

Absolutely — organise is a strong target because your passage uses the adjective well-organised to describe a person, while the wider family develops important meanings involving arrangement, planning, events, institutions, groups, labour, and organisations themselves.

Word family: organise / organised / organising / organisation / organiser / organisational / disorganised / reorganisation

Base word: organise

American spelling: organize

Noun: organisation / organization

Person noun: organiser / organizer

Adjective: organised / organized, organisational / organizational

Opposite: disorganised / disorganized

Useful extension: reorganisation / reorganization

Useful compounds: well-organised, organised crime, organised religion

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / adjective-related and noun-related forms (相關形容詞及名詞)

Your sentence:

> “He was quite tall and thin, and he always looked neat and well-organised.”

A full audit suggests that the central idea is:

> put people, things, information, or activities into a clear structure so that they can function effectively

From this grow several genuinely useful branches:

1. arrange physical things/information systematically;
2. plan and coordinate an event/activity;
3. manage one's own work/life efficiently;
4. form people into a structured group;
5. establish workers into a union/collective;
6. organisation = the process/system of arranging;
7. organisation = an institution/group;
8. organised = methodical/efficient;
9. organised crime/religion = institutionalized structured activity.

Meaning in your passage: well-organised = orderly and methodical — 有條理的；做事有系統的

Here:

> “He always looked neat and well-organised.”

does not mean simply that his possessions were arranged neatly.

It describes the teacher as someone who appeared prepared, methodical, orderly, and in control of his work and materials.

繁體中文：

做事有條理、有系統，能妥善安排工作、物品或時間，不顯得混亂的

Natural translation:

> “He was quite tall and thin, and he always looked neat and well-organised.”

「他身形頗高也偏瘦，而且總是看起來很整齊、很有條理。」

1. organised / well-organised + person (人物) — 有條理的；做事有系統的

This is your exact original sense.

Practice 1 — Original

> “He always looked neat and well-organised.”

「他總是看起來很整齊，而且很有條理。」

Practice 2

> “She is extremely organised and never misses a deadline.”

「她做事非常有條理，從來不會錯過截止日期。」

Practice 3

> “You need to be well-organised to manage several projects at once.”

「要同時管理幾個項目，你必須非常有組織、有條理。」

organised — person = 能有系統地安排時間、工作、物品和責任，做事不混亂的

2. organise + objects/files/information (物件 / 檔案 / 資料) — 整理；分類排列

The core physical/information-arrangement sense.

Practice 4

> “I need to organise these files.”

「我需要把這些檔案整理分類。」

Practice 5

> “She organised the books by subject.”

「她按科目把書籍分類整理。」

organise = 把物件、文件或資訊按照某種清晰的次序、類別或結構整理好

This can apply to:

- * files
- * notes
- * documents
- * books
- * data
- * photographs

3. organise + thoughts/ideas (思想 / 構思) — 整理思路；有系統地安排內容

A common figurative extension of #2.

Practice 6

> “Give me a moment to organise my thoughts.”

「給我一點時間整理一下思緒。」

Practice 7

> “The outline helped her organise her ideas before writing.”

「大綱幫助她在寫作前有系統地整理構思。」 organise thoughts/ideas = 把原本分散或混亂的思想按照清晰邏輯排列

This is the same broader “arrange systematically” concept as organising files, so it should not be treated as an unrelated lexical sense.

4. organise + event/meeting/activity (活動 / 會議 / 事情) — 籌辦 ; 安排 ; 組織

A major meaning.

Practice 8

> “The school organised a history exhibition.”

「學校籌辦了一個歷史展覽。」

Practice 9

> “She is organising a meeting for next Friday.”

「她正在安排 / 籌辦下星期五的會議。」

organise an event/activity = 規劃並協調所需的人員、時間、地點和資源，使活動能夠順利進行

Here organise means much more than “tidy.”

5. organise + trip/transport/accommodation (安排事項) — 安排 ; 籌劃

This belongs to the planning sense above, but is an important practical context.

Practice 10

> “The company organised transport for the staff.”

「公司為員工安排了交通。」

Practice 11

> “Can you organise accommodation for the visitors?”

「你可以為訪客安排住宿嗎？」 organise something = 負責把實際需要的安排協調好，使事情可以進行

Natural Chinese may be:

* 安排

* 籌劃

* 統籌 depending on context.

