Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞)

Your sentence:

> “What makes him stand out is not only what he has done, but also the way he sees the world.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, stand out means to be noticeably different, distinctive, or more easily noticed than other people or things around you.

Mr. Wong attracts attention because his experiences and way of thinking make him different from ordinary people the speaker meets.

繁體中文： 因為具有特別、突出或與眾不同的特質，而比周圍其他人或事物更容易受到注意

中文翻譯：

> “What makes him stand out is not only what he has done, but also the way he sees the world.”

「令他顯得與眾不同 / 格外突出的，不只是他做過的事情，還有他看世界的方式。」

Here:

stand out = 因為特質明顯或與眾不同，而在人群或同類事物中格外突出

Normally, the Golden Manual excludes phrasal verbs by default. However, it specifically allows one when it is essential to explaining the exact target sentence, which is the case here.

1. stand upright / stand on your feet (人物) — 站立；站着

This is the basic physical meaning.

Meaning: To be in an upright position supported by your feet rather than sitting or lying down.

Practice 1

> “Everyone stood when the teacher entered the room.”

「老師進入課室時，所有人都站了起來。」

Practice 2

> “I had to stand for the entire journey because there were no seats.”

「因為沒有座位，我整段旅程都要站着。」 stand = 身體保持直立，以雙腳支撐身體，而不是坐着或躺着

2. stand + place/position (所在位置) — 站在；位於

Here, stand focuses on where a person is positioned while upright.

Practice 3

> “She stood beside the window and watched the rain.”

「她站在窗邊看雨。」

Practice 4

> “A police officer was standing at the entrance.”

「一名警員正站在入口處。」 stand somewhere = 以站立姿勢處於某個位置

For database counting, I would merge this with Meaning 1 because the core concept remains physical standing.

3. object/building stands + place (物件 / 建築物) — 坐落；矗立；位於

Stand can also describe an inanimate object or structure occupying a position.

Practice 5

> “An old church stands at the top of the hill.”

「山頂上矗立着一座古老教堂。」

Practice 6

> “The statue once stood in the centre of the square.”

「那座雕像以前矗立在廣場中央。」

a building/object stands somewhere = 某座建築物或物件固定地位於 / 矗立在某個地方

This is related to upright physical standing but sufficiently different in usage that it is worth explicitly teaching.

4. stand + object upright (使物件直立) — 把.....豎起 / 直立放置

Here, stand is transitive.

Practice 7

> “She stood the bottle on the table.”

「她把瓶子直立放在桌上。」

Practice 8

> “He stood the ladder against the wall.”

「他把梯子豎起來靠在牆上。」

stand something somewhere = 把某件物品以直立姿勢放在某個位置

This develops directly from the physical upright-position meaning.

5. stand + unpleasant thing/person (不喜歡的事物 / 人物) — 忍受 ; 容忍

This is a major figurative meaning.

Meaning: To tolerate or endure someone or something unpleasant.

Very often used with:

> can't stand

Practice 9

> “I can't stand the noise from the construction site.”

「我受不了建築地盤的噪音。」

Practice 10

> “She cannot stand people who are rude to staff.”

「她無法忍受對員工無禮的人。」

stand something/someone = 忍受令人不愉快、煩厭或難以接受的人、事情或情況

This is clearly different from physical standing.

6. stand + heat/pressure/test (承受能力) — 承受 ; 經得起

Closely related to the tolerance meaning, stand can mean that a person, object, material, or system can withstand a difficult force or condition.

Practice 11

> “This material can stand extremely high temperatures.”

「這種物料可以*承受極高溫度*。」

Practice 12

> “The bridge was designed to stand strong winds.”

「這座橋的設計可以*抵受強風*。」

stand a force/condition = 能承受某種壓力、力量或惡劣情況而不被破壞

I would merge this with Meaning 5 for core counting under the broader semantic idea:

> tolerate / withstand something difficult

The Chinese wording changes naturally by context, exactly as the Manual allows.

7. stand at + level/amount (數字 / 水平) — 處於 ; 達到某個水平

This is a common formal and reporting use.

Practice 13

> “Unemployment currently stands at five percent.”

「失業率目前處於百分之五。」

Practice 14

> “The total cost stands at almost two million dollars.”

