Important distinction 1: correct vs fix

Very relevant to your passage.

correct

focuses on removing an error.

fix

focuses on solving a problem or repairing something.

> correct a spelling mistake

> 改正串字錯誤

> fix a broken computer

> 修理壞電腦

For some abstract problems, both work:

> correct / fix an error

but correct is especially natural with errors, information, grammar and calculations.

Important distinction 2: correct vs revise

correct

change what is wrong.

revise review and modify something, possibly even when it is not technically wrong.

> correct factual errors

> 更正事實錯誤

> revise the whole report

> 修訂整份報告

Revision is broader.

Important distinction 3: correct vs edit

edit

prepare or improve text/content by changing:

- * structure,
- * style,
- * wording,
- * errors.

correct

specifically remove errors.

So:

> editing includes more than correcting.

Important distinction 4: correct vs improve

correct

remove something wrong.

improve

make something better.

A sentence can be:

> grammatically correct

but still need stylistic improvement.

Important distinction 5: correct vs accurate

correct

not wrong according to fact/rule/answer.

accurate

very close to the truth or exact measurement.

> correct answer

> 正確答案

> accurate measurement

> 準確測量

They overlap, but accurate often emphasizes precision.

Important distinction 6: correct vs true

true

corresponds to reality.

correct

can also correspond to:

* rules,

* calculations,

* procedures,

* answers.

> a true statement

> 真實的陳述

> the correct password

> 正確密碼

Not every use of correct naturally becomes true.

Important distinction 7: correct vs appropriate

correct

符合某項規則、標準或要求。

appropriate

適合某個情況。

> correct answer

> 正確答案

> appropriate behaviour

> 合適的行為

Sometimes correct behaviour is possible, but it sounds more rule-based.

Important distinction 8: correct someone vs criticize someone

correct

point out and replace an error.

criticize

express disapproval or identify faults more broadly.

> She corrected my pronunciation.

> 她糾正我的發音。

> She criticized my presentation.

> 她批評我的簡報。

Correction does not necessarily imply negative judgment.

Important distinction 9: correct someone's behaviour vs punish them

correct behaviour

try to change it.

punish impose a negative consequence because of it.

A manager may correct behaviour without punishing the employee.

Important distinction 10: correct for vs correct something

Compare:

> correct the measurement

> 修正這項測量結果

> correct for temperature

> 在計算中校正溫度因素

correct for X means account for X's influence.

Important distinction 11: correction vs amendment

correction

removes an error.

amendment

formal change or addition to a document, law, agreement, etc.; it need not be correcting a mistake.

So:

> typo correction

> 串字更正

> contract amendment

> 合約修訂

Important distinction 12: correction vs feedback

correction

tells you what is wrong and often gives the right version.

feedback

broader comments about strengths, weaknesses, and improvement.

A teacher's feedback can include corrections.

Important distinction 13: correct answer vs best answer

correct answer

objectively or rule-based right.

best answer

most suitable among alternatives.

In many language questions, more than one sentence may be grammatically correct, but one may be more natural.

Important distinction 14: grammatically correct vs natural

This is a crucial language-learning distinction.

A sentence can be:

grammatically correct

but unnatural in everyday English

So correctness $\neq$ naturalness.

Important distinction 15: technically correct

This often carries an interesting nuance:

> “Your statement is not strictly false, but it may miss the broader point.”

So technically correct can sometimes sound mildly critical rather than fully approving.

Important distinction 16: corrective vs corrected

corrective designed to fix a problem.

> corrective action

> 糾正措施

corrected

already changed to remove the error.

> corrected version

> 已修正版

So:

corrective = causes correction

corrected = has received correction

Important distinction 17: correct vs rectify

rectify formal: put a wrong/problematic situation right.

correct

broader and more common.

> correct a spelling error

> 改正串字

> rectify an administrative error

> 糾正行政錯誤

Rectify often sounds more formal and situation-focused.

Important distinction 18: correct vs remedy

correct

remove an error or abnormality.

remedy

solve or improve an undesirable situation.

> correct inaccurate data

> 修正錯誤數據

> remedy poor communication

> 改善溝通不良問題

Important distinction 19: market correction

This is not:

> someone correcting a factual mistake in the market.

It is a lexicalized finance use meaning:

市場價格從較高水平明顯回落

Important distinction 20: corrections

In:

> the corrections system

correction has developed into an institutional concept concerning punishment, custody, supervision and rehabilitation.

It is unrelated to proofreading.

Important distinction 21: correct in your passage

Your passage says:

> time is wasted correcting mistakes that could have been prevented through simple clarification

The logic is important:

unclear communication

- mistakes happen
- workers must redo or repair work
- time is wasted.

So correcting here includes not only pointing out mistakes but actually:

changing the work so the mistakes no longer remain Family-extension note

The correct family has several major modern branches:

1. remove an error

- * correct a mistake
- * correct information
- * correct pronunciation

2. adjust a problem or abnormality

- * correct an imbalance
- * correct posture
- * correct vision

3. scientific/statistical adjustment

- * correct for age
- * correct for temperature

4. be right/accurate

- * correct answer

* correct information

5. conform to a rule or standard

* correct procedure

* grammatically correct

6. noun: modification

* correction

* make a correction

7. remedial action

* corrective measures

* corrective lenses

8. specialized institutional/technical meanings

* market correction

* corrections system

For your passage, the exact branch is:

correct = change mistakes so that the work becomes accurate or acceptable

For your original sentence

> As a result, time is wasted correcting mistakes that could have been prevented through simple clarification.

Here:

*correcting mistakes = 錯誤已經發生之後，員工還要花額外時間找出錯誤、修改有問題的工作，直到內容或做法變得正確

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 結果，員工浪費了不少時間去*改正原本可以透過簡單澄清而避免的錯誤*。

The cleanest contrast is:

- > identify an error = 發現錯誤
- > correct an error = 把錯誤改成正確
- > edit = 編輯、改善整體內容
- > revise = 修訂，可以不只處理錯誤
- > fix a problem = 解決問題，範圍較廣
- > prevent an error = 在錯誤發生之前阻止它

And the passage deliberately contrasts the last two stages:

> clarification beforehand → prevent mistakes

> poor communication → mistakes happen → correct them afterwards

The writer's point is that prevention is more efficient than spending time correcting avoidable mistakes later.
