；擊敗

Compare:

> He hit him once.

> 他打了他一下。

> He beat him badly.

> 他把他狠狠毆打了一頓。

42. hit vs bump into

hit

often suggests stronger impact.

bump into

often suggests a relatively minor accidental collision.

Compare:

> I bumped into the table.

> 我不小心撞了一下桌子。

> The car hit the barrier.

> 車子撞上護欄。

43. hit vs affect

In the passage:

hit

= affect suddenly and strongly

突然強烈地觸動

affect

= have an influence on someone or something

影響

Compare:

> Her words affected me.

> 她的話影響了我。

> Her words really hit me.

> 她的話一下子*深深觸動了我*。

hit is more vivid and immediate.

44. hit vs realize

In:

> It hit me that I had forgotten.

the whole construction means:

I suddenly realized...

But hit adds the sense of a realization arriving with force or suddenness.

Compare:

> I realized I had forgotten my keys.

> 我意識到忘了帶鑰匙。

> It suddenly hit me that I had forgotten my keys.

> 我突然猛然意識到自己忘了帶鑰匙。

Meaning map

The central image of hit is:

forceful contact

From that physical idea develop several major branches:

physical impact

→ hit the wall

→ 撞 / 擊

successful contact

→ hit the target

→ 擊中

reach a numerical point

→ hit 40°C

→ 達到

disaster makes forceful contact with a place

→ storm hits the coast

→ 襲擊

emotional force

→ her words hit me

→ 深深觸動

mental force

→ it hit me that...

→ 突然意識到

commercial impact

→ a hit song

So many figurative uses preserve the idea that something arrives with force and produces an effect.

Passage recap

> “That sentence hit me at exactly the right time.”

Here:

hit = affect someone suddenly and powerfully, especially emotionally or mentally

Best Traditional Chinese renderings:

* 深深觸動了我

* 一下子打動了我

* 對我產生了很強烈的影響

* contextually: 那句話剛好在最對的時機深深打中了我

For natural Chinese, 「深深觸動了我」 is the cleanest choice.

MCQ-ready meaning

hit in the passage