6. organise + work/time/schedule (工作 / 時間 / 日程) — 安排；管理得有條理

Practice 12

> “She knows how to organise her time efficiently.”

「她懂得怎樣有效地安排自己的時間。」

Practice 13

> “I need to organise my workload before taking on another task.”

「在接另一項工作之前，我需要先整理和安排自己的工作量。」 organise time/work = 以清楚、有系統的方式分配時間、工作和優先次序

This directly connects to:

> an organised person

because such a person is good at doing this.

7. organise + people/group (人物 / 群體) — 組織；把人安排成有結構的群體

A distinct social sense.

Practice 14

> “The volunteers were organised into teams.”

「義工被組織成不同小組。」

Practice 15

> “She helped organise the community around the campaign.”

「她協助把社區居民組織起來參與這項活動。」

organise people = 把多個人按照共同目標、角色或結構組合起來，使他們能協同行動

8. organise + workers/labour (工人 / 勞工) — 組織工人；成立 / 加入工會

A common labour-relations meaning.

Practice 16

> “Workers began to organise for better conditions.”

「工人開始*組織起來爭取更好的工作條件*。」

Practice 17

> “The union tried to organise workers at the factory.”

「工會嘗試把工廠工人*組織起來 / 吸納加入工會*。」

organise workers = 把工人組織成有集體代表性的勞工團體，尤其涉及工會活動

Register: workplace / labour relations.

This is a genuine established extension of “form people into an organized group.”

9. organised = systematically arranged (事物 / 資料) — 整齊有序的；安排有系統的

Not only people can be organised.

Practice 18

> “Her notes are clear and well-organised.”

「她的筆記很清楚，而且*編排得很有條理*。」

Practice 19

> “The report is logically organised.”

「這份報告的結構*安排得很有邏輯*。」

organised — thing/information = 各部分按照清楚、合理的次序或結構排列的

10. organised = planned/coordinated rather than spontaneous (活動) — 有組織的；有計劃安排的

Practice 20

> “The protest was highly organised.”

「這次抗議活動組織得非常有系統。」

Practice 21

> “They offer organised activities for children during the holidays.”

「他們在假期為兒童提供有安排、有組織的活動。」

organised — activity = 事先有規劃、協調和結構，而不是完全臨時 / 自發進行的

11. organisation = act/process/system of arranging things — 組織；安排；條理

The main abstract noun.

Practice 22

> “Good organisation is essential for a successful event.”

「良好的組織和安排對成功舉辦活動十分重要。」

Practice 23

> “The project failed because of poor organisation.”

「這個項目因為組織安排不佳而失敗。」 organisation = 把人、工作、資料或資源有系統地安排和協調的過程 / 能力

12. organisation = structured group/institution (機構 / 組織) — 組織；機構

This is a genuinely different noun meaning.

Practice 24

> “She works for an international organisation.”

「她在一個國際組織 / 機構工作。」

Practice 25

> “The charity is a non-profit organisation.”

「這間慈善機構是一個非牟利組織。」

organisation = 為共同目的而建立、具有一定結構和成員的正式團體 / 機構

Examples:

- * business organisation
- * international organisation
- * charitable organisation
- * government organisation

13. organisation = internal structure of something (結構) — 組織結構 ; 編排方式

A related but useful academic meaning.

Practice 26

> “The organisation of the essay is very clear.”

「這篇文章的*結構編排*非常清楚。」

Practice 27

> “The book’s organisation makes it easy to follow.”

「這本書的*內容組織方式*令讀者很容易理解。」 organisation = 一份文字、系統或整體的各個部分如何被排列和互相連接

This grows from the arrangement/process sense, so we should not overstate it as unrelated.

14. organiser = person who plans/co-ordinates something — 組織者 ; 籌辦人

Practice 28

> “The event organiser thanked all the volunteers.”

「活動主辦人 / 籌辦者感謝所有義工。」

Practice 29

> “Please contact the conference organiser for details.”

「詳情請聯絡會議籌辦人。」 organiser = 負責規劃、安排和協調活動 / 群體的人

15. organiser = tool/system for arranging information or schedule — 收納工具；行事曆 / 管理工具

A useful object/technology extension.

