

Word family: walk / walks / walked / walking / walker / walkway

Base word: walk

Past tense: walked

Past participle: walked

-ing form: walking

Related forms: walker, walkway

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞)

Your sentence:

> “...the tiny details that most of us walk straight past.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, walk means to move forward on foot at a normal pace.

In the full expression walk straight past, the emphasis is that people physically continue walking beyond those small details without stopping to notice them.

繁體中文：以雙腳用正常步速向前移動，不是跑步

中文翻譯：

> “...the tiny details that most of us walk straight past.”

「.....那些大部分人都會直接走過而沒有留意的小細節。」

Here:

walk = 用雙腳以一般步速移動

walk straight past something = 直接從某物旁邊走過並繼續前進

1. walk = move on foot at a normal pace (人物 / 動物) — 走 ; 步行

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: To move from one place to another on foot, usually at a normal pace rather than running.

Practice 1 — Original

> “Most of us walk straight past those tiny details.”

「我們大部分人都會直接走過那些細小的細節。」

Practice 2

> “I usually walk to the station.”

「我通常步行去車站。」

Practice 3

> “They walked slowly along the river.”

「他們沿着河邊慢慢走。」 walk = 用雙腳以一般步速從一個位置移動到另一個位置

Common:

- * walk home
- * walk to work
- * walk along the street
- * walk across the room
- * walk past something

These belong to one physical-movement sense.

2. walk + person/animal somewhere (陪伴 / 帶領) — 陪……走 ; 帶……步行

Walk can be transitive when someone accompanies or leads another person or animal on foot.

Practice 4

> “I’ll walk you to the station.”

「我會陪你走到車站。」

Practice 5

> “She walks the dog every morning.”

「她每天早上都會帶狗散步。」

walk someone/something = 陪同、帶領或使某人 / 動物步行前往某處

This differs grammatically from:

> “I walk to the station.”

because here walk takes an object.

For database counting, I would still treat it as closely related to the basic physical walking concept, rather than inflate it into a wholly separate core sense.

3. walk = go somewhere on foot as an activity/exercise (散步 / 步行活動) — 散步 ; 步行

As a noun, a walk can mean a period or journey of walking.

Practice 6

> “We went for a walk after dinner.”

「我們晚飯後去散步。」

Practice 7

「從這裡走過去只有十分鐘路程。」

a walk = 一段步行活動，或以步行計算的一段距離 / 路程

This is the noun counterpart of the physical movement sense.

4. walk = manner/style of walking (步態) — 走路方式 ; 步姿

As a noun, walk can describe the particular way someone moves when walking.

Practice 8

> “I recognized him by his walk.”

「我從他的走路姿勢 / 步態認出了他。」

Practice 9

> “She has a confident walk.”

「她走路時有一種很有自信的步態。」 walk = 某人走路時特有的姿勢、節奏或動作方式

This is a distinct noun meaning.

5. walk = leave a place/job/relationship deliberately (離開) — 離開；走人

In informal English, walk can mean leaving a place, job, negotiation, or situation, often deliberately or suddenly.

Practice 10

> “If they refuse to negotiate, we may have to walk.”

「如果他們拒絕談判，我們可能只好離開 / 退出。」

Practice 11

> “He walked from the job after the dispute.”

「爭議發生後，他離開了那份工作。」 walk = 主動離開某個地方、工作、談判或處境，常帶有不再繼續的意思

This is figurative and distinct from ordinary walking.

6. walk free / walk = avoid punishment (法律 / 司法) — 無罪離開；沒有被懲罰

A common legal/journalistic use:

Practice 12

> “The suspect walked free after the charges were dropped.”

「控罪撤銷後，疑犯獲釋 / 無罪離開。」

Practice 13

> “He could walk if there isn’t enough evidence.”

「如果證據不足，他可能會不用受罰便離開 / 獲釋。」 walk free / walk = 沒有被定罪、懲罰或拘留而離開

This is an established figurative extension.

For a general learner database, I would keep it as a lower-priority but legitimate separate sense.

7. walk someone through + process (逐步講解) — 帶着 一步步完成 ; 逐步解釋

This is a very common modern figurative construction.

Practice 14

> “Can you walk me through the process?”

「你可以*一步一步向我講解*這個流程嗎？」

Practice 15

> “She walked us through the new system.”

「她*逐步帶我們了解 / 操作*這套新系統。」

walk someone through something = 按步驟逐一解釋或帶領某人完成一個流程

Because this is a phrasal construction, I would treat it as a useful extension rather than a core meaning of bare walk, unless the target sentence specifically used it. The Manual says phrasal verbs are excluded by default unless specifically relevant.

8. walk out / walk away (離開 / 退出) — 離場 ; 走開 ; 退出

These are also common phrasal constructions.

Practice 16

> “She walked out of the meeting.”

「她*離開了會議 / 中途離場*。」

Practice 17

> “He decided to walk away from the deal.”

