

Word family: such

Base word: such

Part of speech: determiner (限定詞) / pronoun-like use (代詞式用法) / intensifier (強調用法)

Your sentence:

> “That is exactly why I think he is such an interesting person.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, such is used to emphasize the high degree or strong quality expressed by the following noun phrase.

The speaker is emphasizing that Mr. Wong is very / remarkably interesting.

繁體中文： 用來加強後面名詞短語所表達的性質或程度，表示「如此……的 / 這麼……的」

中文翻譯：

> “That is exactly why I think he is such an interesting person.”

「那正正就是為甚麼我覺得他是如此有趣的一個人 / 這麼有趣的人。」

Here:

such an interesting person = 如此有趣的人；非常有趣的人

1. such + a/an + adjective + singular noun (程度強調) — 如此……的；這麼……的

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: Used to emphasize that a person or thing has a particular quality to a notably high degree.

Practice 1 — Original

> “I think he is such an interesting person.”

「我覺得他是一個如此有趣的人。」

Practice 2

> “It was such a beautiful day.”

「那是如此美好的一天 / 非常美好的一天。」

Practice 3

> “She is such a thoughtful teacher.”

「她是一位非常體貼的老師。」

such a/an + adjective + noun = 強調某人或某物具有某種性質，而且程度相當高

Compare the structure:

> so interesting

but:

> such an interesting person

The noun phrase is what makes such natural here.

2. such + plural/uncountable noun (同類程度強調) — 如此..... ; 這麼.....

With plural or uncountable nouns, there is normally no a/an.

Practice 4

> “Why do people make such mistakes?”

「為甚麼人們會犯這樣的錯誤 / 如此嚴重或明顯的錯誤？」

Practice 5

> “We had such good weather during the trip.”

「旅途中我們遇到這麼好的天氣。」

such + plural/uncountable noun = 強調後面所指的一類人物、事物或情況具有某種明顯特質

This belongs to the same core emphatic sense as Meaning 1.

For database counting, I would merge them rather than split singular/plural grammar into separate meanings.

The Golden Manual specifically says that grammatical or contextual differences should not become separate lexical meanings unless the underlying semantic concept genuinely changes.

3. such = of that kind/type (種類 / 類型) — 這樣的 ; 那樣的 ; 此類的

This is a genuinely important meaning.

Here, such does not primarily emphasize degree. It identifies a kind or type of person, thing, behaviour, situation, etc.

Practice 6

> “I have never seen such behaviour before.”

「我以前從未見過這樣的行為。」

Practice 7

> “People in such situations often need support.”

「身處這種情況的人往往需要支援。」 such + noun = 屬於剛才提到、描述或理解的那種類型 ; 這樣的 / 此類的

Compare:

> “She is such a good teacher.”

= 她是這麼好 / 非常好的老師。

→ emphasis versus:

> “I have never met such people before.”

= 我以前從未遇過這種人。

→ type/category

These are related, but the learner needs a different mental concept, so keeping them separate is justified.

4. such as + examples (舉例) — 例如 ; 諸如

This is one of the most important grammatical uses of such.

Meaning: Used to introduce examples of a broader category.

Practice 8

> “He enjoys traditional transport, such as trams and ferries.”

「他喜歡傳統交通工具 , 例如電車和渡輪。」

Practice 9

> “Creative activities, such as writing and painting, can help people relax.”

「創作活動 , 例如寫作和繪畫 , 可以幫助人放鬆。」 such as = 用來列出前面某個類別中的例子 ; 例如 / 諸如

This is a fixed grammatical construction and highly useful.

For database purposes, I would keep it as a distinct polyfunctional use because its function is no longer ordinary noun modification.

5. such...that... (程度 → 結果) — 如此.....以致.....

Such can form a result construction.

Practice 10

> “It was such an interesting conversation that I lost track of time.”

「那次談話有趣得令我完全忘了時間。」

Practice 11

> “She spoke with such confidence that everyone listened.”

「她說話時如此有自信 , 以致所有人都專心聽。」

such + noun phrase + that = 某種性質或程度強烈到足以產生後面的結果

This is a grammatical extension of the intensifying sense rather than a wholly separate lexical meaning.

