

Absolutely — rose is a very strong target because your passage uses it literally as a flowering plant / flower, while the same spelling is also the past tense of rise, and the wider family develops important meanings in colour, figurative description, plant compounds, symbols, and related forms such as rosy.

Word family: rose / roses / rosy / rose-coloured / rosehip / rosewood

Base word: rose

Plural: roses

Related adjective: rosy

Useful lexical extensions: rose-coloured, rosehip, rosewood, rose garden, rose bush

Important homograph: rose = past tense of rise

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / adjective-related uses (相關形容詞) / verb form of rise

Your sentence:

> “She grows flowers like roses, jasmine, and marigolds...”

Meaning in your passage: rose = rose flower / rose plant — 玫瑰；玫瑰花

Here, roses refers to the flowering plants / flowers she grows in her garden.

繁體中文：

玫瑰屬植物，尤其指以芳香、多層花瓣的花朵作觀賞用途的玫瑰花 / 玫瑰植物

Natural translation:

> “She grows flowers like roses, jasmine, and marigolds.”

「她也會種玫瑰、茉莉和金盞花之類的花。」

So here:

> rose = 玫瑰花 / 玫瑰植物

1. rose = flower/blossom (花朵) — 玫瑰花

The basic literal noun meaning.

Practice 1 — Original

> “She grows roses, jasmine, and marigolds.”

「她種玫瑰、茉莉和金盞花。」

Practice 2

> “He gave her a red rose.”

「他送了她一朵紅玫瑰。」

Practice 3

> “The vase contained six white roses.”

「花瓶裡有六朵白玫瑰花。」 rose = 玫瑰植物所開出的花朵

2. rose = rose plant / bush (植物本身) — 玫瑰 ; 玫瑰植株

The noun can refer to the whole plant, not just the blossom.

Practice 4

> “This rose needs more sunlight.”

「這棵玫瑰植株需要更多陽光。」

Practice 5

> “She planted three roses beside the wall.”

「她在牆邊種了三棵玫瑰。」

Context determines the Chinese.

「紅玫瑰常被用作浪漫愛情的象徵。」

Practice 11

> “The rose became a symbol of beauty in the poem.”

I would keep this as a symbolic extension, not pretend it is a wholly separate lexical meaning.

7. rose = past tense of rise (動詞) — 上升；升起；站起來；增加

This is the crucial homograph.

Here rose has nothing to do with flowers.

Practice 14

> “The sun rose at six.”

「太陽六點升起。」

Practice 15

> “Prices rose sharply last year.”

rose = rise 的過去式，表示某人 / 某物上升、升起、站起來或數量增加

This is a separate lexical family from the noun rose.

8. rose = stood up (rise 的過去式) — 站起來

Another common context of rise → rose, but still the same verb family.

Practice 16

> “She rose from her chair.”

「她從椅子上站了起來。」

Practice 17

> “Everyone rose when the guest entered.”

「客人進來時，大家都站起來。」 rose — rise = 從坐著 / 躺著的位置站起或起身

This is a contextual branch of rise, not another meaning of the flower word.

> “Rosewood is valued for its colour and grain.”

Practice 32

> “She wants to create a small rose garden.”

「她想建造一個小型玫瑰園。」 rose bush = 玫瑰植株作為灌木來描述時的常見名稱

18. come up roses / everything is coming up roses (成語) — 一切順利；形勢大好

A common idiomatic extension, especially in American English.

Practice 37

> “Things aren’t always coming up roses, but we’re making progress.”

「事情不可能永遠一帆風順，但我們正在取得進展。」 come up roses = 事情發展得非常順利、結果令人滿意

I would keep this under idioms rather than treat it as a meaning of bare rose.

Important distinction: rose = flower vs rose = past tense of rise

This is the single most important distinction.

Noun

> “She grows roses.”

「她種玫瑰。」

Verb

> “The temperature rose.”

「氣溫上升了。」

Same spelling:

> rose

but completely different lexical identity.

The verb belongs to:

> rise → rose → risen

Important distinction: rose vs rise

rose past tense:

> “The sun rose yesterday at six.”

rise

base/present:

> “The sun rises at six.”

risen

past participle:

> “The sun has risen.”

So:

> rise → rose → risen

not:

> rise → rised ❌

Important distinction: rise vs raise

This becomes important because of rose.

usually intransitive:

the subject moves upward itself.

> “Prices rose.”

「價格上升。」 raise transitive:

someone/something causes another thing to move higher.

> “The company raised prices.”

「公司提高價格。」

So:

> prices rose

> the company raised prices

Important distinction: rose vs flower

rose

specific type of flowering plant/flower.

flower general category.

Every rose flower is a flower, but not every flower is a rose.

Important distinction: rose vs rosy

rose noun/colour term.

> rose colour

rosy

adjective.

> rosy cheeks

> rosy future

So:

> rosy cheeks = 紅潤雙頰 not normally:

> rose cheeks for that meaning.

Important distinction: rosy = healthy colour vs rosy = optimistic

Literal:

> rosy cheeks

= 紅潤的雙頰

Figurative:

> rosy future

= 樂觀美好的前景

Same metaphor:

pleasant rose colour → positive attractive outlook

Important distinction: rose-coloured vs rosy

For literal colour:

> rose-coloured dress

> = 玫瑰色裙子

> rosy cheeks

> = 紅潤臉頰

For figurative optimism:

> rosy outlook

> = 樂觀前景

> rose-tinted glasses

> = 過度美化事情的眼光

Different preferred collocations.

Important distinction: rose vs rosé

This is worth flagging because the spelling is extremely similar.

rose

= 玫瑰 ; rise 的過去式

rosé

= 粉紅葡萄酒

They are different lexical words, and rosé normally retains the accent in careful writing.

Example:

> “They served rosé with dinner.”

「晚餐時他們供應了粉紅葡萄酒。」

This is a spelling/lexical-identity note, not another meaning of rose.

Important distinction: rosewood vs rose plant

Rosewood is not normally wood from a rose bush.

It is a name for several valuable reddish/brown hardwoods.

So:

> rose bush = 玫瑰灌木

> rosewood = 玫瑰木 / 紫檀類硬木

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

* rose — blossom = 玫瑰花

* rose — plant = 玫瑰植株
 * rose — colour = 玫瑰色
 * rose — symbol = 愛情 / 美麗等象徵
 * rose — emblem = 玫瑰徽號
 * rose — past of rise = 上升 / 升起 / 起身
 * rosy — colour/complexion = 紅潤 / 玫瑰色
 * rosy — figurative = 樂觀 / 前景美好
 * rose-coloured = 玫瑰色的
 * rose-tinted/coloured glasses = 過度樂觀地看事情
 * rosehip = 玫瑰果 / 薔薇果
 * rosewood = 玫瑰木 / 紫檀類木材
 * rose garden = 玫瑰園
 * rose bush = 玫瑰灌木
 * come up roses = 一切順利
 * rosé = 粉紅葡萄酒 — closely spelled but separate lexical identity

I would stop there rather than add every rose species or transparent botanical compound.

And the single most important learner trap is:

> rose → 玫瑰

> rose → *rise 的過去式：上升 / 升起 > rosy → 紅潤的 / 樂觀美好的

> rosé → 粉紅葡萄酒