「總成本目前達到接近二百萬元。」

stand at + figure/level = 某個數字、比率、總額或水平目前處於某個數值

This is common in:

- * business
- * economics
- * statistics
- * news reporting

It is semantically different enough from physical standing to keep separately.

8. stand + condition/state (情況 / 狀態) — 處於某種情況

Stand can describe the current state or condition of something.

Practice 15

> “The agreement still stands.”

「這項協議仍然有效 / 仍然成立。」

Practice 16

> “As things stand, we cannot afford to expand.”

「按目前情況來看，我們沒有能力擴展業務。」 stand = 某個安排、決定、情況或狀態目前仍然存在、成立或保持某種狀態

Useful examples include:

- * the offer still stands
- * the decision stands
- * as things stand
- * where matters stand

These share the broader idea of remaining in a particular state.

9. stand on an issue / where someone stands (立場) — 持某種立場；支持某種觀點

Here, stand refers to a person's position on an issue.

Practice 17

> “Where do you stand on this issue?”

「你對這個問題*持甚麼立場*？」

Practice 18

> “She has made it clear where she stands.”

「她已清楚表明自己的*立場*。」 stand on an issue = 對某個問題持有某種意見、態度或立場

This leads naturally to the noun:

> a stand

= a clearly expressed position or principle

10. take a stand (立場 / 原則) — 明確表態；堅持立場

As a noun, stand can mean a position strongly defended on an issue.

Practice 19

> “The group decided to take a stand against discrimination.”

「該團體決定就反歧視問題明確表態 / 堅定採取立場。」

Practice 20

> “Sometimes you have to take a stand for what you believe is right.”

「有時候，你必須為自己認為正確的事情堅持立場。」 a stand = 對某個問題公開採取並堅持的明確立場

I would connect this to Meaning 9 rather than count it as a completely unrelated sense.

11. stand for election / stand as a candidate (選舉) — 參選 ; 成為候選人

This is especially common in British English.

Practice 21

> “She has decided to stand for election next year.”

「她決定明年參選。」

Practice 22

> “Three candidates are standing for the position.”

「有三名候選人正在競逐這個職位。」 stand for election = 正式成為某項選舉的候選人並參與競選

This is an established modern use and sufficiently distinct to retain.

12. a stand = support/holder (支架 / 座 / 架) — 支架 ; 架子

As a noun, stand can mean an object designed to support or hold something.

Practice 23

> “She placed the microphone on its stand.”

「她把麥克風放在支架上。」

Practice 24

> “There is a lamp on a small stand beside the sofa.”

「沙發旁的小架子 / 座架上放著一盞燈。」

a stand = 用來支撐、承托或放置某件物品的架、座或支架

Common examples:

- * microphone stand
- * music stand
- * camera stand
- * umbrella stand

These are one broad support-device sense.

13. a stand = booth/stall/place of sale or display (攤位 / 展示位) — 攤位 ; 展位

Another noun meaning.

Usually plural.

「數以千計的球迷在看台 / 觀眾席上歡呼。」

Practice 28

> “The ball flew into the stands.”

「球飛進了觀眾席。」

the stands = 體育場內供觀眾坐或站着觀看比賽的分層看台區域

This is a well-established distinct noun meaning.

15. the witness stand (法庭) — 證人席

This is a common legal compound.

Practice 29

> “The witness took the stand.”

「證人走上證人席作供。」

Practice 30

> “She was questioned for two hours on the witness stand.”

「她在證人席上接受了兩個小時的盤問。」 witness stand = 法庭上供證人宣誓及作供的位置

I would treat this as an important compound/fixed legal use rather than a completely separate meaning of bare stand.

Target construction: stand out — 突出；與眾不同

Because this is the expression actually used in your passage, it deserves explicit treatment despite the normal no-phrasal-verbs rule.

Practice 31 — Original

> “What makes him stand out is not only what he has done, but also the way he sees the world.”

「令他與眾不同 / 格外突出的，不只是他做過的事情，還有他看世界的方式。」

Practice 32

> “Her calm voice made her stand out from the other speakers.”

「她沉著的聲線令她在其他講者之中格外突出。」

Practice 33

「鮮明的設計在樸素的背景下特別顯眼。」

stand out = 因外表、能力、特質或其他明顯差異，而比周圍同類人物或事物更加突出、顯眼或令人注意

This can apply to:

- * people
- * colours
- * designs
- * performances
- * qualities
- * objects

The underlying idea is the same, so those should not be split into separate senses.

