

Absolutely — here is the fully rebuilt version of *administrator, with the omission check already completed so you should not need to ask “is that all?” afterward.

I’m applying the manuals exactly as the governing method: exhaustive search across modern meanings, grammatical functions, domains, compounds, fixed expressions, and family members, followed by conservative merging and removal of weak or artificially split senses.

The manuals govern how the entry is curated; the actual meanings below come from standard modern English usage.

「論壇*管理員*移除了該帳戶。」

*administrator = 在網站、論壇、社群或群組中擁有較高管理權限的人***

Curation note

This is closely related to computer/platform administration, but common enough in everyday digital English to deserve explicit treatment.

4. administrator — estate administrator — 遺產管理人

In law, an administrator may be a person legally appointed to manage a deceased person's estate, particularly when there is no executor able or authorised to act.

Practice 8

> “The court appointed an administrator to manage the estate.”

「法院委任了一名遺產管理人處理該遺產。」

Practice 9

> “The administrator paid the debts before distributing the remaining assets.”

「遺產管理人先清償債務，再分配剩餘資產。」 administrator = 經法律程序委任，負責管理、清算和分配死者遺產的人

This is a genuinely distinct legal sense.

5. administrator — insolvency administrator — 公司重整 / 破產程序管理人

In certain legal systems, especially British insolvency law, an administrator can be formally appointed to take control of a financially distressed company.

Practice 10

> “An administrator was appointed after the company encountered serious financial difficulties.”

「公司出現嚴重財政困難後，獲委任一名法定管理人。」

Practice 11

> “The administrator examined whether the business could be rescued.”

「法定管理人評估該企業是否仍可被挽救。」 administrator = 在特定企業重整或無力償債法律程序中，被正式委任接管和管理公司的專業人士

This is specialised, but common enough in business and financial news to retain.

6. administer — manage or run an organisation/programme — 管理；執行

The related verb administer means to formally manage or operate something.

Practice 12

> “The department administers the scholarship programme.”

「該部門負責*管理 / 執行*獎學金計劃。」

Practice 13

> “The scheme is administered by the local authority.”

「該計劃由地方當局負責*管理和執行*。」

administer + programme/system/institution = 正式負責管理、運作或執行某項制度、計劃或機構

7. administer — give medicine or treatment — 給予；施用

A major separate meaning.

Practice 14

administration = 機構、計劃或活動的行政管理、協調和運作工作

10. administration — management/leadership group — 管理層；行政當局

Administration can also refer collectively to the people who manage an institution.

Practice 20

> “The university administration approved the proposal.”

「大學管理層 / 行政當局批准了該建議。」

Practice 21

> “Students met with the school administration.”

「學生與學校行政管理層會面。」 administration = 共同負責管理某個機構的行政領導層或管理當局

This is different from administration = the activity of managing.

11. administration — governing authority — 行政當局；管治機構

The noun can refer to the governing authority responsible for a particular territory, region, or public system.

Practice 22

> “The local administration introduced new transport rules.”

「地方行政當局推出了新的交通規定。」

Practice 23

> “The regional administration is responsible for public services.”

「地區行政當局負責公共服務。」

administration = 負責某地區或公共體系管治及行政工作的政府 / 官方機構

This is closely connected to Meaning 10, but the emphasis here is public governing authority.

12. administration — government led by a particular political leader — 某屆政府

Especially in American English, administration can mean the government under a particular president or other executive leader.

Practice 24

> “The new administration announced changes to the policy.”

「新一屆*政府*宣布政策有所改變。」

> “The nurse recorded the time of medication administration.”

「護士記錄了*給藥*時間。」 administration = 正式給予藥物、治療或其他醫療處置的行為

14. administrative — relating to organisational management — 行政的；管理方面的

Practice 28

> “She handles the team’s administrative work.”

「她負責隊伍的行政工作。」

Practice 29

> “The role includes several administrative duties.”

「這個職位包括多項行政職務。」 administrative = 與機構管理、程序、文件、協調或日常運作有關的

15. administrative — procedural rather than substantive — 行政程序上的

A useful branch of the adjective.

Practice 30

> “The delay was caused by an administrative error.”

「延誤是由一個行政程序上的錯誤造成的。」

Practice 31

> “The application was rejected for administrative reasons.”

「申請因行政程序方面的原因被拒絕。」

administrative = 與正式程序、紀錄、審批或內部管理有關，而非事情本身的實質內容

This remains connected to Meaning 14 rather than requiring a completely separate lexical concept.

16. administratively — in terms of administration — 在行政上

Practice 32

> “The two departments are separate administratively.”

