Your sentence:

> “People often describe her as warm, patient, and quietly wise.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, the key expression is:

> quietly wise

Quietly means in a restrained, understated, non-showy way.

Your grandmother is wise, but she does not constantly display, announce, or draw attention to that wisdom. Instead, people notice it through the calm way she listens and gives thoughtful advice.

繁體中文： 以低調、不張揚、不刻意展示自己的方式；quietly wise 指有智慧但不炫耀、不高調表現，智慧自然地從言行中流露出來

中文翻譯：

> “People often describe her as warm, patient, and quietly wise.”

「人們常常形容她親切、有耐性，而且帶著一種低調而不張揚的智慧。」

Here:

quietly wise = 有智慧，但不刻意表現或炫耀，而是以平靜、低調的方式自然流露出來

1. quiet = making little or no sound (安靜的) — 安靜的；沒有太多聲音的

This is the basic physical meaning.

Practice 1

> “The room was very quiet.”

「房間非常安靜。」

Practice 2

> “It is usually quiet here at night.”

「這裡晚上通常很寧靜 / 安靜。」

Practice 4

> “He is quiet around people he does not know well.”

「他跟不熟悉的人相處時比較安靜少話。」 quiet person = 不太多說話、不喜歡大聲或主動成為注意焦點的人

Important:

quiet does not automatically mean:

- * shy
- * unfriendly
- * sad

A quiet person may simply prefer speaking less.

3. quiet = calm / peaceful (環境) — 寧靜的；平靜的

This emphasizes absence of disturbance rather than merely low sound.

quietness = 一個人平靜、少話、不張揚的性格或表現方式

26. quietude = deep calm / stillness (寧靜) — 寧靜 ; 靜謐

This is the word you specifically mentioned.

Quietude is a genuine English word, but it is much less common and more literary/formal than quietness.

Practice 52

> “She enjoyed the quietude of the early morning.”

「她很享受清晨的寧靜與靜謐。」

Practice 53

> “The garden offered a rare sense of quietude.”

「這座花園帶來一種難得的寧靜感。」

quietude = 一種深沉、持續、沒有騷擾的平靜和寧靜狀態

Register:

> literary / formal / uncommon in everyday speech

For most ordinary situations:

> quietness

> peace and quiet

> calm

are more natural.

27. peace and quiet — 清靜；寧靜

A very common fixed expression.

Practice 54

> “I just need some peace and quiet.”

「我只想要一點清靜。」

Practice 55

> “She went to the countryside for some peace and quiet.”

「她去了鄉間享受一些寧靜清閒。」

peace and quiet = 沒有噪音、騷擾、壓力或太多活動的安靜環境

Much more common conversationally than quietude.

28. quiet life — 平靜生活；低調生活

Practice 56

> “She prefers a quiet life.”

「她喜歡過平靜而低調的生活。」

Practice 57

> “Tenants have a right to quiet enjoyment of the property.”

「租戶有權不受不合理干擾地使用和享用該物業。」

Practice 65

> “Constant unauthorized entry may interfere with the tenant’s quiet enjoyment.”

「持續未經允許進入住所，可能侵犯租戶安寧使用物業的權利。」 quiet enjoyment = 租戶 / 佔用者依法能在沒有不合理干擾下使用物業的權利

Here quiet does not literally mean “no noise.”

Important distinction: quiet vs silent

quiet

= little sound

> “The room is quiet.”

There may still be some sound.

silent

= no sound, or someone is not speaking at all.

> “The room fell silent.”

So:

silent is usually stronger than quiet.

Important distinction: quiet vs calm

quiet

can refer to:

- * sound
- * activity
- * personality
- * low-profile behaviour

calm

focuses on:

- * lack of agitation
- * emotional steadiness
- * lack of turbulence

A room can be quiet but not calming.

A person can be calm while speaking normally.

Important distinction: quiet vs peaceful

quiet

mainly emphasizes low sound/activity/disturbance.

peaceful

emphasizes freedom from conflict, stress, or disturbance.

> “a quiet street”

= 聲音 / 活動少的街道

> “a peaceful place”

= 令人感到平和安寧的地方

They overlap, but peaceful is more emotionally positive.

