Your passage contains:

> “I want to learn from her while I can.”

Here, learn from means:

to gain knowledge, wisdom, understanding, or better ways of behaving by observing someone and reflecting on their experience.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> learn from her

you are not necessarily talking about your grandmother formally teaching you a lesson.

Instead, you want to learn from:

- * the way she treats people;
- * her patience;
- * her quiet kindness;
- * the way she handles hardship;
- * her attitude toward family;
- * her life experience.

So learn from someone means:

to gain useful understanding or wisdom from that person's behaviour, experience, or example.

Meaning: To gain lessons, wisdom, knowledge, or better judgment from someone's experience or example.

繁體中文： 從某人的經歷、行為或榜樣中學習，吸收智慧、經驗或做人處事的方法

中文翻譯：

> “I want to learn from her while I can.”

「趁現在還可以，我想多向她學習 / 從她身上學習。」 learn + wh-clause = 得到原本不知道的具體資訊

16. learn = memorize (背熟 ; 記住) — 背 ; 記熟

A useful traditional educational sense.

Practice 32

> “We had to learn the poem for class.”

「我們要為課堂把那首詩*背熟*。」

Practice 33

> “Actors have to learn their lines.”

「演員要把台詞*背熟*。」

learn + text/lines = 把內容記住到能夠回想 / 背誦的程度

This is especially natural with:

- * lines;
- * poems;
- * vocabulary;
- * scripts.

17. learn by heart (背熟) — 背誦 ; 熟記

A common idiom, especially British English.

Practice 34

A common educational compound.

Practice 60

> “She believes in lifelong learning.”

「她相信*終身學習*的重要性。」

Practice 61

> “Reading is part of lifelong learning.”

「閱讀是終身學習的一部分。」

lifelong learning = 一生持續獲得新知識、技能和理解的過程

Important distinction: learn vs study

This is one of the most important learner contrasts.

study

= spend time deliberately reading, practising, or examining something.

learn

= actually gain knowledge, understanding, or ability.

You can:

> study for three hours

without necessarily:

> learning very much.

Compare:

> “I studied English last night.”

= 我昨晚溫習 / 學習英語。

> “I learned ten new words.”

= 我實際學會了十個新詞。 study = process/activity

learn = result/acquisition

Important distinction: learn vs teach

These describe opposite sides of learning.

learn

= receive/acquire knowledge.

= give knowledge/instruction.

> “My grandmother taught me how to cook.”

= 外婆教我。

> “I learned how to cook from my grandmother.”

= 我從外婆那裡學會。

Do not say:

> ❌ “She learned me English.”

Standard English requires:

> ✅ “She taught me English.”

Important distinction: learn vs know

learn

= process of acquiring knowledge.

know

= already possess that knowledge.

> “I’m learning her name.”

usually means you are trying to remember/acquire it.

> “I know her name.”

means the information is already in your mind.

Important distinction: learn vs understand

learn

= acquire knowledge or skill.

understand

= grasp meaning, reason, or relationship.

You can learn a fact without fully understanding why it is true.

Important distinction: learn vs memorize

learn

= broad acquisition of knowledge/skills.

memorize

= deliberately put information into memory.

> “I learned about the history.”

= gained understanding.

> “I memorized the dates.”

= committed them to memory.

So memorizing is only one possible kind of learning.

Important distinction: learn a poem vs understand a poem

learn a poem

in some contexts means:

> memorize it.

understand a poem

= comprehend its meaning.

Completely different outcomes.

Important distinction: learn from someone vs be taught by someone

be taught by someone

= that person intentionally instructs you.

learn from someone

= broader.

The person may:

- * teach you directly;
- * give advice;
- * simply provide an example you observe.

Your grandmother may never formally say:

> “Here is today's lesson.”

Yet you can still:

> learn from her.

This is exactly the passage meaning.

Important distinction: learn from someone vs copy someone learn from

= gain useful knowledge/wisdom from their example.

copy

= reproduce their behaviour/style.

Learning from someone does not require copying everything they do.

Important distinction: learn from mistakes vs regret mistakes

learn from mistakes

= use the experience to improve future behaviour.

regret mistakes

= feel sorry about them.

A person can regret a mistake without actually learning from it.

Important distinction: learn a lesson vs lesson

A lesson can mean:

> formal teaching period.

But:

> learn a lesson

often means:

> gain wisdom from an experience.

So:

> "I had an English lesson."

= 上了一堂英語課。

> "I learned a lesson."

= 我吸取了教訓 / 學到道理。

Important distinction: learn your lesson vs learn a lesson

learn a lesson

= gain some useful principle/wisdom.

learn your lesson

often implies:

> an unpleasant consequence has taught you not to repeat a mistake.

The second is more idiomatic and cautionary.

Important distinction: learn the hard way vs learn from advice

learn from advice

= benefit before making the mistake.

learn the hard way

= only understand after personally experiencing trouble, failure, or pain.

So the hard way emphasizes costly experience.

Important distinction: learn = study vs learn = find out

Compare:

> "I'm learning French."

= 我在學法語。 versus:

> "I learned that she had moved."

= 我得知她搬走了。

The second does not mean:

> I studied the fact.

It means:

> I found it out.

This is one of the most important polysemy distinctions.

Important distinction: learn about vs learn of

learn about

can mean:

1. study/get information about a topic;
2. discover that a situation exists.

> “We learned about volcanoes.”

= 我們學習火山知識。 learn of usually means:

> become informed that something exists/happened.

> “We learned of his resignation.”

