

Word family: realise / realize / realised / realized / realising / realizing / realisation / realization

Base word: realise / realize

Past tense: realised / realized

Past participle: realised / realized

ing form: realising / realizing

Related noun: realisation / realization

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun-related form (相關名詞)

British English: realise, realised, realisation

American English: realize, realized, realization

Your sentence:

> “That was the first time I really spoke to him, and within ten minutes I realised he was not the kind of person you forget easily.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, realise means to become aware of or understand a fact that you had not fully understood before.

The speaker talked to Mr. Wong and quickly came to understand that he was unusually memorable.

繁體中文: 經過觀察、經歷或思考後，開始明白或察覺一件之前未有完全意識到的事實

中文翻譯:

> “...within ten minutes I realised he was not the kind of person you forget easily.”

「.....不到十分鐘，我就意識到 / 發現他不是那種容易令人忘記的人。」

Here:

realise that... = 開始明白 / 意識到某件原本未完全察覺的事實

1. realise + fact / realise that... (事實 / 情況) — 意識到 ; 察覺 ; 明白

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: To suddenly or gradually become aware of, understand, or recognize a fact or situation.

Practice 1 — Original

> “Within ten minutes I realised he was not the kind of person you forget easily.”

「不到十分鐘，我就意識到 / 發現他不是那種容易令人忘記的人。」

Practice 2

> “I suddenly realised that I had left my phone at home.”

「我突然意識到 / 發現自己把手機留在家裡了。」

Practice 3

> “She did not realise how serious the problem was.”

「她當時沒有意識到這個問題有多嚴重。」 realise = 開始察覺、理解或承認某項之前未完全知道或注意到的事實

Common patterns:

- * realise that...
- * realise what...
- * realise how...
- * realise why...
- * realise the importance of...
- * realise the danger

These are one underlying sense rather than separate meanings.

2. realise + dream/ambition/goal/plan (夢想 / 抱負 / 目標 / 計劃) — 實現 ; 使成為現實

This is a genuinely different meaning.

Here, realise does not mean “understand.”

It means to make something hoped for, planned, or imagined actually happen.

Practice 4

> “She finally realised her dream of becoming a doctor.”

「她終於實現了成為醫生的夢想。」

Practice 5

> “The project helped the community realise its long-term goals.”

「這項計劃幫助社區實現長遠目標。」 realise a dream/goal/ambition = 令原本只是希望、構想或目標的事情真正成為現實

Compare:

> “I realised that I was wrong.”

= 我意識到自己錯了。

> “I realised my dream.”

= 我實現了自己的夢想。

These clearly require different mental concepts.

3. realise + potential/possibility/value (潛力 / 可能性 / 價值) — 發揮 ; 實現 ; 充分取得

A common extension of Meaning 2 involves something that exists as a possibility but has not yet been fully achieved or expressed.

Practice 6

> “The new system has not yet realised its full potential.”

「這套新系統尚未充分發揮其全部潛力。」

Practice 7

> “With proper support, the plan could realise significant benefits.”

「在適當支援下，這項計劃可以真正帶來 / 實現顯著效益。」 realise potential/value/benefits = 使原本潛在的能力、價值或好處真正發揮或成為實際成果

For database purposes, I would merge this with Meaning 2 rather than count it separately.

The underlying idea is still:

> turn something potential or intended into an actual result

The Golden Manual says contextual subtypes should be merged when they share the same underlying semantic concept.

4. realise + money/value/assets (資產 / 金錢) — 變現 ; 出售後取得款項

This is an established financial/business meaning.

Meaning: To convert an asset into money, especially by selling it, or to obtain the monetary value represented by an asset.

Practice 8

> “The company realised several million dollars from the sale of the property.”

「公司出售該物業後套現 / 取得了數百萬元款項。」

Practice 9

> “He sold some investments to realise a profit.”

「他出售部分投資，以實現 / 套取盈利。」

realise an asset/value/profit = 透過出售、交易或其他方式，把資產或潛在價值轉化成實際金錢或已確認收益

This is distinct enough to keep because a learner who only knows realise = 意識到 would completely misunderstand financial sentences.

The SOP specifically allows established financial meanings when ordinary learners are reasonably likely to encounter them.

5. realise + price/amount (出售所得) — 售得 ; 取得某個價格

Closely related to the financial sense above, realise can mean that something brings a particular amount of money when sold.

Practice 10

> “The painting realised £50,000 at auction.”

「那幅畫在拍賣會上售得五萬英鎊。」

Practice 11

> “The property realised far more than the owner expected.”

「該物業最後的成交價 / 售價遠高於業主預期。」 something realises an amount = 某項資產出售時取得某個實際金額

I would merge this with Meaning 4 for database counting because both concern converting value into actual money.

Related form: realisation / realization

The noun has corresponding senses.

realisation = becoming aware or understanding (意識到 ; 領悟) **

Practice 12

> “The realisation that he had made a mistake came too late.”

「他到最後才*意識到自己犯了錯*，但已經太遲。」

Practice 13

> “She came to the sudden realisation that she needed a change.”