Practice 30

> “She keeps appointments in a digital organiser.”

「她把約會記錄在電子行事曆 / 個人資訊管理工具中。」

Practice 31

> “I bought a desk organiser for my pens and papers.”

「我買了一個桌面收納架 / 整理盒來放筆和文件。」 organiser = 用來有系統地整理物件、資訊或日程的工具 / 裝置

The Chinese translation depends strongly on context.

16. organisational = relating to an organisation or its structure/management — 組織的；機構管理的

Practice 32

> “She has excellent organisational skills.”

「她有出色的組織及安排能力。」

Practice 33

> “The company is making major organisational changes.”

「公司正在進行重大的組織架構改革。」 organisational = 與組織、機構結構、管理或安排能力有關的

Common:

- * organisational skills
- * organisational structure
- * organisational culture
- * organisational change

17. organisational skills (能力) — 組織能力 ; 安排能力

This is especially relevant to your teacher description.

Practice 34

> “Teachers need strong organisational skills.”

「教師需要很強的組織和安排能力。」

Practice 35

> “Her organisational skills help her manage several classes efficiently.”

「她的組織能力令她能有效管理多個班別。」

organisational skills = 有效安排時間、資訊、任務、資源和優先次序的能力

This is essentially the noun-family equivalent of:

> an organised person

18. disorganised = lacking order/structure — 混亂的 ; 沒有條理的

The important opposite.

Practice 36

> “His desk was completely disorganised.”

「他的桌面十分*混亂、毫無條理*。」

Practice 37

> “The meeting felt disorganised because nobody knew what to do.”

「會議顯得很*混亂、缺乏組織*，因為沒有人知道該做甚麼。」

*disorganised = 缺乏清晰次序、計劃或結構，因此顯得混亂的***

Can describe:

- * person
- * desk
- * event
- * system
- * notes

Again, contextual Chinese varies.

19. *reorganise = organise again in a different/better structure — 重新組織；改組；重新整理***

A useful family extension.

Practice 38

> “We need to reorganise the filing system.”

「我們需要*重新整理 / 重組*檔案系統。」

Practice 39

> “The company decided to reorganise its departments.”

「公司決定*重組 / 改組*各個部門。」

*reorganise = 改變原有安排或結構，重新建立較適合的新組織方式***

20. reorganisation = restructuring/rearrangement — 重組；改組；重新整理

Practice 40

> “The company announced a major reorganisation.”

「公司宣布進行重大重組 / 架構改組。」

Practice 41

> “The reorganisation of the files took several days.”

「檔案的重新整理花了幾天時間。」 reorganisation = 對原有結構、部門、資訊或安排進行重新組織的過程

Family-extension note: organised crime

A very important fixed compound.

organised crime = 有組織犯罪

Practice 42

> “The police created a unit to investigate organised crime.”

「警方成立了一個專門調查有組織犯罪的部門。」

Practice 43

> “Organised crime often involves structured criminal networks.”

「有組織犯罪往往涉及具有明確結構的犯罪網絡。」 organised crime = 由具有持續結構、分工和協調的犯罪團體所進行的犯罪活動

Here organised contributes the idea of:

> structured and coordinated rather than isolated/spontaneous

Family-extension note: organised religion

organised religion = 制度化宗教；有正式組織的宗教

Practice 44

> “He is interested in spirituality but not in organised religion.”

「他對靈性有興趣，但對制度化 / 有正式組織的宗教沒有興趣。」

Practice 45

> “The study examines the role of organised religion in society.”

「這項研究探討制度化宗教組織在社會中的角色。」

organised religion = 具有正式教義、制度、領袖、組織架構和共同宗教實踐的宗教體系

This is a useful lexicalized compound, not a new unrelated meaning of organise.

Important distinction: organise vs arrange

These often overlap.

arrange often means:

- * put things in a particular position/order;
- * make a particular practical arrangement.

> “Arrange the chairs in a circle.”

「把椅子排列成圓形。」 organise

often implies more structure and coordination.

> “Organise the conference.”

「籌辦 / 統籌會議。」

A conference requires:

- * people
- * time
- * venue
- * tasks
- * resources

so organise is especially natural.

Important distinction: organise vs plan

plan

= decide beforehand what should happen.

organise

= put the practical people/resources/steps in place so it can actually happen.

