Informal.

Important distinction: win vs beat

This is one of the most important learner contrasts.

normally takes:

- * game;
- * match;
- * race;
- * competition;
- * prize.

> “We won the match.”

beat normally takes the opponent:

> “We beat the other team.”

So:

>  win the match

>  beat the team

but normally not:

>  win the team

>  beat the match

Important distinction: win vs defeat

win

focuses on:

> achieving victory.

defeat

focuses on:

> causing the opponent to lose.

> “They won the final.”

> “They defeated their rivals.”

Defeat is more formal than beat.

Important distinction: win vs succeed

win

usually involves:

* competition;

* gaining something sought;

* coming out on top.

succeed

means:

> achieve the desired result generally.

You can succeed at learning a language without “winning” anything.

Important distinction: win vs earn

win

= obtain through competition, chance, persuasion, etc.

earn

= receive because of work, merit, or entitlement.

Compare:

> “win a prize”

versus:

> “earn a salary.”

But both are possible with respect:

> “win respect”

emphasizes successfully gaining it.

> “earn respect”

emphasizes deserving it through actions.

Important distinction: win respect vs earn respect

win respect

= successfully cause people to respect you.

earn respect

= deserve/get respect through your conduct over time.

They overlap strongly, but earn highlights merit/deserving.

Important distinction: win support vs gain support

These are very close.

win support

often suggests:

> active persuasion or successful appeal.

gain support

is more neutral:

> support increases/is obtained.

Important distinction: win someone over vs convince someone convince someone

= make them believe something is true / persuade them.

win someone over

= change their overall attitude so they become supportive, friendly, or approving.

Win over is broader and more interpersonal.

Important distinction: win someone's heart vs win someone over

win someone's heart

= gain affection/love.

win someone over

= gain support, approval, or liking.

The first is more emotional.

Important distinction: win a prize vs receive a prize

win a prize

= obtain it because you succeeded in competition/chance.

receive a prize

= simply get it.

The second does not explain why.

Important distinction: win an election vs be elected

win an election

focuses on the competitive result.

be elected

focuses on the person being chosen for office.

Closely related, different grammatical perspective.

Important distinction: win a contract vs sign a contract

win a contract

= successfully secure the business opportunity.

sign a contract

= formally execute the agreement.

A company may win a contract before signing it.

Important distinction: win = verb vs a win = noun

Verb:

> “They won.”

= 他們贏了。

Noun:

> “It was a big win.”

= 那是一場大勝 / 重大成功。

Different grammar.

Important distinction: winner vs champion

winner

= whoever wins a particular contest.

champion

= person/team holding first-place title, often after a championship competition.

Every champion is a winner of something, but not every winner is called a champion.

Important distinction: winning = victorious vs attractive

Compare:

> “the winning team”

= 獲勝球隊

versus:

= 迷人的笑容

The second means:

> charming / appealing,

not:

> “a smile that won a match.”

Important distinction: winnings vs earnings

winnings

= money won in gambling, competitions, prize draws, etc.

earnings

= money received from work/business/investment.

Do not confuse them.

Important distinction: win-win vs compromise win-win

= all major sides obtain meaningful benefit.

compromise

= each side gives something up to reach agreement.

A compromise can be win-win, but not necessarily.

Important distinction: win the day vs win the battle

win the battle

can be literal or figurative victory in one struggle.

win the day

often means:

> ultimately prove successful or become the deciding factor.

More idiomatic/figurative.

Important distinction: win out vs win

win

= obtain victory.

win out

= after competing forces/options, one eventually prevails.

> "Patience won out."

> "Patience won."

also possible but more compressed.

Important distinction: win back vs get back get back

= regain/recover generally.

win back

= regain something such as:

* trust;

* support;

- * customers;
- * affection

through effort.

So win back emphasizes persuasion/rebuilding.

Family-extension sweep

The practical win family is very rich in competition, achievement, persuasion, and successful outcomes:

- * win — competition = 贏 / 勝出
- * win a game/match/race = 贏得比賽
- * win a prize/award = 獲獎
- * win money = 贏錢
- * win the lottery = 中獎
- * win an election = 勝選 / 當選
- * win a seat = 取得席位
- * win a contract = 成功取得合約
- * win a scholarship/place = 成功獲得名額 / 獎學金
- * win support = 爭取支持
- * win approval = 獲得認可
- * win trust = 贏得信任
- * win respect = 贏得尊重
- * win admiration = 贏得敬佩
- * win someone over = 說服 / 爭取某人支持
- * win someone's heart = 贏得某人喜愛
- * win favour = 獲得青睞
- * win the day = 最終勝出 / 成為決定因素
- * win out = 最終佔上風
- * win through = 克服困難後成功
- * a win = 一次勝利 / 成功結果
- * big win = 大勝 / 重大成功
- * win-win = 雙贏
- * winner = 勝出者
- * winner — figurative = 成功之作
- * winning team = 勝出的隊伍
- * winning goal = 致勝球
- * winning smile = 迷人的笑容
- * winnings = 贏得的獎金 / 彩金
- * winning streak = 連勝
- * winning formula = 成功方程式
- * winning combination = 成功組合

* win back = 重新贏回
 * you can't win = 怎樣做都不對 * win or lose = 無論輸贏
 * win hands down = 輕鬆勝出

The main semantic branches are:

- > be victorious in competition
- > obtain a prize/opportunity through success
- > gain support, trust, approval, or affection
- > prove successful / prevail
- > a successful result

plus the family extensions:

- > winner / winning / winnings

Core learner takeaway

The biggest trap with win is assuming it only means:

> 贏比賽

Its modern uses extend naturally from victory into successfully obtaining something:

> win a match

> = 贏比賽

> win a prize

> = 獲獎

> win an election

> = 勝選

> win a contract

> = 取得合約

> win support

> = 爭取支持

> win trust

> = 贏得信任

> win respect

> = 贏得尊重

> win someone over

> = 說服 / 爭取某人

> win someone's heart

> = 贏得某人的心

> a big win

> = 大勝；重大成功

> win-win situation

> = 迷人 / 討喜的笑容

> winnings

> = 贏來的獎金 / 彩金

And the essential grammar contrast is:

> win the game

but:

> beat the opponent

So win is much richer than simply:

> win = 贏

Its broad underlying concept is:

“to come out successfully in a competition or effort, or to succeed in gaining something valuable such as a prize, opportunity, support, trust, or affection.”
