This is figurative geographical extension.

Important distinction: corner vs angle

You already curated angle.

corner

= place/point where edges or surfaces meet.

angle

= mathematical/geometric relationship between two lines/surfaces, or figurative viewpoint.

> corner of a room

> = 房間角落

> 90-degree angle

> = 90 度角

Not interchangeable.

Important distinction: corner vs edge

corner

= where two edges/sides meet.

edge

= outer boundary/side.

> corner of a table

> = 桌角

> edge of a table

> = 桌邊

Important distinction: corner vs side

corner

small meeting point/area.

one whole lateral part/surface.

> sit in the corner

> = 坐在角落

> stand at the side

> = 站在旁邊

Important distinction: corner vs area

area

general region/space.

corner

often implies:

- * small part of a larger space;
- * edge/less central location;
- * cozy/special designated spot.

Your source:

> little corner for butterflies and bees

sounds warmer and more specific than:

> small area

Important distinction: corner vs section

section

deliberately divided part of something.

corner

can be informal/small/spatially tucked away.

> reading section

> = 閱讀區

> reading corner

> = 閱讀角

The latter sounds smaller/cozier.

Important distinction: corner vs nook

nook

= small, sheltered/cozy corner.

corner

broader and more neutral.

> reading nook

> = 舒適的小閱讀角

> reading corner

> = 閱讀區 / 閱讀角

Important distinction: backed into a corner vs in trouble

in trouble

broad:

= 有麻煩

backed into a corner

stronger:

= 被逼到幾乎沒有選擇 / 退路

So the metaphor adds constraint and pressure.

Important distinction: around the corner — literal vs figurative

Literal:

> “The café is around the corner.”

= 咖啡店就在轉角附近。

Figurative:

> “Summer is around the corner.”

= 夏天快到了。

Excellent MCQ contrast.

Important distinction: corner office — literal vs symbolic

Literal:

office located at building corner.

Figurative/cultural:

senior executive status.

Not every corner office belongs to a senior executive, but the phrase may symbolize prestige.

Family-extension sweep
