public funds = 來自政府 / 公共財政、用於公共用途的資金

39. public good (公共利益 / 公共財) — 公共利益 ; 公共財

This has a general and an economics meaning.

A. General

> “The policy was intended to serve the public good.”

「這項政策旨在服務公共利益。」

B. Economics

A public good is a technical economics concept.

public good = 一種通常具有非排他性及非競爭性的商品 / 服務

The technical economics sense should be kept distinct from ordinary “good for society.”

Important distinction: public vs private

This is the central contrast.

public

can mean:

- * open to everyone;
- * done openly;
- * belonging to government/public institutions;
- * relating to society at large.

private

can mean:

- * restricted to particular people;
- * personal/confidential;
- * privately owned;
- * not government-run.

Compare:

> public speaking

> = 公開演講

> private conversation

> = 私下談話

> public hospital

> = 公立 / 公營醫院

> private hospital

> = 私立醫院

The exact contrast depends on context.

Important distinction: public speaking vs speaking publicly

They are related but grammatically different.

public speaking

is the activity/skill:

> “Public speaking makes me nervous.”

= 公開演講令我緊張。 speak publicly means:

> say something openly before the public

> “She spoke publicly about the problem.”

= 她公開談論這個問題。

So:

public speaking = 活動 / 技能

speak publicly = 公開地說

Important distinction: public vs open

These overlap but are not identical.

public

focuses on:

- * access by general people;
- * society/the public;
- * non-private status.

open

focuses on:

- * not closed/restricted;
- * available for participation.

Compare:

> “The meeting is open to the public.”

= 會議開放給公眾參加。

Here both concepts appear together.

Important distinction: public vs general public

the public

already means:

> people in general.

the general public emphasizes:

> ordinary people rather than specialists, employees, members, etc.

> “The report is written for the general public.”

= 報告是寫給一般大眾看的。

Important distinction: public vs audience

the public

= society/general people broadly audience

= the specific people watching/listening to a particular presentation, show, etc.

Your passage has:

> public speaking

but the people actually listening were:

> the audience

So:

public = describes the type of speaking audience = the actual listeners

Important distinction: public vs publicized

public

= already open/known to people publicized

= actively promoted or made widely known

> “The information is public.”

= 資料已公開。

> “The company publicized the information.”

= 公司主動廣泛公布 / 宣傳資料。

Important distinction: publicity vs advertising

These overlap but are different.

advertising

= paid/promotional messages controlled by an advertiser

publicity

= public/media attention, which may not be paid for or fully controlled

A company can buy:

> advertising

but receive:

> publicity

through media coverage.

So:

advertising = 廣告宣傳

publicity = 公眾 / 傳媒曝光

Important distinction: publicity vs public relations

publicity

= actual attention/exposure in media/public public relations

= ongoing work of managing relationships, reputation, and communication with publics/stakeholders

So PR may generate publicity, but they are not identical.

Important distinction: public school — US vs UK

This deserves special attention.

United States

> public school

= government-funded school

= 公立學校

United Kingdom

Traditional public school usage refers to certain prestigious fee-paying private schools.

Therefore the same phrase can point to almost opposite ownership models across varieties.

Important distinction: public company vs private company

In broad business usage:

public company

= shares may be publicly held/traded or company has public-company legal status

private company

= ownership is privately held and shares are not generally offered to the public

The exact legal definition varies by country.

Important distinction: public figure vs celebrity

public figure is broad:

> someone whose role/status puts them in public attention.

This can include:

- * politicians;
- * business leaders;
- * activists;
- * athletes;
- * entertainers.

celebrity

focuses more specifically on fame.

So not every public figure is necessarily a celebrity.

Important distinction: public knowledge vs common knowledge

These overlap.

public knowledge

= not secret; openly known common knowledge

= widely known and generally accepted as familiar

Something can be public information without being common knowledge if few people actually notice it.

Important distinction: public domain — public information vs copyright

Information sense:

> “The report is already in the public domain.”

= 報告已經公開。

Copyright sense:

> “The novel entered the public domain.”

= 小說進入公有領域，不再受原有專有著作權限制。

Context matters.

Important distinction: public = government vs public = people generally

Compare:

> public hospital

= 政府 / 公共資金支持的醫院

versus:

> public opinion

= 社會大眾的意見

The first concerns public institutions.

The second concerns people in society.

These need different mental concepts even though both derive from the broader notion of the public.

Important distinction: public = open vs public = known

Compare:

> “a public event”

= everyone / relevant members of the public can attend

versus:

> “The information is public.”

= everyone can know/access it.

One is access to an occasion.

The other is access to information.

Family-extension sweep

The practical public family is rich in access, society, government, information, and reputation:

- * public speaking = 公開演講
- * in public = 在公開場合
- * public event/place/facility = 向公眾開放的活動 / 場所 / 設施
- * the public = 公眾 / 大眾
- * members of the public = 公眾人士
- * public opinion = 民意
- * public interest = 公共利益
- * public concern = 公眾關注
- * public sector = 公共部門
- * public service = 公共服務 / 公職
- * public transport = 公共交通
- * public school = 公立學校 (美) ; 英式另有特殊義
- * public hospital/healthcare = 公立 / 公營醫療
- * public office = 公職
- * public figure = 公眾人物
- * public life = 公共生活 / 公眾事務
- * public = not secret = 已公開的
- * make public = 公開 / 公布
- * go public — reveal = 公開說出
- * go public — finance = 上市
- * public company = 公眾 / 上市公司
- * publicly traded = 公開上市交易
- * public knowledge = 眾所周知 / 公開資訊
- * public record = 公開紀錄
- * public domain = 公開領域 / 公有領域
- * public-facing = 面向公眾 / 客戶的
- * public access = 公眾存取 / 進入權
- * publicly = 公開地 / 以公共資金方式
- * publicity = 公眾 / 傳媒曝光
- * publicize/publicise = 公開宣傳 / 公布
- * public relations = 公共關係 / 公關
- * public image = 公眾形象
- * public profile = 公眾曝光度 / 知名度
- * public property = 公共財產
- * public funds = 公款
- * public good = 公共利益 / 公共財

The main semantic branches are:

> open / visible to other people

> people in society generally > government/public institutions

> not private or secret

> public attention / reputation

> public speaking

= 「公開演講 / 在人前向觀眾發言這項活動」

In your context, the pressure came from the fact that the speaking was:

- * visible to many people;
- * heard by many people;
- * performed before colleagues and senior managers;
- * open to evaluation by an audience.

So the key mapping is:

public speaking = 在一群觀眾面前公开发言 / 演講

The most important learner contrasts are:

> public speaking

> = 公開演講

> in public

> = 在公開場合

> a public event

> = 向公眾開放 / 公開的活動

> the public

> = 公眾 / 大眾

> public opinion

> = 民意

> public sector

> = 公共部門

> public transport

> = 公共交通

> public information

> = 公開資訊

> make it public

> = 把它公開

> public figure

> = 公眾人物

> publicity

> = 公眾 / 傳媒曝光

So public is much richer than simply:

> public = 公開的

In your passage specifically, the meaning is:

*public = 在其他人可以看到和聽到的情況下，面對觀眾公開進行的.
