

Word family: miss / misses / missed / missing

Base word: miss

Past tense: missed

Past participle: missed

ing form: missing

Related form: missing

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / adjective-related form (相關形容詞)

Your sentence:

> "...he quietly shared his notes with me during recess and helped me understand what I had missed."

Meaning in this passage

Here, miss means to fail to hear, see, learn, or experience something because you were absent or not paying attention when it happened.

The speaker had missed part of the lesson and Ryan helped him understand that material.

繁體中文：因缺席、沒有看到 / 聽到或沒有參與，而錯過某些資訊、內容或經歷

> "...helped me understand what I had missed."

「.....還幫我弄明白我剛才錯過 / 漏掉的內容。」

Here:

what I had missed = 我因為沒有跟上、沒有看到或沒有聽到而錯過的課堂內容

1. miss = fail to catch/experience something (錯過) — 錯過 ; 沒趕上

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: To fail to see, hear, attend, catch, experience, or take advantage of something.

Practice 1 — Original

> "He helped me understand what I had missed."

「他幫我弄明白我錯過 / 漏掉的內容。」

Practice 2

> “I missed the beginning of the lesson.”

「我錯過了課堂開始的部分。」

Practice 3

> “We missed the last bus.”

「我們錯過了 / 沒趕上最後一班巴士。」

miss something = 因時間、缺席、疏忽或其他原因而沒有趕上、看到、聽到或經歷某件事

Common:

- * miss a class
- * miss a meeting
- * miss the bus
- * miss an opportunity
- * miss part of a conversation

These belong to one broad fail to catch/experience sense.

2. miss = fail to hit/reach a target (未擊中) — 打不中 ; 射失 ; 未命中

Meaning: To fail to hit, catch, reach, or make contact with the intended target.

Practice 4

> “He threw the ball but missed the target.”

「他把球扔出去，但沒有擊中目標。」

Practice 5

> “She missed the shot.”

「她那一球射失了 / 沒有命中。」

miss = 原本想擊中、接觸或到達某個目標，但沒有成功

This is genuinely different from missing a lesson or bus.

3. miss = fail to notice/understand something (漏看 / 沒察覺) — 漏掉 ; 沒有注意到

Miss can mean failing to notice an important detail, point, clue, or meaning.

Practice 6

> “I completely missed the mistake in the report.”

「我完全漏看了 / 沒有注意到報告中的錯誤。」

Practice 7

> “You’re missing the main point.”

「你沒有抓到 / 忽略了最重要的一點。」

miss something = 沒有注意、理解或識別本來應該察覺的資訊或重點

This is closely related to Meaning 1, but the focus is on failure to notice or understand, rather than physical absence or timing.

For strict counting, I would usually merge it with the broader fail to catch/perceive sense, but show it explicitly because it is very common.

4. miss = feel the absence of someone/something (想念) — 想念 ; 懷念

This is a major separate meaning.

Meaning: To feel sadness, longing, or a sense of loss because someone or something is not present.

Practice 8

> “I really miss my old friends.”

「我真的很想念以前的朋友。」

Practice 9

> “She misses living by the sea.”

「她很懷念住在海邊的生活。」

miss someone/something = 因為某人 / 某事物不在身邊或已經不存在，而產生想念、懷念或失落感

This is semantically distinct from miss = fail to catch.

5. miss = avoid narrowly (差點撞到 / 避過) — 差一點碰到；勉強避開

Miss can mean that something passes very close to a person or object but does not hit it.

Practice 10

> “The car missed the cyclist by only a few centimetres.”

「那輛車只差幾厘米就撞到單車手，最後勉強避開了。」

Practice 11

> “The falling branch missed him by inches.”

「掉下來的樹枝只差幾吋就打中他，最後沒有擊中。」

miss someone/something by + distance = 非常接近目標，但最終沒有碰到 / 擊中

For strict counting, I would merge this with the fail to hit sense.

6. miss = fail to include / leave out (遺漏) — 漏掉；省略

Miss can also mean failing to include something that should have been included.

Practice 12

> “You missed one name from the list.”

「你在名單中漏掉了一個名字。」

Practice 13

> “Don’t miss any important details.”

「不要漏掉任何重要細節。」

miss = 應該包括或處理某項內容，但實際上遺漏了它

This overlaps strongly with the fail to notice/catch family and usually does not need its own core sense.

7. miss = fail to attend (缺席) — 缺席；沒有出席

Practice 14

> “He missed school because he was ill.”

「他因為生病而*沒有上學 / 缺課*。」

Practice 15

> “She missed the meeting yesterday.”

