Part of speech: verb (動詞)

Related noun/adjective: dismissal (名詞) , dismissive (形容詞)

Your sentence:

> “That concern is real and should not be dismissed.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, dismiss means to reject or treat a concern as unimportant, unfounded, or not worthy of serious attention.

The writer is saying that even though they disagree with using restaurants as unofficial classrooms, the underlying problem—the shortage of quiet study space—is genuine and should not simply be brushed aside.

繁體中文： 輕視；不予理會；把某個憂慮 / 問題當作不重要或沒有根據而拒絕認真考慮

中文翻譯：

> “That concern is real and should not be dismissed.”

「這個憂慮確實存在，不應被輕視 / 置之不理 / 當作無關重要而否定。」

Here:

dismiss a concern = 不認真回應某個疑慮，而是認為它不值得理會或沒有充分根據

A. SEND SOMEONE AWAY

1. dismiss someone = tell them they may leave (讓某人離開) — 讓.....離開；解散

This is one of the oldest and most central meanings.

Practice 1

> “The manager dismissed the staff after the meeting.”

「經理在會議後讓員工離開 / 解散。」

Practice 2

> “The teacher dismissed the class early.”

「老師提早下課 / 讓全班離開。」

*dismiss someone = 正式告知某人其目前的活動 / 責任已結束，可以離開***

This often has a slightly formal or authoritative tone.

2. *dismiss a class = end the lesson and allow students to leave (下課) ******

Practice 3

> “The teacher dismissed the class at noon.”

「老師中午*宣布下課*。」

This does not mean:

> fire the class.

It means:

> end the session and release the students.

3. *Class dismissed! = 下課！***

A fixed classroom formula:

> Class dismissed.

= 「下課。」

It can also be used humorously outside school to mean:

> discussion over / that's all.

4. *dismiss a meeting/group = formally end it (散會 / 解散) ******

Less common than:

> adjourn/end the meeting

but possible in contexts where an authority releases participants.

5. dismiss troops/personnel = order them to disperse/leave formation (軍事) — 解散

In military drill:

> Dismiss!

is a command permitting personnel to leave formation.

繁體中文：  解散！ **

This is different from:

> dismiss someone from military service which means terminate their service.

6. dismiss someone from someone's presence = send them away (正式 / 文學) **

Practice 4

> “The king dismissed the messenger.”

「國王叫信使退下。」

Formal/literary.

The implication is:

> the superior no longer requires the person's presence.

B. REMOVE SOMEONE FROM EMPLOYMENT / OFFICE

7. dismiss an employee = terminate their employment (解僱) — 解僱；革職

A major modern meaning.

Practice 5

> “The company dismissed him for serious misconduct.”

「公司因嚴重失職而解僱了他。」

Practice 6

> “She was dismissed from her job.”

「她被解僱了。」

dismiss = formally end someone's employment, often by decision of the employer

Especially common in British/formal employment English.

American everyday English often uses:

> fire.

8. dismiss someone from a post/position = remove from office (免職) **

Practice 7

> “He was dismissed from his post.”

「他被免職 / 革職。」

This can apply to:

- * employment
- * official posts
- * management roles
- * institutional positions

9. dismiss someone from service = terminate their service (解除職務 / 除名) **

Depending on context:

- * military
- * police
- * public service
- * organization

Exact legal consequences vary.

10. dismissal = termination of employment (解僱) **

Practice 8

> “The employee challenged his dismissal.”

「該員工對自己的解僱提出異議。」

Common:

- * employee dismissal
- * dismissal from employment
- * notice of dismissal
- * grounds for dismissal

C. EMPLOYMENT-LAW COMPOUNDS

These terms vary by jurisdiction, so the following are lexical explanations rather than jurisdiction-specific legal advice.

11. unfair dismissal = 不公平解僱

A legal/employment-law term in jurisdictions recognizing such a claim.

Broadly refers to dismissal that fails applicable statutory standards of fairness.

Exact rights and tests vary by jurisdiction.

12. wrongful dismissal = 違約解僱 / 不當解僱

Generally concerned with breach of contractual/legal obligations in terminating employment—for example, notice requirements—depending on the jurisdiction.

Important:

> wrongful dismissal and unfair dismissal are not necessarily the same legal claim.

13. summary dismissal = 即時解僱

Dismissal without ordinary notice, generally associated with sufficiently serious misconduct under applicable law/contract.

Exact threshold varies.

14. constructive dismissal = 推定解僱 / 變相解僱

Broadly, an employee treats the employment relationship as terminated because the employer has committed a sufficiently serious breach or fundamentally changed conditions, where recognized by the applicable legal system.

The precise test is jurisdiction-specific.

15. dismissal for cause = 有因解僱

Especially North American employment usage:

> termination based on serious employee fault/misconduct or another legally sufficient cause.

Again, exact meaning varies by law and contract.

16. dismissal without cause = 無因解僱

Employment may be ended without alleging serious fault, subject to applicable:

- * notice
- * severance
- * contractual
- * statutory requirements.

