Your passage contains:

> “She is a bit like an old tree: she does not move much, but she gives other people shade, stability, and comfort.”

Here, move means:

to change physical position or make bodily movement.

Meaning in this passage

In:

> she does not move much

move means:

to change the position of the body, walk around, or make physical movements.

The sentence suggests that because your grandmother is elderly and physically frail:

- * she may not walk around very much;
- * she may remain seated or in one place;
- * her bodily activity is limited.

But the metaphor says that even without much physical movement, she still has a powerful positive effect on others.

Meaning: To change physical position or make bodily movement.

*繁體中文： 移動身體 / 走動；這裡指她年紀大、活動不多，不會經常走來走去

Informal.

Important distinction: move vs go

This is fundamental.

go

focuses on:

> travelling/proceeding from one place to another.

move

focuses more broadly on:

> changing position.

Compare:

> “Go to the door.”

= 去門口。

> “Move closer to the door.”

= 移近門口。

Move does not always specify a destination.

Important distinction: move vs walk

move

= any change in position.

walk

= move specifically on foot.

A person can move by:

- * walking;
- * running;
- * rolling;
- * turning;
- * shifting.

So move is much broader.

Important distinction: move vs travel

move

= change position/location.

travel

= go some distance, often between places.

> “Move your chair.”

not travel.

> “Travel to another country.”

longer-distance journey.

Important distinction: move vs shift

move

= broad neutral term.

shift

often means:

> make a relatively small change in position, direction, focus, or attitude.

> “Move the chair.”

> “Shift the chair slightly left.”

small adjustment.

Important distinction: move vs transfer

move

= broad everyday change of location/position.

transfer

= move something/someone from one system, position, account, or institution to another.

> move to another department

everyday.

> transfer to another department

more administrative/formal.

Important distinction: move house vs move to a house

move house

= relocate residence.

move to a house

= change residence specifically into a house.

Not identical.

Important distinction: move vs relocate

move

= everyday.

relocate

= more formal, often used for:

- * companies;
- * employees;
- * offices;
- * households.

> “The company relocated its headquarters.”

more formal than:

> “The company moved its headquarters.”

Important distinction: move = physical vs move = emotional

Compare:

> “She moved the chair.”

= 她移動椅子。

versus:

> “Her kindness moved me.”

= 她的善良感動了我。

Completely different concepts.

Important distinction: moved vs moving

This is extremely important.

moved

= the person experiences emotion.

> “I was deeply moved.”

= 我深受感動。

moving

= the thing causes emotion.

> “It was a moving story.”

= 那是一個感人的故事。

This parallels:

> interested / interesting

> tired / tiring

Important distinction: moving car vs moving story

Same spelling, different sense.

moving car

= a car that is physically travelling.

moving story

= a story that causes strong emotion.

Context is essential.

Important distinction: move forward literal vs figurative

Literal:

> “Move forward two steps.”

= 向前兩步。

Figurative:

> “We need to move forward.”

= 我們需要繼續推進 / 向前發展。

The figurative sense comes from physical progress.

Important distinction: move on vs move forward

move forward

often emphasizes progress.

move on

often emphasizes leaving one topic/state/past experience and proceeding to another.

> move forward with a project

= 推進項目

> move on from disappointment

= 從失望中走出來

Important distinction: move vs act

act

= take action generally.

move

in the “act” sense often suggests:

> take a concrete step after waiting or deliberation.

> “We need to act.”

broad.

> “We need to move now.”

more urgent/dynamic.

Important distinction: make a move vs make a decision

make a decision

= decide mentally/formally.

make a move

= take an actual step/action.

You can decide first, then make your move.

Important distinction: move = action vs step

move

often sounds strategic.

step

often means one stage/action within a process.

> next move

= 下一步策略 / 行動

> next step

= 下一個程序 / 步驟

They overlap but emphasis differs.

Important distinction: career move vs career change

career move

= a decision/action taken for career development, which may be:

- * new role;
- * promotion;
- * relocation;
- * new employer.

career change

= switch to a substantially different career.

So a career move does not necessarily mean changing careers.

Important distinction: movement vs motion

movement

= change of position, organized campaign, musical section, etc.

motion

= physical movement, especially in scientific/formal contexts, or a formal proposal.

> movement of the body

> laws of motion

> parliamentary motion

Different collocations.

Important distinction: move a motion

This phrase can look repetitive, but the words have different grammatical roles:

> move = formally propose > motion = formal proposal

So:

> move a motion

= 提出動議

not:

> physically move something.

Important distinction: movement = physical motion vs social movement

Physical:

> “limited movement in her shoulder”

= 肩膀活動受限。

Social:

> “civil rights movement”

= 民權運動。

These are genuinely distinct senses.

Important distinction: movement = social campaign vs campaign

movement

= broader collective social force, often long-term and involving many groups/people.

campaign

= organized effort toward a more specific goal, often limited in time.

A movement can contain many campaigns.

Important distinction: movement = music vs song

A movement is:

> one major section of a longer classical composition.

It is not simply another word for:

> song.

Important distinction: move stock vs sell

sell

= exchange goods for money.

move stock

= business-language emphasis on getting inventory sold/distributed.

> “We need to move this stock.”

implies:

> clear/sell it efficiently.

For your original passage

> “She is a bit like an old tree: she does not move much, but she gives other people shade, stability, and comfort.”

The exact meaning is:

move = 改變身體位置 ; 走動 / 活動

Therefore:

> she does not move much

= 「她不太走動 / 活動不多」

The metaphor is important:

> an old tree does not physically move much

but it still:

* gives shade;

* provides stability;

* offers comfort.

Your grandmother is being described in the same way.

Her contribution does not come from:

> constant activity

or:

> dramatic action.

Instead, simply by being there, she creates:

> calm

> stability

> warmth

> comfort.

So the key passage mapping is:

move = physically change position / walk around

The most important learner contrasts are:

> move your hand

> = 移動手

> move the chair

> = 搬動椅子

> move to London

> = 搬到倫敦

> move house

> = 搬屋

> move to another department

> = 調到另一部門

> move forward with the project

> = 推進項目

> make a move

> = 採取行動

> move on

> = 轉到下一階段 / 放下過去

> the story moved me

> = 故事感動了我

> a moving story

> = 感人的故事

> a moving car

> = 行駛中的車

> move a motion

> = 提出動議

> career move

> = 職涯上的一步

> your move

> = 輪到你 / 看你下一步

> social movement

> = 社會運動

> musical movement

> = 樂章

> watch movement

> = 手錶機芯

So move is far richer than simply:

> move = 移動

and in your original passage it specifically means:

"to make physical bodily movements or change physical position; she does not walk or move around very much."