「他決定退出這宗交易 / 不再參與。」

These develop from the broader figurative meaning of leaving, but should remain phrasal-verb extensions rather than inflate the bare-word count.

9. walk = baseball — reach first base on balls (棒球) — 保送上壘

In baseball, walk has a specialized noun/verb meaning.

Practice 18

> “The batter drew a walk.”

「那名打者獲得四壞球保送。」

Practice 19

> “The pitcher walked two batters in the inning.”

「那名投手在該局保送了兩名打者。」 walk = 在棒球中因投手投出四個壞球而讓打者保送上一壘

This is a clearly distinct domain-specific meaning and should be kept separate if your database includes common sports English.

The Golden Manual allows domain-specific meanings when they are established, modern, and likely enough to be useful.

Related form: walking

Walking can be the activity of walking.

Practice 20

> “Walking is good exercise.”

「步行 / 走路是一種很好的運動。」

Practice 21

> “We did a lot of walking during the trip.”

「我們旅途中走了很多路。」

walking = 以雙腳正常步速移動的活動

It also appears in compounds:

* walking distance

* walking route

* walking tour

These remain related to the physical movement sense.

Related form: walker

Walker usually means someone who walks, especially for exercise or hiking.

Practice 22

> “The path is popular with walkers.”

「這條小路很受步行人士 / 健行者歡迎。」

Practice 23

> “She is a keen long-distance walker.”

「她很喜歡長途步行 / 健行。」

walker = 經常以步行、散步或健行作活動的人

It can also mean a walking aid, especially in American English:

> walker = 助行架

That is a separate meaning of walker, not of bare walk.

Related form: walkway

Walkway means a path designed for pedestrians.

Practice 24

> “A covered walkway connects the two buildings.”

「一條有蓋行人通道連接兩座建築物。」

Practice 25

> “Please keep the walkway clear.”

「請保持行人通道暢通。」 walkway = 專供行人步行使用的通道或路徑

Important distinction: walk vs go

walk

specifies the method:

> move on foot

go

simply means move/travel to another place, without specifying how.

> “I walked to work.”

= 我步行上班。

> “I went to work.”

= 我去了上班；可能步行、乘車、坐火車等。

Important distinction: walk vs run

walk

= normal-paced movement on foot run

= faster movement on foot

In your original sentence:

> walk straight past creates the image of people casually continuing onward, not rushing or running.

Important distinction: walk vs hike

walk

is the broad everyday term.

hike

usually refers to a longer recreational walk, especially in countryside, hills, or natural areas.

> walk to the shop

> hike in the mountains

Not usually interchangeable.

Important distinction: walk vs stroll

neutral.

stroll

means walk slowly and leisurely.

> "We walked through the park."

neutral.

> "We strolled through the park."

suggests relaxed, unhurried movement.

Important distinction: walk past vs pass

walk past explicitly says the person is moving on foot.

pass simply means go beyond something.

> “I walked past the café.”

= 我步行經過咖啡店。

> “I passed the café.”

= 我經過咖啡店；不一定是步行。

This is especially relevant to your original sentence.

Family-extension note

The practical modern family includes:

* walk

* walks

* walked

* walking

* walker

* walkway

Useful expressions and constructions include:

* go for a walk

* walking distance

* walk someone home

* walk the dog

* walk free

* walk away

* walk out

* walk someone through something

The Golden Manual requires useful family members and fixed constructions to be included, but also says to avoid turning every phrasal construction into a new core meaning.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
walk — move on foot	用雙腳以一般步速從一個位置移動到另一個位置
walk someone / walk the dog	陪同、帶領或使某人 / 動物以步行方式前往某處
a walk — walking activity/journey	一段步行、散步活動，或以步行計算的一段路程
walk — manner of walking	某人走路時特有的姿勢、節奏或動作方式
walk — leave/quit	主動離開某個地方、工作、談判或處境，不再繼續
walk free / walk — legal	沒有被定罪、處罰或拘留而離開；獲釋
walk — baseball	因四壞球而讓打者保送上一壘
walking	以雙腳正常步速移動的活動
walker	經常步行、散步或健行的人；另可指助行架
walkway	專供行人步行使用的通道或路徑

For your original sentence

> “...the tiny details that most of us walk straight past.”

The exact meaning is:

walk = 用雙腳以一般步速向前移動

More specifically:

walk straight past something = 直接從某物旁邊步行經過並繼續向前，不停下來留意

So:

> most of us walk straight past those details

= 我們大部分人都會直接從那些細節旁邊走過而沒有注意到它們

For your database, I would count 5 genuinely useful core meanings for walk:

1. move on foot at a normal pace
2. noun — a period/journey of walking
3. noun — manner/style of walking

4. figurative — leave/quit/withdraw from a place, job, deal, etc.
5. baseball — reach first base on balls / give a batter a walk

I would merge walk someone / walk the dog into #1 as a transitive extension, and treat walk away, walk out, walk someone through, and walk free as fixed/phrasal extensions rather than inflate the core count.
