Important distinction 1: hold vs carry

hold focuses on keeping something in your hand/arms.

carry focuses on moving it from one place to another.

> hold a bag

拿着袋

> carry a bag home

把袋帶回家

Important distinction 2: hold vs keep

hold

often means keep something physically/in a position or maintain a state.

keep broader: continue to have, store, retain, or maintain.

> hold the door open

扶着門保持打開

> keep the receipt

保留收據

Important distinction 3: hold vs contain

hold emphasizes capacity.

> The hall holds 500 people.

禮堂可容納 500 人。

contain emphasizes what is actually inside.

> The box contains books.

箱裏有書。

Important distinction 4: hold an event vs have an event

hold an event

more formal: organize/conduct it.

have an event

broader everyday wording.

> The school held a ceremony.

學校舉辦典禮。

Important distinction 5: hold a position vs have a position

Both can mean 擔任職位, but hold sounds more formal/institutional.

Important distinction 6: hold back vs hold up

Very important.

hold back

prevent progress/development.

> Lack of money is holding us back.

缺錢阻礙我們發展。 hold up

delay.

> Traffic held us up.

交通令我們遲到。

In your passage, holding everyone back means 拖慢整體進度, not simply making them late by a few minutes.

Important distinction 7: hold back literal vs figurative

Literal

> hold the dog back

拉住狗

Figurative

> hold the team back

拖慢團隊

Emotional

> hold back tears

忍住眼淚

Informational

> hold back information

隱瞞資料

A very productive phrasal verb.

Important distinction 8: hold on vs wait hold on informal and often brief.

wait

general.

> Hold on a second.

等一下。

> Wait here.

在這裏等。

Important distinction 9: hold on to vs keep hold on to often implies deliberately not letting go, literally or figuratively.

> hold on to old letters

一直保留舊信

This can carry more emotional emphasis than plain keep.

Important distinction 10: hold off = delay vs hold off = resist

Delay

> hold off the decision

暫緩決定

Resist

> hold off an attack

抵擋攻擊

Context decides the sense.

Important distinction 11: hold out = extend vs resist

Extend

> hold out your hand

伸出手

Resist

> hold out for another week

再撐一星期

Offer hope

> hold out hope

抱有希望

Three distinct modern branches.

Important distinction 12: hold up = support vs delay vs robbery

Support

> pillars hold up the roof

柱支撐屋頂

Delay

> traffic held us up

交通耽誤我們

Robbery

> hold up a bank

持械搶劫銀行

This phrasal verb is highly polysemous.

Important distinction 13: on hold = telephone vs suspended

Telephone

> I'm on hold.

我正在電話等候。

Project

> The project is on hold.

項目暫停。

Same phrase, different contexts.

Important distinction 14: hold a record vs break a record

hold currently possess the record.

break surpass the previous record.

> She holds the record.

她保持紀錄。

> He broke the record.

他打破紀錄。

Important distinction 15: hold a belief vs believe hold a belief

more formal and focuses on possession of an opinion.

believe ordinary verb.

> They hold the belief that...

他們持有.....信念

Important distinction 16: hold someone's attention vs attract attention

attract attention get attention initially.

hold attention

keep it for a period.

A good opening attracts attention; good content holds it.

Important distinction 17: get hold of someone vs get hold of something

Person

= successfully contact > get hold of Kevin

聯絡到 Kevin

Thing

= obtain > get hold of a ticket

弄到一張票

Important distinction 18: take hold vs take control

take hold physically grasp, or begin to exert influence.

take control begin managing/directing.

> panic took hold

恐慌開始蔓延

> she took control

她接管局面

Important distinction 19: hold = grip vs hold = cargo space

These are completely different noun senses.

> tighten your hold

抓緊 > cargo hold

貨艙

Context removes ambiguity.

Family-extension note

Hold is one of the richest everyday English polysemy families. Its major branches include:

1. physical possession/grip

For your original sentence

> He said, in front of the whole group, that I had not uploaded my part on time and that I was holding everyone back.

Here:

holding everyone back = 因自己的部分未完成 / 未交出，而令其他組員也不能順利繼續，從而拖慢全組進度

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 他說我沒有準時上傳自己的部分，還說是我拖慢了整個小組的進度。

The key nuance is stronger than simply delay:

> delay everyone = 令大家遲一些

> hold everyone back = 成為阻力，令大家不能按正常速度向前推進

That sense of 阻礙別人前進 is the heart of the expression in your passage.