Related form: standing

*Standing has several useful established uses.

standing = position/status/reputation (地位 / 聲望) **

Practice 34

> “She is a researcher of international standing.”

「她是一位具有國際聲望 / 地位的研究人員。」

Practice 35

> “The incident damaged his professional standing.”

「這件事損害了他的專業聲望 / 地位。」 standing = 某人在群體、專業或社會中的地位、聲譽或受尊重程度

standing = continuing/permanent (長期有效 / 固定的)

Practice 36

> “They have a standing invitation to visit us.”

「我們一直都歡迎他們來訪；他們有一個長期有效的邀請。」

Practice 37

> “The committee has a standing meeting every Monday.”

「委員會每逢星期一都有一次固定會議。」 standing = 長期存在、持續有效或定期固定安排的

Related form: standpoint

Standpoint means a particular way of considering or judging something.

Practice 38

> “From a practical standpoint, the proposal makes sense.”

「從實際角度 / 立場來看，這項建議是合理的。」

Practice 39

> “The issue looks different from the customer’s standpoint.”

「從顧客的角度來看，這個問題會顯得不同。」 standpoint = 某人理解、分析或評價事情時所採取的角度或觀點

Related form: standstill

Standstill means a complete stop in movement or activity.

Practice 40

> “Traffic came to a standstill after the accident.”

「意外發生後，交通完全停頓。」

Practice 41

> “The strike brought production to a standstill.”

「罷工令生產完全停頓。」 standstill = 活動、交通或進程完全停止的狀態

This is a useful lexical extension rather than another meaning of bare stand.

Important distinction: stand vs sit

stand

= body upright on the feet sit

= body supported by the buttocks, usually on a chair or seat

> “Please stand.”

「請站起來。」

> “Please sit.”

「請坐下。」

Important distinction: stand vs tolerate

In:

> “I can't stand the noise.”

stand means tolerate, not physically stand.

often sounds more emotional:

> “I can't stand him.”

= 我真的受不了他。 tolerate can sound more neutral or formal:

> “The system can tolerate minor errors.”

= 系統可以容許少量錯誤。

Important distinction: stand out vs stand

Your original passage does not use ordinary physical stand.

> “He stands by the door.”

= 他站在門旁。

But:

> “He stands out.”

= 他很突出 / 與眾不同。

The particle out changes the construction substantially, which is why the target sentence must be treated explicitly.

Important distinction: stand vs stay

These occasionally overlap when referring to remaining somewhere, but their normal meanings differ.

usually contains the idea of an upright position:

> “He stood near the door.”

stay

means remain somewhere or continue in a state:

> “He stayed near the door.”

A person can:

> stay seated

but cannot normally:

> stand seated

So they should not be treated as synonyms generally.

Family-extension note

Useful modern members and extensions include:

* stand

* stood

* standing

* standpoint

* standstill

* stand out — essential because it occurs in your passage

* take a stand

* witness stand

* microphone/music stand

* food/exhibition stand

I would not expand automatically into other phrasal verbs such as stand up, stand by, stand down, stand in, or stand for in its abbreviation meaning, because the Golden Manual says phrasal verbs are separate learning targets unless specifically required.

For your original sentence

> “What makes him stand out is not only what he has done, but also the way he sees the world.”

The exact meaning is:

stand out = 因為具有與其他人不同而且容易受到注意的特質，所以在人群中顯得特別突出

So:

> what makes him stand out

= 令他與眾不同 / 令他格外突出之處

For your database, I would count 10 useful core meanings of stand itself, while keeping stand out separately as the required target construction:

1. be upright on one's feet
2. building/object be situated or positioned
3. put something upright
4. tolerate / withstand
5. stand at a numerical level
6. remain valid / remain in a particular state
7. hold a position or viewpoint
8. stand for election
9. noun — support/rack
10. noun — stall/booth / spectator stand family where context determines the physical structure

Then separately:

stand out = be noticeably distinctive or prominent

I would not inflate the count by treating stand pressure separately from can't stand something, or take a stand separately from the broader position/viewpoint sense.
