mark

very broad visible trace.

stain

a discoloured mark that has soaked into a surface/material and may be hard to remove.

> pencil mark

鉛筆痕

> coffee stain

咖啡漬

Not every mark is a stain.

Important distinction 2: mark vs scar

mark

any visible trace.

scar

permanent or lasting mark left after injury/healing.

> a red mark on the skin

皮膚上的紅印

> a scar from surgery

手術疤痕

Important distinction 3: mark vs sign

mark

physical or symbolic indication.

sign

broader evidence or indication that something exists/is happening.

> a mark on the wall

牆上痕跡

> a sign of improvement

改善跡象

Important distinction 4: mark vs symbol

mark

can simply be any sign/line.

symbol represents an idea, meaning, or concept.

A check mark is a mark; a dove may be a symbol of peace.

Important distinction 5: mark vs grade

mark

score, especially BrE.

grade

letter/category or overall assessment, especially AmE and many education systems.

> 85 marks

85 分

> grade A

A 級

They overlap but are not identical.

Important distinction 6: mark vs score

mark

often academic evaluation.

score

points achieved in tests, games, or competitions.

> exam mark

考試分數

> football score

足球比數

Important distinction 7: mark as verb = label vs mark as verb = grade

Label

> mark the correct answer

標記正確答案

Grade

> mark the exam papers

批改試卷

Same verb, different operation.

Important distinction 8: mark an occasion vs celebrate

celebrate usually positive and festive.

mark

neutral: formally recognize or commemorate.

> mark the anniversary of a tragic event

紀念悲劇周年

You would not necessarily say celebrate there.

Important distinction 9: mark = indicate vs cause

> The event marked the beginning of a new era.

This means the event signalled/represented the beginning.

It does not necessarily mean it directly caused the new era.

Important distinction 10: leave a mark literal vs figurative

Literal

> The cup left a mark on the table.

杯留下印。

Figurative

> The teacher left a mark on my life.

老師對我的人生留下深遠影響。

Your passage uses this figurative branch.

Important distinction 11: leave a mark vs make your mark

leave a mark on someone affect someone deeply.

make your mark

become successful or influential.

> The gift left a mark on her heart.

禮物在她心中留下印記。

> She made her mark in design.

她在設計界嶄露頭角。

Important distinction 12: marked vs marked-up

marked

can mean obvious:

> a marked improvement

明顯改善

marked-up

can mean:

* increased price

* annotated document

Completely different.

Important distinction 13: marked vs remarkable

They look related but differ sharply.

marked

clearly noticeable.

remarkable

unusual, impressive, worthy of attention.

> marked difference

明顯差異

> remarkable achievement

非凡成就

Important distinction 14: mark down vs mark up

Price

> mark down = 減價

> mark up = 加價

Documents/assessment

> mark down = 扣分

> mark up = 加上修改標記

Context matters.

Important distinction 15: marker vs mark

mark

the sign/trace itself.

marker

the object/person/measurement that indicates something.

> a red mark on the map

地圖上的紅色記號

> a stone marker

石製標記物

Important distinction 16: trademark literal vs figurative

Legal

> registered trademark

註冊商標

Figurative

> his trademark smile

他的招牌笑容

The figurative sense means a highly recognizable characteristic.

Family-extension note

Mark has several major modern branches:

1. physical trace

- * mark on a wall
- * leave a mark

2. symbol / notation

- * question mark

For your original sentence

> ...because a good gift should not just fill a shopping bag; it should leave a mark on someone's heart.

Here:

mark = 一種長久留在心裏的情感印記或深刻影響

The image is metaphorical:

- > a physical mark stays on a surface
- > an emotional mark stays in someone's memory or heart

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 因為一份好禮物不應只是裝滿一個購物袋，而應該在別人心裏留下印記。

For this sentence, 「留下印記」 is especially good because it preserves the metaphor in the English rather than flattening it into simply 「有影響」.