「她突然*領悟到 / 意識到*自己需要作出改變。」 realisation = 開始明白或察覺某個之前未充分意識到的事實

realisation = achievement of something planned or imagined (實現) **

Practice 14

> “The building represents the realisation of a long-held dream.”

「這座建築代表一個多年夢想的*實現*。」

Practice 15

> “The project moved closer to realisation.”

「這項計劃進一步接近實現 / 落實。」 realisation = 原本的夢想、計劃或構想真正成為現實

So the noun preserves the same important contrast as the verb:

> awareness → 領悟 / 意識 versus > making real → 實現

Important distinction: realise vs know

know

means that the information is already part of your knowledge.

> “I know he lives nearby.”

「我知道他住在附近。」

realise

focuses on the moment or process of becoming aware of something.

> “I realised he lived nearby.”

「我當時才發現 / 意識到他住在附近。」

So:

know = 已經知道某項資訊

realise = 從原本沒有充分察覺，到開始明白那項事實

This distinction is central to your original sentence.

Important distinction: realise vs understand

They overlap, but the focus differs.

understand

= comprehend the meaning, reason, mechanism, etc.

> “I understand how the machine works.”

「我明白這部機器如何運作。」

realise

= become aware that something is true or important

> “I realised the machine was broken.”

「我發現 / 意識到這部機器壞了。」

Realise often contains a before → after change in awareness.

Important distinction: realise vs notice

notice

usually focuses on perceiving something through observation.

> “I noticed that the door was open.”

「我注意到門開着。」

realise

focuses on understanding what something means or becoming aware of a fact.

> “I realised that I had forgotten to lock the door.”

「我意識到自己忘了鎖門。」

You can notice evidence and then realise its significance.

Important distinction: realise vs recognize recognize often means identifying someone/something previously known, or acknowledging a particular fact/status.

> “I recognized him immediately.”

「我立即認出他。」

realise

means becoming aware of a fact:

> “I realised he was my old teacher.”

「我才意識到他原來是我以前的老師。」

So they may occur together:

> recognise the person → realise who the person is Important distinction: realise vs achieve

For goals, the two overlap.

achieve

focuses on successfully reaching a goal through effort.

> “She achieved her goal.”

「她達成了目標。」

realise

often emphasizes making a hope, dream, plan, or possibility become real.

> “She realised her childhood dream.”

「她實現了童年夢想。」

Therefore:

* achieve a goal is extremely natural.
* realise a dream is especially natural.
* Both can overlap with ambitions or objectives.

Important distinction: real vs realise

These are related in form and concept, but they are not interchangeable.

real

= existing in fact rather than imagined

realise

in one of its major meanings:

= make something real

This relationship makes the “fulfil a dream” meaning easier to remember:

> realise a dream

> = make the dream become real

However, in:

> “I realised I was wrong.”

the meaning has developed into:

> become aware / understand not literally “make real.”

Spelling note: realise vs realize

Both are standard.

British English

realise is very common.

American English

realize is standard.

Importantly, *ize spellings also occur in British English, particularly in some publishing styles, so realize should not be treated as exclusively American.

For your passage, realised is fully natural British English.

Family-extension note

The useful practical family is:

* realise / realize

* realised / realized

* realising / realizing

* realisation / realization

I would *not automatically add real, reality, realistic, or realism as if they were ordinary inflectional members of the same vocabulary entry*.

They are clearly related lexically, but they constitute a much broader real/reality family with their own extensive polysemy. Since real is also already in your mapped database list, it should not be regenerated here under the duplicate rule. The Manual explicitly says already-covered targets should not automatically be generated again.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
realise a fact / realise that...	從原本沒有充分察覺的狀態，開始明白、發現或意識到某項事實或情況 realise a dream/goal/plan	使原本只是希望、構想、目標或計劃的事情真正發生並成為現實 realise potential/benefits	使原本潛在的能力、價值或好處真正發揮並形成實際成果；屬於「使成為現實」的延伸 realise an asset/profit/value	透過出售、交易等方式把資產或潛在價值轉化成實際金錢或已確認收益 something realises an amount	某項資產在出售時取得某個實際金額；屬於金融「變現」的同一核心概念
realisation — awareness	開始明白或察覺一項之前未充分意識到的事實
realisation — fulfilment	原本的夢想、構想或計劃真正成為現實

For your original sentence

> “Within ten minutes I realised he was not the kind of person you forget easily.”

The exact meaning is:

realise = 開始意識到、察覺或明白一件之前沒有充分知道的事實

So:

I realised he was not the kind of person you forget easily

= 我很快就意識到 / 發現，他不是那種容易令人忘記的人

For your database, I would count 3 genuinely distinct core polysemy meanings for realise:

1. become aware of / understand a fact
2. make a dream, plan, goal, or possibility become real
3. finance — convert an asset/value into actual money or obtain the proceeds

I would merge realise potential into #2 and realise £50,000 / realise a profit into #3 rather than artificially increasing the count.