= 我們得悉他辭職。

Learn of is generally more formal.

Important distinction: learn that vs find out that

These are often close.

learn that

= become aware of a fact; somewhat neutral/formal.

find out that

= discover information, often emphasizing the process/result of investigation or discovery.

> “I learned that the meeting was cancelled.”

> “I found out that the meeting was cancelled.”

Both natural.

Important distinction: learn vs discover

learn

= receive/become aware of information.

discover

= find something previously unknown, often through investigation, observation, or chance.

You may:

> learn about a discovery

without being the person who discovered it.

Important distinction: learnt vs learned

Both can be past forms of learn.

is standard and especially common in American English.

learnt

is also standard, especially common in British English.

> “I learned a lot.”

> “I learnt a lot.”

Both can be correct depending on variety.

Important distinction: learned — one pronunciation vs learned — scholarly

Same spelling, different function.

Past tense/past participle:

> “She learned quickly.”

= 她學得很快。

Adjective meaning scholarly:

> “a learned professor”

= 博學的教授

The adjective meaning scholarly traditionally has a separate two-syllable pronunciation.

This is a genuine pronunciation-based lexical distinction.

Important distinction: learning vs knowledge

learning

can mean:

* the process of acquiring knowledge;

* formal/scholarly knowledge.

knowledge

= information/understanding already possessed.

> learning process

= 學習過程

> knowledge of history

= 歷史知識

Important distinction: learner vs student

learner

= anyone acquiring a particular skill/knowledge.

student

= usually someone enrolled in education or formally studying a subject.

A person can be:

> a language learner

without being:

> a student at a school.

Important distinction: unlearn vs forget forget

= lose the ability to remember, often unintentionally.

unlearn

= deliberately stop using/believing a previously learned habit, assumption, or behaviour.

> forget a phone number

but:

> unlearn a bad habit.

Very different.

Important distinction: learn by heart vs learn from the heart

learn by heart

= memorize completely.

from the heart

= sincerely/emotionally.

Do not confuse them.

> “Learn the poem by heart.”

= 把詩背熟。

Family-extension sweep

The practical learn family is rich in knowledge acquisition, skills, discovery, experience, and personal growth:

- * learn — acquire knowledge = 學習
- * learn something = 學習 / 掌握某內容
- * learn to do = 學會做
- * learn how to do = 學習 / 學會怎樣做
- * learn from someone = 向某人學習
- * learn from experience = 從經驗中學習

- * learn a lesson = 學到道理 / 教訓
- * learn your lesson = 吸取教訓、不再重犯
- * learn the hard way = 吃過苦頭後才明白
- * learn — find out = 得知 / 發現
- * learn that... = 得知.....
- * learn about = 學習 / 了解 / 得知關於.....
- * learn of = 得悉 / 聽聞
- * learn who/why/where = 得知具體資訊
- * learn a poem/lines = 背熟
- * learn by heart = 背誦 / 熟記
- * learn a language = 學習並掌握語言
- * learn a skill = 學會技能
- * learn by doing = 邊做邊學
- * learn by example = 從榜樣學習
- * learning — process = 學習過程
- * learning — scholarship = 學問 / 學識
- * learner = 學習者
- * quick learner = 學得快的人
- * learned — acquired = 後天習得的

* learned — scholarly = 博學的
 * unlearn = 改掉已學習的觀念 / 習慣
 * learning curve = 學習過程 / 上手難度
 * lifelong learning = 終身學習

The main semantic branches are:

- > acquire knowledge or skill
- > gain wisdom from experience or another person
- > become informed / find something out
- > memorize particular material

plus the highly useful related family:

> learning / learner / learned / unlearn

For your original passage

> “I want to learn from her while I can.”

The exact meaning is:

learn from someone = gain wisdom, lessons, understanding, or better ways of living from that person’s experience and example

Therefore:

> learn from her

= 「向她學習 / 從她身上吸收人生經驗和智慧」

This is deeper than:

> “She teaches me things.”

Your grandmother does not necessarily need to formally teach you.

You can learn simply by observing:

- > how she treats people
- > how she listens before giving advice
- > how she handles hardship
- > how she remains kind without becoming bitter
- > how she expresses love through small actions.

So in this context:

> learn

is closely connected with:

> life wisdom

rather than only:

> classroom knowledge.

And the final phrase:

> while I can

adds an important emotional layer.

It means:

> learn from her now, while you still have the opportunity to spend time with her.

The most important learner contrasts are:

> learn English

> = 學英語

> learn to drive

> = 學會開車

> learn how to cook

> = 學習怎樣煮飯

> learn from my grandmother

> = 向外婆學習

> learn from experience

> = 從經驗中學習

> learn from mistakes

> = 從錯誤中吸取教訓

> learn a lesson

> = 學到教訓 / 道理

> learn your lesson

> = 吸取教訓、不再重犯

> learn the hard way

> = 吃過苦頭後才明白 > learn that the meeting was cancelled

> = 得知會議取消了

> learn about history

> = 學習 / 了解歷史

> learn of his decision

> = 得悉他的決定

> learn your lines

> = 背熟台詞

> learn by heart

> = 背熟

> learning

> = 學習；亦可指學問

> learner

> = 學習者

> a learned scholar

> = 博學的學者

> unlearn a bad habit

> = 改掉已學會的壞習慣

So learn is much richer than simply:

> learn = 學習

and in your original passage it specifically means:

“to gain wisdom and life lessons from your grandmother’s experience, character, and example while you still have the chance to be with her.”