Important distinction: quiet vs shy*

Very important for personality.

quiet

= does not speak much or draw attention.

shy

= feels nervous or uncomfortable socially.

Someone may be:

> quiet but confident

or:

> talkative but shy in particular situations.

So your grandmother being quiet does not imply shyness.

Important distinction: quiet vs reserved*

quiet

focuses on speaking little or being understated.

reserved means someone is slow to reveal feelings, thoughts, or personality openly.

A reserved person is often quiet, but the ideas are not identical.

Important distinction: quiet vs introverted

quiet

describes observable behaviour.

introverted

describes a broader personality preference, especially gaining comfort from lower-stimulation environments or solitary/small-group interaction.

A person may be introverted but still talk a lot with close friends.

So they should not be treated as synonyms.

Important distinction: quiet vs low-key

quiet

can mean understated.

low-key

very often means:

> deliberately relaxed, restrained, informal, or not attention-seeking.

> “a low-key celebration”

= 一場低調簡單的慶祝活動

They overlap strongly in figurative contexts, but quiet has many additional literal uses.

Important distinction: quietly vs silently

quietly

= with little sound.

> “She spoke quietly.”

This means she spoke softly.

silently

= without speaking or making sound.

> “She sat silently.”

This means she said nothing.

So:

> speak silently ❌ in ordinary literal usage

but:

> speak quietly ✅

Important distinction: quietly wise vs quiet person

This is central to your sentence.

quiet person

= speaks little / is not noisy or attention-seeking.

quietly wise

= possesses wisdom in a low-key, understated way.

Your sentence does not necessarily mean:

> she is wise because she is quiet.

It means:

> her wisdom is expressed without showing off.

Important distinction: quietly vs calmly

quietly

can mean:

- > with little sound
- > or
- > in an understated way.

calmly

means:

- > without emotional agitation.

For example:

- > “She quietly disagreed.”

may mean she did so without making a public fuss.

- > “She calmly disagreed.”

means she was emotionally composed.

Important distinction: quietness vs quietude

quietness

= ordinary neutral noun

- > “the quietness of the room”

「房間的安靜」

quietude

= deep calm/stillness; literary or formal

- > “the quietude of the countryside”

「鄉郊的靜謐」

For everyday learner usage:

quietness is far more important.

Quietude is useful recognition vocabulary rather than a high-priority production word.

Important distinction: quietness vs silence

quietness

= low level of noise/activity.

silence

= complete or near-complete absence of sound.

Therefore:

> quietness ≠ absolute silence.

Important distinction: quiet vs quieten

quiet — verb

> “She quieted the child.”

= 她令孩子安靜下來。

quieten

> “The crowd quietened.”

= 人群安靜下來。

Both are valid.

Quieten is particularly common in British English.

Important distinction: quiet vs quietly

quiet

= adjective

> “She is quiet.”

「她很安靜。」

quietly

= adverb

> “She spoke quietly.”

「她輕聲說話。」

But importantly:

> quietly wise

does not mean:

> “wisely at a low volume.”

It means:

> wise in an understated, unshowy way.

Family-extension note

For your original sentence

> “People often describe her as warm, patient, and quietly wise.”

The exact meaning is:

quietly = 以低調、不張揚、不刻意展示自己的方式

Therefore:

> quietly wise

= 「有智慧，但不炫耀、不高調表現，而是從平靜的言行中自然流露出智慧」

This fits the next part of your passage very well:

> “She is not the sort of person who tries to dominate a conversation, but when she does speak, people listen.”

That sentence essentially illustrates what quietly wise means.

Her wisdom is not:

- > loud
- > performative
- > attention-seeking

Instead, it is:

- > restrained
- > thoughtful
- > understated
- > respected

So the most important distinction here is:

> quiet

> = 安靜的 / 話不多的

while:

> quietly wise

> = 低調而有智慧，不需要刻意展示自己

And for the extended family:

> quietness = ordinary 「安靜 / 寧靜」

> quietude = more literary 「靜謐 / 深沉寧靜」 > quietly = 安靜地 / 低調地

> quieten = 使安靜 / 安靜下來.