Specialist domain terminology.

17. dismissal notice / letter of dismissal = 解僱通知 / 解僱信

A formal notice communicating termination.

D. REJECT AN IDEA / CLAIM / CONCERN

18. dismiss something = decide it is unimportant or unworthy of attention (不予理會) — 輕視 ; 不理會

This is the exact passage branch.

Practice 9 — Original

> “The concern is real and should not be dismissed.”

「這個疑慮確實存在，不應被輕視 / 置之不理。」

Practice 10

> “We should not dismiss their complaints.”

「我們不應該不理會 / 輕視他們的投訴。」

dismiss = refuse to take something seriously

19. dismiss a concern = treat it as not worth serious attention (忽視疑慮) **

Practice 11

> “Management initially dismissed the safety concerns.”

「管理層最初輕視 / 沒有認真看待那些安全疑慮。」

Important contrast:

> address a concern

> vs

> dismiss a concern.

20. dismiss an idea/suggestion/proposal = reject it as unsuitable/unimportant (否決 / 不採納) **

Practice 12

> “She dismissed the proposal immediately.”

「她立即否定 / 拒絕考慮這項建議。」

This can range from:

* formally rejecting;

to

* casually brushing aside.

21. dismiss a claim/allegation = reject as unsupported/untrue (否定)

Practice 13

> “He dismissed the allegation as false.”

「他把該項指控斥為不實。」

This wording does not itself prove the claim is actually false.

It describes his response.

22. dismiss criticism = reject criticism rather than accept it (不接受批評)

> “The company dismissed the criticism.”

「公司不接受 / 駁回該項批評。」

Depending on tone, this can suggest:

> refusing to engage seriously.

23. dismiss warnings = disregard warnings (不理會警告)

> “The warnings were initially dismissed.”

「那些警告最初被置之不理。」

24. dismiss evidence = reject it as unreliable/irrelevant (否定證據) **

Can be used in ordinary reasoning:

> “He dismissed the evidence as irrelevant.”

「他認為那些證據無關而不予採納 / 理會。」

Legal contexts require more precise terms depending on what the court actually does.

E. DISMISS X AS Y

25. dismiss something as + adjective/noun = reject by categorizing it as unworthy/untrue (斥為) **

A very important construction.

Practice 14

> “She dismissed the idea as unrealistic.”

「她把這個想法斥為不切實際。」

Practice 15

> “The report was dismissed as speculation.”

「這份報告被斥為純屬猜測。」

Common:

- * dismiss as irrelevant
- * dismiss as unrealistic
- * dismiss as nonsense
- * dismiss as impossible
- * dismiss as propaganda
- * dismiss as coincidence
- * dismiss as exaggeration

26. dismiss someone as incompetent / inexperienced / irrelevant (把某人視為.....而不重視) **

Practice 16

> “They dismissed him as inexperienced.”

「他們因認為他經驗不足而不把他當回事。」

This is not employment dismissal.

It means:

> form a negative judgment and stop taking the person seriously.

27. dismiss something as 'just X'

A frequent minimizing construction:

> “Don't dismiss it as just a minor inconvenience.”

「不要把它只當成小麻煩而不重視。」

This is extremely close to your passage's argumentative style.

F. DISMISS OUT OF HAND

28. dismiss something out of hand = reject immediately without serious consideration (斷然拒絕)

Practice 17

> “The proposal should not be dismissed out of hand.”

「這項建議不應在沒有認真考慮下便斷然否決。」 out of hand here means:

> immediately / without proper examination.

Not to be confused with:

> get out of hand

= become uncontrollable.

29. reject/dismiss out of hand

Both are common.

Dismiss out of hand especially emphasizes:

> refusal even to engage with the idea.

G. STOP THINKING ABOUT SOMETHING

30. dismiss something from one's mind = deliberately stop thinking about it (摒除) — 把.....拋諸腦後；不再想

Practice 18

> “She tried to dismiss the incident from her mind.”

「她試圖把那件事拋諸腦後。」

Practice 19

> “He could not dismiss the possibility from his mind.”

「他無法把那種可能性從腦海中排除。」

This differs from:

> dismiss something as unimportant.

Here the focus is:

> remove it from your thoughts.

31. dismiss a thought = put it aside mentally (打消念頭) **

> “He dismissed the thought and returned to work.”

「他打消了那個念頭，繼續工作。」

32. dismiss fears/doubts = decide they need not trouble you (消除 / 不再理會) **

This can mean:

> reject the fears as unfounded.

Example:

> “She tried to dismiss her doubts.”

「她試圖不再理會 / 打消自己的疑慮。」

Note that:

> allay someone's fears means reduce the fears, whereas:

> dismiss fears

may imply deciding they do not deserve attention.

H. LEGAL: DISMISS A CASE / ACTION / CHARGE

33. dismiss a case/action/claim = terminate it without continuing to full adjudication (法律) — 駁回 / 撤銷案件或申索

Practice 20

> “The court dismissed the claim.”

「法院駁回了申索。」

Practice 21

> “The judge dismissed the case.”