Compare:

> so interesting that... **

versus:

> such an interesting conversation that... **

6. such = previously mentioned person/thing/type (代詞式) — 這類人 / 這種事物

In more formal English, such can stand alone and refer back to a previously mentioned type or category.

Practice 12

> “Some people enjoy crowded places; others avoid such.”

「有些人喜歡擁擠的地方，另一些人則避開這類地方。」

Practice 13

> “The law applies only to companies registered as such.”

「這項法律只適用於正式以此類身分註冊的公司。」 such = 代替前面已提到的那一類人、事物、身分或情況

This use is more formal and less common in everyday conversation, but still useful modern English.

7. as such (以該身分 / 嚴格來說) — 本身 ; 以此身分 ; 嚴格說來

This is a very important fixed expression.

It has two major uses.

as such = in that capacity/status (以該身分) **

Practice 14

> “He is the team leader and, as such, is responsible for the final decision.”

「他是團隊主管，因此以這個身分需要負責最終決定。」 as such = 因為具有剛才提到的身分或性質，所以按該身分來看

not X as such = strictly speaking, not really X (嚴格來說不算)

Practice 15

> “It isn’t a problem as such; it’s more of an inconvenience.”

「嚴格來說這不算是一個問題，只是有點不方便。」

as such = 就該詞最嚴格、最本身的意義而言

This is a fixed expression and should be included as a useful extension rather than another core meaning of bare such.

8. such and such (某某；某個未具體說明的) — 某某；這個那個

This informal expression is used when the exact name/details are unimportant, unknown, or deliberately omitted.

Practice 16

> “He said he had to meet such and such a person.”

「他說自己要去見某某人。」

Practice 17

> “They told us to go to such and such an address.”

「他們叫我們去某個特定但沒有明說的地址。」 such and such = 用來代替沒有具體說出的名字、人物、地方或細節

This is idiomatic rather than a core lexical sense.

Important distinction: such vs so

This is the most important learner contrast.

so + adjective/adverb

> “He is so interesting.”

「他非常有趣。」

such + noun phrase

> “He is such an interesting person.”

「他是如此有趣的一個人。」

So:

so + adjective/adverb

such + noun phrase

Compare:

> so beautiful

> such a beautiful place

> so quickly

> such rapid progress

This distinction is crucial.

Important distinction: such as vs like

Both can introduce examples.

such as

clearly introduces examples belonging to a category:

> “Cities such as Hong Kong and Tokyo...”

= 例如香港和東京這類城市 like can mean:

* similar to;

* or, informally, examples such as.

For precise academic writing, such as is often clearer when you explicitly mean for example.

Important distinction: such vs this kind of

These often overlap.

> “I dislike such behaviour.”

> “I dislike this kind of behaviour.”

Both can mean:

「我不喜歡這種行為。」

But such is more compact and can sound somewhat more formal depending on context.

Important distinction: such vs very very directly intensifies an adjective:

> “a very interesting person”

such intensifies the whole noun phrase:

> “such an interesting person”

Such can feel more expressive or emphatic.

Related lexical note

Such has almost no productive derivational family.

Its richness comes mainly from grammatical functions and fixed constructions:

- * such a/an + adjective + noun
- * such + plural/uncountable noun
- * such = this/that kind
- * such as
- * such...that...
- * as such
- * such and such

This closely matches the Golden Manual's treatment of grammar-rich words such as so and too, where polyfunctionality matters more than morphology. The reference material explicitly notes that such words may have small derivational families but many important grammatical functions.

Master comparison

For your original sentence

> "That is exactly why I think he is such an interesting person."

The exact meaning is:

such = 用來強調後面的名詞短語所表達的性質程度很高

More specifically:

such an interesting person = 一個如此有趣 / 非常有趣的人

So:

> he is such an interesting person

= 他真的是一個非常有趣的人 / 他是如此有趣的一個人

For your database, I would count 4 genuinely useful core polysemy/polyfunctionality meanings for such:

1. degree emphasis — such a good person / such good weather
2. type/kind — such behaviour / such people
3. such as — introduce examples
4. pronoun-like such — refer back to that type/category

I would treat such...that, as such, and such and such as important grammatical/fixed-expression extensions rather than inflate the core count.
