channel someone = 以自己的行為、造型或表達方式令人聯想到某人的特色或風格

81. channel your inner X — 發揮你內在的某種角色 / 特質

A common humorous/informal pattern.

Practice 1

> Channel your inner designer and make the room more creative.

發揮你內在的設計師本色，令房間更有創意。

Practice 2

> She channelled her inner leader during the crisis.

危機期間，她發揮出內在的領導者特質。

MCQ-ready definition:

channel your inner X = humorous/informal: 刻意表現出與 X 相關的性格或能力

V. SPIRITUALIST SENSE

82. channel a spirit/entity — 通靈；作為靈體傳話媒介

An established but belief-specific sense.

Practice 1

> The medium claimed to channel a spirit.

靈媒聲稱自己可以*通靈並傳達靈體訊息*。

Practice 2

> “Channel” is used in some spiritualist traditions for receiving messages believed to come from non-physical beings.

在某些靈性 / 通靈傳統中，channel 指聲稱接收並傳達非物質存在的訊息。

MCQ-ready definition:

channel = 在某些靈性信仰中，聲稱讓靈體或其他非物質存在透過自己傳達訊息

This describes the usage, not whether the underlying belief is factually established.

83. channeling / channelling — 通靈活動

Practice 1

> The book discusses spiritual channeling.

這本書討論靈性*通靈活動*。

Practice 2

> Channelling has a specific meaning in some New Age traditions.

channelling 在某些新時代靈性傳統中有特定含義。

W. CHANNELISATION / CHANNELIZATION

84. channelize/channelise = direct into a channel — 導流；使沿指定路線流動

Practice 1

> Engineers channelized the stream to control flooding.

工程師整治河道並導流以控制水浸。

Practice 2

> Traffic was channelised into separate lanes.

交通被分流到不同車道。

MCQ-ready definition:

channelize = 把水流、交通、人流等導入特定渠道或路線

85. channelization/channelisation — 導流；渠道化

Practice 1

> River channelization changed the natural flow.

河道整治 / 渠道化改變了天然水流。

Practice 2

> Road channelisation can separate traffic movements.

道路交通導流設計可以分隔不同車流。

This is more specialist than ordinary channel.

Important distinction 1: channel vs method

method

how something is done.

channel

the route through which something passes.

> communication method = how we communicate > communication channel = where/through what route messages travel

Example:

> Method: written communication

> Channel: email

Important distinction 2: channel vs medium

medium

the general means/material carrying communication.

channel

often the particular route/platform.

Example:

> medium = digital communication

> channel = Slack

But business usage often overlaps.

Important distinction 3: channel vs platform

platform

the software/service environment.

channel

a particular communication route or space within/between platforms.

> Microsoft Teams = platform

> “Project Phoenix” = channel

But marketers also loosely call entire platforms channels.

Important distinction 4: channel vs contact point

channel

means of interaction:

- * phone,
- * email,
- * app.

contact point / touchpoint

specific occasion/place where customer interaction occurs.

Important distinction 5: channel vs line of communication

channel of communication

route or method.

line of communication

often emphasizes an established connection between particular parties.

Both overlap strongly.

Important distinction 6: official channel vs informal channel

official recognised by the organisation.

informal

communication outside formal reporting structures.

A quick private chat can be an informal channel.

Important distinction 7: back channel vs official channel

official channel

open, authorised formal route.

back channel

private or unofficial communication route.

A back channel is not automatically improper; sometimes it supports sensitive negotiations.

Important distinction 8: channel vs frequency

In telecommunications:

frequency

physical rate of oscillation.

channel

allocated communication path, which may correspond to a frequency or frequency band.

So:

> channel $\neq$ always one exact frequency.

Important distinction 9: TV channel vs TV station

TV station

broadcasting organisation/local station.

TV channel

service/frequency/program stream viewers select.

In everyday speech they can overlap:

- > a news channel
- > a local TV station

but conceptually they differ.

Important distinction 10: channel vs programme/show

channel

carries many programmes.

programme/show

one individual piece of content.

- > BBC One = channel
- > a documentary = programme

Important distinction 11: channel vs streaming service

traditional channel

linear stream of scheduled programming.

streaming service

normally provides on-demand digital content, though modern services may also contain “channels”.

The terms increasingly overlap technologically but remain conceptually different.

Important distinction 12: water channel vs canal

channel

broad:

* natural,

- * artificial,
- * part of a river,
- * navigable waterway.

canal

specifically a constructed waterway.

So:

- > every canal is an artificial water channel
- > not every channel is a canal.

Important distinction 13: channel vs river

river

the whole natural flowing-water system.

river channel

the physical bed/path through which the river flows.

A river may split into multiple channels.

Important distinction 14: channel vs strait

strait

naturally narrow body of water connecting larger bodies of water.

channel

broader; can mean:

- * a strait-like waterway,
- * navigable route,
- * river path.

Some proper geographical names use Channel.

Important distinction 15: channel vs shipping lane

channel

physical/navigable water route.

shipping lane

designated route used by ships, often across open water.

Important distinction 16: channel vs groove

groove

long narrow cut/depression in a surface.

channel

can be a groove specifically designed for something to pass through:

- * water,
- * cable,
- * fluid.

Important distinction 17: sales channel vs distribution channel

sales channel

focuses on how transactions reach customers.

distribution channel

focuses more broadly on how products move through intermediaries to customers.