「她昨天*沒有出席 / 錯過了*會議。」

miss an event/class = 沒有出席原本可以或應該參與的活動

This belongs to the broader fail to experience/attend sense.

8. miss = fail to take an opportunity/chance (機會) — 錯失

Practice 16

> “Don’t miss this opportunity.”

「不要*錯失*這個機會。」

Practice 17

> “He missed his chance to speak.”

「他*錯過了*發言的機會。」

miss an opportunity/chance = 因沒有及時行動而未能利用某個機會

Again, this belongs to the broad fail to catch/experience sense.

Related form: missing

Missing has several useful uses.

missing = absent / not where expected (不見了) — 失蹤的 ; 不見的

Practice 18

> “My keys are missing.”

「我的鎖匙不見了。」

Practice 19

> “The police are searching for a missing child.”

「警方正在尋找一名失蹤兒童。」

missing = 原本應該存在或在某處，但現在找不到 / 不在那裡的

missing = omitted / absent from a set (缺少) — 缺少的 ; 遺漏的

Practice 20

> “One page is missing from the book.”

「這本書少了一頁。」

Practice 21

> “There is a missing piece in the puzzle.”

「拼圖中缺少了一塊。」

missing = 某個完整整體中應有但實際不存在的部分

These are related to the verb idea of absence/loss.

Important distinction: miss vs lose

This is very important.

miss often means:

- * fail to catch;
- * fail to notice;
- * feel the absence of someone/something.

lose means:

- * no longer have something;
- * be unable to find something;
- * be defeated.

Compare:

> “I missed the bus.”

= 我沒有趕上巴士。

> “I lost my bus pass.”

= 我把巴士證弄丟了。

Completely different.

Important distinction: miss vs forget forget means fail to remember.

miss

means fail to catch/experience/notice.

> “I forgot my homework.”

= 我忘記帶 / 忘了功課。

> “I missed the homework explanation.”

= 我錯過了功課的講解。

Important distinction: miss vs skip skip often suggests intentionally not doing or attending something.

miss

does not necessarily imply intention.

> “I skipped class.”

= 我故意不上課。

> “I missed class.”

= 我沒有上到課；原因可能不是故意的。

Important distinction: miss vs fail fail

is broader and means not succeed in doing something.

miss often involves a specific target, opportunity, event, or piece of information.

> fail an exam

> miss a question

> miss a target

Different patterns.

Important distinction: miss someone vs think of someone

miss someone means you feel their absence and wish they were present.

think of someone simply means they enter your thoughts.

So:

> “I think of him often.”

does not necessarily mean:

> “I miss him.”

Useful expression: miss the point — 沒抓到重點

Practice 22

> “You’ve completely missed the point.”

「你完全沒有抓到重點。」

Practice 23

> “Don’t miss the point of the story.”

「不要忽略 / 誤解這個故事的重點。」

miss the point = 沒有理解真正重要的意思或核心

This belongs to the fail to understand/notice sense.

Useful expression: miss out — 錯過機會 / 沒有參與

This is a phrasal verb, so under your operating procedures I would not include it as part of the core entry by default unless specifically requested.

Still, it is worth flagging as a separate high-frequency phrasal verb for later coverage.

Useful expression: can't miss — 很顯眼 / 不可能看不到

Practice 24

> “The building is bright red—you can't miss it.”

「那棟建築是鮮紅色的，你不可能看不到。」

Practice 25

> “The entrance is right beside the station, so you can't miss it.”

「入口就在車站旁邊，所以你一定看得到。」 can't miss = 非常明顯，不可能沒有注意到

This develops from the perception sense.

Family-extension note

The practical modern family includes:

* miss

* misses

* missed

* missing

Useful constructions include:

* miss a lesson

* miss the bus

* miss an opportunity

* miss the point

* miss a target

* miss someone

* missing person

* missing piece

The Golden Manual says phrasal verbs should normally be excluded unless requested, while grammatical constructions and genuinely distinct semantic branches should still be covered.

For your original sentence

> “...helped me understand what I had missed.”

The exact meaning is:

miss = 因沒有聽到、看到、參與或跟上，而錯過了某些資訊或內容

So:

> what I had missed

= 我沒有聽到 / 沒有跟上的課堂內容

For your database, I would count 4 genuinely useful core meanings for miss:

1. fail to catch, attend, experience, or take an opportunity
2. fail to hit or reach a target
3. fail to notice, include, or understand something
4. feel the absence of someone or something

I would merge miss a bus / class / chance under #1, merge miss by inches under #2, and merge miss a detail / miss the point / omit something under #3 rather than inflate the core count.
