MCQ-ready definition:

meal ticket = literal 餐券；figuratively 能持續提供收入或生活保障的人 / 事物

Important distinction 1: ticket vs receipt

Very relevant to your passage.

ticket

usually grants:

- * entry
- * travel
- * participation receipt proves:

- * payment
- * purchase

So the scrapbook contains two different kinds of mementos:

- > tickets → 去過哪裏 / 參加過甚麼
- > receipts → 買過甚麼 / 在哪裏消費過

Important distinction 2: ticket vs pass

ticket

often valid for one journey/event/entry.

pass

often allows repeated or extended access.

> train ticket

火車票

> monthly travel pass

月票

There is overlap, but pass often covers multiple uses or a period of time.

Important distinction 3: ticket vs voucher

ticket

gives access/travel.

voucher

gives entitlement to:

- * goods
- * services
- * discount
- * credit

> cinema ticket

戲票

> meal voucher

餐券

Important distinction 4: ticket vs token

ticket

document/electronic authorization.

token physical/digital unit representing payment or access in some systems.

Older transport systems may use tokens instead of tickets.

Important distinction 5: ticket vs fare

ticket

the travel credential.

fare

the price paid for the journey.

> buy a ticket

買票

> pay the fare

付車資

Not the same.

Important distinction 6: ticket vs booking / reservation

booking/reservation records that you have reserved a place/service.

ticket

often authorizes actual entry/travel.

Nowadays one digital record may serve both functions, but conceptually they differ.

Important distinction 7: ticket vs ticket stub

ticket

whole valid ticket before/use during entry.

ticket stub

small retained portion after use.

In your scrapbook, 票根 may actually be more precise than simply 票, because the items were preserved after the outings.

Important distinction 8: ticket = entry/travel vs ticket = fine

Travel

> train ticket

火車票

Penalty

> parking ticket

違例泊車罰單

These are genuinely distinct learner senses.

Important distinction 9: ticket someone vs give someone a ticket

Both can refer to penalties.

ticket someone formal verb:

= issue a violation notice.

give someone a ticket

can mean either:

* hand them an entry/travel ticket

* issue them a penalty ticket

Context matters much more in the second expression.

Important distinction 10: ticketed passenger vs ticketed driver

ticketed passenger has been issued a travel ticket.

ticketed driver

was given a traffic penalty.

Same form, different sense.

Important distinction 11: ticket = political slate

This does not mean a physical voting paper in this sense.

> run on the same ticket means candidates are running as part of the same electoral grouping.

So:

ticket = 候選組合 / 名單

rather than merely 「選票」.

Important distinction 12: just the ticket

This idiom does not involve an actual ticket.

> A cup of tea is just the ticket.

= 一杯茶正合需要。

It is a lexicalized fixed expression.

Important distinction 13: meal ticket literal vs figurative

Literal

= 餐券

Figurative

= provides income/support

> He's using her as a meal ticket.

他把她當作經濟依靠。

The figurative sense can sound critical because it may imply exploiting someone financially.

Family-extension note

Ticket has several genuinely distinct modern branches:

1. access / travel credential

- * train ticket
- * concert ticket
- * admission ticket

2. used-ticket keepsake

- * ticket stub

3. penalty notice

- * parking ticket
- * speeding ticket
- * ticket someone

4. ticketing systems

- * ticket office
- * ticketing
- * ticketless travel

5. political candidate grouping

- * run on a ticket
- * top of the ticket

6. figurative expressions

- * just the ticket
- * dream ticket
- * meal ticket

For your passage, the main sense is physical tickets retained from family outings, and 票根 is probably the most contextually natural Chinese translation.

For your original sentence

> It was a scrapbook filled with printed photos, short captions, little notes, and a few tickets and receipts from family outings we had shared over the years.

Here:

tickets = 家庭出遊時使用過、後來保存作紀念的票券 / 票根

They might have been:

- * transport tickets,
- * museum tickets,
- * attraction tickets,
- * event tickets,
- * cinema tickets.

The exact type is not specified, so we should not invent one.

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 那是一本剪貼簿，裏面放了沖印照片、簡短文字說明、小紙條，以及一些我們多年來家庭出遊時留下的票根和收據。

For this passage, 「票根」 captures the keepsake/memory function better than the broader 「票」.