「這兩個部門在行政上分開運作。」

Practice 33

> “The change would be difficult to implement administratively.”

「這項改變在行政執行方面會有困難。」 administratively = 從行政安排、制度或管理運作的角度而言

17. administrate — manage; administer — 管理；行政處理

Administrate exists as a verb meaning to manage or administer something.

However, administer is generally the more established and useful verb for learners.

Practice 34

> “The programme is centrally administrated.”

「該計劃由中央統一管理。」

Learning note

For most ordinary contexts:

administer a programme is safer and more natural than administrate a programme.

So administrate belongs in the family but deserves lower priority.

18. admin — administration / administrative work — 行政工作

Admin is an extremely common informal abbreviation.

Practice 35

> “I need to finish some admin before lunch.”

「午飯前我需要完成一些行政工作。」

Practice 36

> “Most of my morning was spent on admin.”

「我早上大部分時間都花在處理行政事務上。」

admin = administration / routine administrative work

This is especially common in workplace English.

19. admin — administrator — 管理員；行政人員

*Admin can also mean administrator.

Practice 37

> “Ask the group admin to add you.”

「請群組管理員把你加入。」

Practice 38

> “Only an admin can change the account permissions.”

「只有管理員才能更改帳戶權限。」

admin = administrator，尤其常見於電腦、網站、平台和群組語境

So admin itself is polysemous:

admin = administrator/person

Important academic/professional compounds

public administration

公共行政

The study and practice of organising and managing government and public services.

> “She studied public administration at university.”

「她在大學修讀公共行政。」

business administration

工商管理 / 企業管理

The study or practice of managing business organisations.

> “He has a degree in business administration.”

「他擁有工商管理學位。」

Important legal compounds

administrative law

行政法

The branch of law concerning government agencies, public authorities, and administrative decision-making.

administrative court

行政法院

A court dealing with administrative-law disputes in legal systems where such courts exist.

administrative tribunal

行政審裁機構 / 行政審裁處

A body that decides certain disputes involving administrative or regulatory matters.

These are important compounds, but they are not additional meanings of administrator itself.

Important workplace compounds

administrative assistant

行政助理

A person who provides administrative and organisational support.

administrative staff

行政人員

This is extremely close to the usage in your original passage.

administrative duties

行政職務 / 行政工作

administrative burden

行政負擔

The paperwork, procedures, compliance, or organisational work created by administrative requirements.

Practice

> “The new reporting system increased the administrative burden.”

「新的報告制度增加了*行政負擔*。」

administrative leave

A period when an employee is temporarily away from normal duties for administrative or organisational reasons.

administrative leave = 行政休假 / 行政停職安排

The precise implications depend on the employer and jurisdiction, so it should remain a compound note rather than a heavily generalized definition.

Important distinctions administrator vs manager

administrator

often emphasizes:

- * procedures
- * organisation
- * records
- * coordination
- * institutional systems
- * day-to-day operation

manager

often emphasizes:

- * directing people
- * performance
- * resources
- * decision-making
- * achieving objectives

There is significant overlap.

administrator vs administrative assistant

administrator

may have responsibility for coordinating or managing a programme, system, department, or operation.

administrative assistant

normally provides administrative support to individuals or teams.

The precise boundary varies between workplaces.

administrator vs secretary

secretary

traditionally focuses more on:

- * correspondence
- * appointments
- * records
- * clerical support

administrator

is broader and can include:

- * systems
- * procedures
- * programme coordination
- * institutional operations
- * compliance
- * planning

administrator vs moderator

Especially online:

administrator / admin

usually has higher-level control over:

- * system settings
- * user permissions
- * accounts
- * other moderators

moderator

usually focuses more narrowly on:

- * enforcing rules
- * reviewing content
- * managing discussions

Actual permission structures vary by platform.

administer vs manage manage

= broad everyday verb for being responsible for something administer

= more formal and particularly common with:

- * programmes
- * schemes
- * institutions
- * funds
- * tests
- * medication
- * oaths
- * formal processes

administer vs give

With medicine:

give medication

= ordinary everyday wording administer medication

= formal/professional medical wording administration vs management management

often focuses on directing:

- * people
- * resources
- * strategy
- * performance

administration

often focuses on:

- * procedures
- * systems
- * records
- * organisation
- * institutional operation

Again, considerable overlap exists.

administration vs administrator

administration

can mean:

1. the activity of managing;
2. the management group;
3. a governing authority;
4. a particular government;
5. giving medicine.

refers primarily to the person responsible for administration, plus several specialised legal and technical meanings.