> “We planned the trip.”

「我們規劃了旅程。」

> “She organised the transport and accommodation.”

「她安排了交通和住宿。」

They often happen together, but they emphasize different stages.

Important distinction: organise vs manage

organise

= establish order/structure and arrangements.

manage

= control, supervise, or successfully handle something over time.

> “She organised the event.”

= 她安排 / 籌辦活動。

> “She managed the event.”

= 她負責管理活動的運作。

One person may do both.

Important distinction: organise vs tidy

tidy

mainly means make a physical place neat.

> “Tidy your desk.”

「整理好你的桌面。」

organise

means arrange according to a useful system.

> “Organise your files.”

「把檔案有系統地整理分類。」

A desk can look tidy but still be badly organised.

That distinction is directly relevant to your sentence:

> “neat and well-organised”

The two adjectives are not redundant.

neat

= visually tidy, clean, orderly-looking well-organised

= methodical and systematically arranged

So Mr Chan looked both:

* 整齊 *

* 做事有條理

Important distinction: organised vs orderly

organised

often suggests deliberate planning/system.

orderly emphasizes things being in a neat, controlled sequence/state.

> an organised teacher

> = 做事有條理的老師

> an orderly classroom

> = 秩序井然的課室

Important distinction: organised vs systematic

organised

broad everyday word.

systematic means following a deliberate, consistent method or procedure.

> “She is very organised.”

「她做事很有條理。」

> “They conducted a systematic review.”

「他們進行了系統性回顧。」

Systematic is more formal/academic and method-focused.

Important distinction: organisation vs institution

organisation

= any structured group created for a purpose.

institution

often refers to a well-established body or social structure.

A charity can be an organisation.

A university can be both:

- * an organisation
- * an institution

But the words emphasize different aspects.

Important distinction: organisation vs company

organisation

very broad:

- * charity
- * government body
- * international body
- * business
- * association

company

specifically a business enterprise.

Every company is an organisation in the broad sense, but not every organisation is a company.

Important distinction: organised vs disorganised

organised

> work, materials, and time are arranged systematically.

disorganised

> structure and arrangements are unclear or confused.

For a person:

> “She is organised.”

= 她很有條理。

> “He is disorganised.”

= 他做事很混亂 / 沒有條理。

British vs American spelling

Your passage uses British spelling:

> organised

British English

- * organise
- * organised
- * organising
- * organisation
- * organiser
- * organisational

American English

- * organize
- * organized
- * organizing
- * organization
- * organizer
- * organizational

Important nuance: British English also sometimes uses -ize spellings in certain styles, so organize is not exclusively American. But organise is very common British spelling and matches your passage.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

- * organise objects/files = 整理 / 分類
- * organise thoughts/ideas = 整理思路
- * organise an event = 籌辦 / 統籌
- * organise transport/accommodation = 安排
- * organise time/work = 有系統地安排
- * organise people = 把人組織起來
- * organise workers = 組織工人 / 工會化
- * organised person = 做事有條理的人
- * organised material/report = 結構安排清晰
- * organisation — process = 組織 / 安排
- * organisation — institution = 組織 / 機構
- * organisation — structure = 結構編排
- * organiser — person = 籌辦者
- * organiser — tool = 收納 / 日程管理工具
- * organisational = 組織 / 機構管理相關的
- * organisational skills = 組織安排能力
- * disorganised = 混亂 / 缺乏條理的
- * reorganise = 重新整理 / 改組
- * reorganisation = 重組 / 改組
- * organised crime = 有組織犯罪
- * organised religion = 制度化 / 有正式組織的宗教

I would exclude obscure biological or specialist uses here; they do not add enough value for this learner-focused project.

For your original sentence

> “He was quite tall and thin, and he always looked neat and well-organised.”

The exact meaning is:

*well-organised = 做事有條理、有系統，似乎能妥善安排自己的工作、時間和物品

Natural translation:

> 「他身形頗高也偏瘦，而且總是看起來很整齊、很有條理。」***

And there is a nice semantic contrast inside the sentence itself:

> neat → 外表 / 物品看起來整齊

> well-organised → 做事、安排和管理方式有條理

So the two adjectives reinforce each other without meaning exactly the same thing.
