Important distinction: community vs neighbourhood

neighbourhood

= the physical local area and the people around it.

community

= the people and social connection, which may or may not be geographically local.

> neighbourhood bakery

> = 社區 / 街坊麵包店

> local community

> = 本地社區居民

A community can exist online without a neighbourhood.

Important distinction: community vs society

community

usually smaller and more connected through shared place/identity/interests.

society

much broader:

the overall system/population of people living together.

> local community

> = 本地社區

> modern society

> = 現代社會

Important distinction: community vs group

group

very broad:

any set of people/things.

community

usually implies a stronger shared connection, identity, interaction, or belonging.

Ten strangers in a room are a group, but not necessarily a community.

Important distinction: community vs network

community

emphasizes belonging and shared identity/interests.

network

emphasizes connections and relationships among individuals/organizations.

> design community

> = 設計社群

> professional network

> = 專業人脈網絡

A network does not necessarily create a sense of belonging.

Important distinction: community vs audience

audience

= people receiving/watching/listening to content.

community

= people who also interact, identify with the group, and often connect with one another.

A bakery's followers can be an audience; if they interact and develop belonging, they may become a community.

Important distinction: community vs public

public

= people in general.

community

= a more specific connected group.

> public opinion

> = 公眾意見

> local community opinion

> = 本地社區意見

Important distinction: community vs population

population

= people/organisms counted within an area/category.

community

= emphasizes interaction and shared connection.

In ecology:

* population = members of one species

* community = populations of different species living together

This distinction is especially important scientifically.

Important distinction: community — geographical vs interest-based

Geographical:

> local community

> = 同一地區的居民

Interest-based:

> art community

> = 藝術社群

Same word, but geography is not necessary in the second.

Important distinction: community — people vs sense of community

community

can mean the actual people:

> “The community supported the bakery.”

= 社區居民支持麵包店。

sense of community

means the feeling:

> belonging, familiarity, mutual support

= 社區歸屬感 / 人情連結

Your source uses the feeling, not simply the group of people.

Important distinction: community vs communal

community

noun:

> local community

> = 本地社區

communal

adjective:

> communal table

> = 共用餐桌

Do not say:

> community kitchen

> if you specifically mean a kitchen shared by residents; communal kitchen is often more precise.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

* community — local residents = 社區 / 社區居民

* sense of community = 社區歸屬感 / 人與人連結感