They often overlap.

Important distinction 18: marketing channel vs communication channel

marketing channel

route used to reach/promote/sell to customers.

communication channel

route used for exchanging information.

Social media can function as both.

Important distinction 19: direct vs indirect channel

direct channel

company → customer

indirect channel

company → intermediary → customer

Examples of intermediaries:

- * distributors,
- * wholesalers,
- * retailers,
- * resellers.

Important distinction 20: multichannel vs omnichannel

This is a very useful modern business distinction.

multichannel

use several channels.

omnichannel

integrate those channels so customer experience/data flows smoothly between them.

So:

- > multichannel = many channels
- > omnichannel = many connected channels

Important distinction 21: channel partner vs customer

customer

buys/uses your product.

channel partner

helps you sell/distribute it onward.

A reseller may be both a customer and a channel partner, depending on the relationship.

Important distinction 22: channel conflict

This does not mean:

> an argument inside a Slack channel.

In sales/business it means:

different routes to market compete or undermine one another.

Example:

> manufacturer sells directly online at a low price

> retailers become unhappy

= channel conflict

Important distinction 23: channel resources vs allocate resources

allocate formally assign an amount.

channel

direct resources toward a particular area or purpose.

> allocate $1 million to training > 正式撥款一百萬

> channel more resources into training > 把更多資源集中投入培訓

Important distinction 24: channel vs direct as verbs

direct

guide where something goes.

channel

often suggests directing something through a particular route or concentrating it toward a purpose.

> direct traffic > 指揮交通

> channel traffic through one lane > 把交通導入一條車道

Important distinction 25: channel emotion vs suppress emotion

suppress

hold emotion back/prevent expression.

channel

redirect it into another activity or constructive form.

> suppress anger > 壓抑憤怒

> channel anger into exercise > 把憤怒透過運動疏導

Important distinction 26: channel energy vs spend energy

spend/use energy

consume it.

channel energy

direct it toward a particular purpose.

This directional metaphor is central to the verb.

Important distinction 27: channel someone vs imitate someone

imitate

copy someone's behaviour/style.

channel

more figurative: evoke or embody something characteristic of them.

> channeling a famous singer

often means:

> “giving off that singer's style or spirit”

rather than making an exact copy.

Important distinction 28: channel a spirit

This is different from:

> channel someone's style.

The spiritualist sense claims a person acts as a medium for messages from a non-physical entity.

The style sense is metaphorical.

Important distinction 29: channelled / channeled spelling

BrE:

* channelled
* channelling

AmE:

* channeled
* channeling

Both are standard.

The base noun/verb remains:

> channel

Important distinction 30: channel in your passage

The sentence says:

> agreed channels for updates

This is more specific than simply:

> “communicate more.”

The team should decide:

* which channel to use,
* what kind of information belongs there,
* who receives it,
* how frequently updates are expected.

For example:

> Slack for routine progress
> email for formal approval
> project-management software for task status
> call for urgent issues

That is precisely what structured communication means in this paragraph.

Family-extension note

The channel family has an unusually coherent metaphorical structure:

Core image:

a defined route through which something flows

Originally/physically this may be:

- * water,
- * a ship,
- * a signal.

The same idea expands into:

1. workplace communication

- * communication channel
- * reporting channel
- * update channel

2. formal organisational communication

- * official channels
- * proper channels

3. diplomacy

- * diplomatic channels
- * back channel

4. digital communication spaces

- * Slack/Teams channel

5. broadcasting

- * TV channel
- * radio channel

6. telecommunications

- * frequency channel
- * channel capacity

7. audio

- * left/right channel
- * multichannel audio

8. digital images

- * RGB channel
- * alpha channel

9. water geography

- * river channel
- * English Channel

10. navigation

- * shipping channel

11. drainage/irrigation

- * drainage channel
- * irrigation channel

12. physical grooves

- * cable channel
- * C-channel

13. biology

- * ion channel
- * channel protein

14. business routes to customers

- * sales channel
- * distribution channel

15. integrated commerce

- * multichannel
- * omnichannel

16. verb: direct resources

- * channel funds
- * channel effort

17. verb: direct emotions

- * channel anger
- * channel energy

18. verb: direct flows

- * channel water
- * channel traffic

19. figurative embodiment

- * channel another person's style
- * channel your inner X

20. spiritualist usage

- * channel a spirit

21. technical directing

- * channelisation/channelization

For your passage, the exact branch is:

channel = an agreed route or platform through which team information is communicated

For your original sentence

> Teams should begin with a shared objective, a realistic timeline and agreed channels for updates.

Here:

channels for updates = 團隊預先同意，應透過哪些固定平台、方式或正式途徑來傳遞進度和重要資訊

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 團隊應先確立一個共同目標、切合實際的時間表，以及大家同意使用的進度更新溝通渠道。

The cleanest contrast is:

> method = 怎樣做
> medium = 用甚麼媒介
> platform = 使用哪個軟件 / 系統環境 > channel = 資訊實際沿哪條既定途徑傳遞
> audience/recipient = 資訊傳給誰

And the deeper semantic link across almost the whole family is beautifully consistent:

> river channel → water flows through it > radio channel → signals flow through it > sales channel → products/business flow through it > communication channel → information flows through it > channel funds/energy → deliberately make resources or energy flow toward a chosen destination

So in your teamwork passage, channel is essentially a metaphorical information pathway.
