> “The red and blue models cost $50 and $60, respectively.”

「紅色和藍色型號的價格*分別*是五十元和六十元。」 respectively = 按照前面提及項目的相同次序 , 分別對應後面的資料

This belongs with respectful, not with the “admiration” sense of respectful.

Important distinction: respect vs admire*

respect

often means:

> regard someone highly because of their character, ability, experience, or principles.

admire

often emphasizes:

> feeling impressed by someone or something.

> “I respect her judgment.”

= 我尊重她的判斷。

> “I admire her courage.”

= 我很欣賞她的勇氣。

They overlap, but respect often includes a stronger sense of recognizing someone's worth or standing.

Important distinction: respect vs like*

You can respect someone without necessarily liking them personally.

like

= have positive personal feelings toward someone.

respect

= recognize their qualities, ability, principles, rights, or worth.

> “I don't always like him, but I respect him.”

「我未必總是喜歡他，但我尊重他。」

This is an important distinction.

Important distinction: respect vs fear

Sometimes people say:

> “They respect him.”

but mean genuine regard.

Respect should not be confused with:

> being afraid of someone.

A person may obey someone because of fear without truly respecting them.

Important distinction: respect someone vs respect someone's decision respect someone

can mean:

> admire and hold that person in high regard.

respect someone's decision usually means:

> accept their right to make that choice even if you disagree.

So the second does not necessarily imply admiration.

Important distinction: respect vs politeness

respect

is the attitude of valuing someone's rights, qualities, feelings, or position.

politeness

is socially appropriate courteous behaviour.

Someone may speak politely without genuinely respecting someone, although respectful behaviour is usually polite.

Important distinction: respectful vs respectable

This is crucial.

respectful

= showing respect to others

> “a respectful student”

= 一位尊重別人、有禮的學生

respectable

= deserving respect / socially acceptable / reasonably good

> “a respectable career”

= 體面的事業

So:

respectful = gives respect

respectable = deserves/receives respect or is socially acceptable

Important distinction: respected vs respectable respected means:

> actually held in high regard by other people.

> “a respected teacher”

= 一位受人尊敬的老師

respectable

means:

> considered decent, proper, acceptable, or reasonably good.

> “a respectable job”

= 一份體面的工作

A person can be respectable without being especially respected.

Important distinction: respectful vs respective

These look similar but mean completely different things.

respectful

= 有禮、尊重人的 respective

= 各自的

> “their respective homes”

= 他們各自的家

This is a high-value learner contrast.

Important distinction: respective vs respectively

respective

= adjective

> “their respective roles”

= 他們各自的角色

respectively

= adverb

> “They are 20 and 25 respectively.”

= 他們分別是二十和二十五歲。

Important distinction: respect — admiration vs respect — aspect

A major polysemy contrast.

respect — admiration

> “I have great respect for her.”

= 我非常敬重她。 respect — aspect

> “In this respect, we are different.”

= 在這方面，我們不同。

Same spelling, completely different concept.

Important distinction: with respect to vs with respect with respect to

= regarding / concerning

> “with respect to your question”

= 關於你的問題

with respect

can mean:

> politely / while showing respect and in expressions such as:

> “With respect, I disagree.”

= 「恕我直言 / 恕我不能同意。」

These should not be confused.

Family-extension note

Following the same curation style, these are especially useful members and constructions of the respect family:

- * respect someone — admire = 尊重 / 敬重某人
- * respect someone's decision/rights = 尊重某人的決定 / 權利
- * respect rules/boundaries = 遵守 / 尊重規則與界線
- * respect — admiration = 敬意 / 尊重
- * have respect for = 敬重
- * show respect = 表示尊重
- * earn/gain respect = 贏得尊重
- * lose respect for = 失去對.....的尊重
- * self-respect = 自尊 / 自重
- * mutual respect = 相互尊重
- * in this respect = 在這方面
- * with respect to = 關於
- * in respect of = 關於 / 就.....而言
- * pay your respects = 致意 / 表達敬意
- * respectful = 尊重人的 / 有禮的
- * respectfully = 尊重地 / 有禮地
- * respectable — socially good = 體面的 / 可敬的
- * respectable — reasonably good = 相當不錯 / 可觀的
- * respective = 各自的
- * respectively = 分別

As demonstrated by the reference style, these should be included because they are useful modern family members and constructions, while still distinguishing genuine meanings of respect from related forms such as respective, whose modern meaning has diverged substantially.

For your original sentence

> “She is widely respected in my family and even in the neighbourhood.”

The exact meaning is:

*respected = 因個人品格、智慧、行為或其他正面特質而受到他人的敬重和高度評價

Therefore:

> widely respected

= 「受到很多人尊重 / 廣受敬重」

In context, the next sentence explains why:

> “People often describe her as warm, patient, and quietly wise.”

So respect here is not merely about behaving politely toward her. It means people genuinely *hold her in high regard because of the kind of person she is.

That distinction is central:

> respect her

> = 敬重她這個人

while:

> respect her decision

> = 尊重她作決定的權利

and:

> in this respect

> = 在這方面

These are three very different modern uses of the same word family.
