Important distinction 1: bag vs sack

bag

broad everyday container.

sack

usually larger, rougher, and used for bulk goods.

> shopping bag

購物袋

> sack of potatoes

一大袋薯仔

Important distinction 2: bag vs pouch

bag

broader, often larger.

pouch

small soft container or pocket-like holder.

> travel bag

旅行袋

> coin pouch

小錢袋

Important distinction 3: bag vs handbag

bag

very broad.

handbag

specific personal bag carried daily.

Every handbag is a kind of bag, but not every bag is a handbag.

Important distinction 4: bag vs luggage

bag

one individual container.

luggage

collective uncountable noun for bags/suitcases used in travel.

> a travel bag

一個旅行袋

> my luggage

我的行李

Not:

> a luggage ❌

Important distinction 5: bag vs baggage

bag

individual physical container.

baggage

usually collective luggage, especially AmE, and figuratively emotional burdens.

> a bag

一個袋

> checked baggage

寄艙行李

Because baggage has its own rich polysemy, it is best curated separately.

Important distinction 6: bag of X vs bagful of X

a bag of apples

one bag containing apples.

a bagful of apples

emphasizes the quantity that fills one bag.

Very close, but bagful focuses more on amount.

Important distinction 7: bag something literal vs figurative

Literal

> bag the groceries

把雜貨裝袋

Figurative informal

> bag a bargain

搶到便宜貨

Same verb, different idea.

Important distinction 8: bag a job vs get a job

get a job

neutral.

bag a job

informal and often conveys success or satisfaction at securing it.

> She got the job.

她得到工作。

> She bagged the job.

她成功搶到 / 拿下那份工作。

Important distinction 9: in the bag vs in a bag

Literal

> The gift is in a bag.

禮物在袋裏。

Idiom

> The deal is in the bag.

交易已經*十拿九穩*。

Tiny article change, completely different meaning.

Important distinction 10: mixed bag vs mixture

mixture

neutral combination.

mixed bag

often means varied and uneven in quality.

> a mixture of styles

多種風格的混合

> a mixed bag of results

結果有好有壞

Important distinction 11: let the cat out of the bag vs let something slip

These are close.

let the cat out of the bag

reveal the secret itself.

let something slip accidentally reveal some information.

Both can mean 說漏嘴, but cat out of the bag is more idiomatic and vivid.

Important distinction 12: baggy vs loose

loose

not tight.

baggy

very loose and hanging in folds.

> loose shirt

鬆身恤衫

> baggy shirt

非常寬鬆、鬆垮的恤衫

Family-extension note

Bag has several useful modern branches:

1. physical container

- * bag
- * shopping bag
- * paper bag
- * travel bag

2. quantity

- * bag of X
- * bagful

3. body feature

- * bags under your eyes

4. verb: put into a bag

- * bag the groceries

5. verb: successfully obtain

- * bag a bargain
- * bag a job
- * bag a seat

6. verb: hunt/capture

- * bag an animal

7. idioms

- * in the bag
- * let the cat out of the bag
- * mixed bag
- * bag and baggage

8. adjective family

* baggy

For your passage, the exact branch is straightforward:

bag = a physical container for carrying purchases

But the sentence uses it metaphorically as part of a larger contrast:

> shopping bag = material consumption

> heart = emotional significance

Master comparison

old bag	貶義稱呼	offensive informal term

For your original sentence

> ...because a good gift should not just fill a shopping bag; it should leave a mark on someone's heart.

Here:

bag = 購物袋中的「袋」；用來裝購買商品的實體容器

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 因為一份好禮物不應只是裝滿一個購物袋，而應該在別人心裏留下痕跡。

The sentence deliberately sets up:

> bag → physical things you can buy and carry > heart → emotional meaning that cannot simply be purchased

So bag itself is literal here, while the overall sentence is metaphorical.
