Important distinction: consistent vs stable

stable

= not changing much / not likely to suddenly change.

consistent

= repeatedly similar and following the same standard.

> stable price

> = 價格穩定

> consistent quality

> = 品質每次都一致

Something can be stable without being consistent across different items, and vice versa.

Important distinction: consistent vs steady

You already have steady mapped.

steady

= continuous, even, not fluctuating sharply.

consistent

= repeatedly meeting the same standard.

> steady growth

> = 穩定增長

> consistent quality

> = 品質一貫

Very close, but typical collocations differ.

Important distinction: consistent vs constant constant

= continuous or unchanged all the time.

consistent

= similar/reliable across repeated occasions.

> constant noise

> = 持續不停的噪音

> consistent service

> = 每次服務品質穩定

Do not confuse them.

Important distinction: consistent vs reliable

reliable

= can be trusted to work/perform as expected.

consistent

= produces similar results/behaviour repeatedly.

A bakery is reliable partly because its quality is consistent.

Important distinction: consistent vs regular regular

= happening at repeated intervals / normal pattern.

consistent

= maintained at a similar standard or manner.

> regular customer

> = 熟客 / 定期顧客

> consistent customer service

> = 一貫穩定的顧客服務

Important distinction: consistent vs uniform

uniform

= the same throughout, often almost identical.

consistent

= sufficiently similar and according to one standard, not necessarily identical.

> uniform colour

> = 完全均勻的顏色

> consistent style

> = 前後一致的風格

Consistent allows some natural variation.

Important distinction: consistent vs identical

You curated identical under identity.

identical

= exactly the same.

consistent

= compatible/reliably similar.

> results can be consistent without being identical.

This is especially important in research.

Important distinction: consistent vs compatible

compatible

= can exist/work together without conflict.

consistent

= agrees with or does not contradict.

> evidence is consistent with the theory

> = 證據與理論相符

> software is compatible with the device

> = 軟件與裝置兼容

Not interchangeable.

Important distinction: consistent with vs according to consistent with

= does not contradict / matches.

according to

= based on what a source/rule says.

> "The result is consistent with the theory."

= 結果與理論相符。

> “According to the theory, this should happen.”

= 根據理論，應該會發生。

Different grammar and meaning.

Important distinction: consistency — stability vs texture

This is one of the strongest family-level polysemy contrasts.

Performance:

> “The bakery needs consistency.”

= 麵包店需要品質穩定。

Food:

> “The dough has the right consistency.”

= 麵糰的稠度 / 質地正確。

Same noun, completely different domain.

Excellent MCQ material for this passage.

Important distinction: consistent quality vs high quality

high quality

= quality level is good.

consistent quality

= the level stays similar each time.

A product can be:

> consistently mediocre

= 一直都是普通水平

So consistent does not automatically mean good.

In your passage, it is positive because context says the standard “stays high”.

Important distinction: consistent = good?

Not necessarily.

> “The food is consistently bad.”

= 食物一直都很差。

So consistent only means:

> the pattern is stable/repeated

The evaluation comes from what follows:

* consistently good

* consistently poor

* consistently high

This is important for MCQ precision.

Important distinction: consistent with vs consistent in consistent with + thing

= 與某事相符

> consistent with the evidence consistent in + behaviour/approach

= 在某方面保持一貫

> consistent in applying the rules

Useful grammar contrast.

Family-extension sweep