「法官駁回 / 終止了案件。」

Precise procedural effect varies by jurisdiction and type of case.

34. dismiss a complaint = reject/end legal or administrative complaint (駁回投訴 / 申訴) **

Can occur in:

- * courts
- * tribunals
- * regulatory bodies
- * administrative procedures

35. dismiss charges = terminate/drop charges in legal process (撤銷 / 駁回控罪) **

Practice 22

> “The judge dismissed one of the charges.”

「法官撤銷 / 駁回其中一項控罪。」

The actor/procedure differs by legal system; prosecutors may also drop/withdraw charges.

36. dismiss an appeal = reject the appeal (駁回上訴) **

Practice 23

> “The court dismissed the appeal.”

「法院駁回上訴。」

Opposite in many systems:

> allow/uphold the appeal.

37. motion to dismiss = motion seeking termination of a claim/case (要求駁回的動議 / 申請) **

Especially prominent in U.S. legal terminology.

A party asks the court to dismiss some or all of the opposing claim.

Grounds and procedural rules vary.

38. dismissal of proceedings = termination of legal proceedings (程序被駁回 / 終止) **

Formal legal noun use.

I. WITH PREJUDICE / WITHOUT PREJUDICE — LEGAL

39. dismiss with prejudice = dismissal barring refiling of the same claim in that form (有終局效力的駁回) **

Especially U.S. legal terminology.

Broadly:

> the dismissed claim generally cannot simply be refiled.

Exact preclusive effects depend on law and order wording.

40. dismiss without prejudice = dismissal generally allowing possible refiling (不妨礙再提訴的駁回) **

Broadly:

> the claimant may potentially bring the claim again, subject to procedural and limitation rules.

Again, jurisdiction-specific.

41. voluntary dismissal = claimant voluntarily ends claim (自願撤訴 / 撤回) **

Procedural details vary.

42. involuntary dismissal = court-ordered dismissal (非自願駁回) **

May occur for procedural or substantive reasons depending on the system.

43. dismiss for lack of jurisdiction / standing / failure to state a claim etc.

Common legal constructions:

- * dismissed for lack of jurisdiction
- * dismissed for procedural default
- * dismissed as time-barred
- * dismissed for failure to state a claim

Each has a separate legal basis; linguistically they all belong to the case-termination branch.

J. DISMISS A JURY / WITNESS

44. dismiss a jury = release jurors from further duty (解除陪審團職務) **

Practice 24

> “The judge dismissed the jury for the day.”

「法官讓陪審員當日退庭 / 結束職務。」

Or permanently after proceedings.

This derives from:

> send away / release from duty.

45. dismiss a witness = allow the witness to leave (讓證人退下) **

After testimony:

> “The witness was dismissed.”

「證人獲准離開證人席 / 退下。」

Formal.

K. MILITARY DISCIPLINE / SERVICE

46. dismiss someone from the armed forces/service = remove them from service (軍事) — 革除 / 解除軍職

This is employment/institutional removal.

47. dismissal from service = 除役 / 革職

The legal/disciplinary consequences vary among armed forces.

Not the same as:

> Dismiss!

which is merely a drill command to disperse.

L. SPORT: CRICKET

48. dismiss a batter/batsman = get them out (板球) — 令擊球手出局

A major sports sense.

Practice 25

> “The bowler dismissed the opening batter.”

「投球手令開場擊球手出局。」

dismiss a batter = cause their innings to end under a recognized mode of dismissal

49. be dismissed for X runs = be out after scoring X (板球) **

Practice 26

> “He was dismissed for 42.”

「他取得 42 分後出局。」

Here for 42 describes the batter's score, not the reason for dismissal.

50. dismissal = an instance/method of getting a batter out (板球) — 出局

> “The team took three quick dismissals.”

More commonly:

> took three wickets

depending on context.

51. methods of dismissal (板球)

Recognized forms include terms such as:

- * bowled
- * caught
- * leg before wicket (LBW)
- * run out
- * stumped
- * hit wicket

and other rarer methods under the Laws.

These are not meanings of dismiss, but they belong to its cricket domain.

M. DISMISSIVE

52. dismissive = showing that you think something is unimportant/unworthy (輕蔑的 / 不屑的)

Practice 27

> “Her response was dismissive.”

「她的回應帶有不屑 / 不當一回事的態度。」

Practice 28

> “He was dismissive of their concerns.”

「他對他們的疑慮表現得很不屑 / 不重視。」 dismissive = 表現出不願認真考慮某人 / 某事，彷彿它不值得注意

53. *dismissive of someone/something = treating as unworthy of attention (不重視) ****

Practice 29

> “Managers should not be dismissive of staff complaints.”

「管理層不應對員工投訴表現得不以為意 / 輕視。」

Key construction:

> dismissive of

Not usually:

> dismissive about.

54. dismissive attitude / tone / gesture / response

Common collocations:

* dismissive attitude

* dismissive tone

* dismissive reply

* dismissive gesture

* dismissive wave

* dismissive shrug

55. *dismissive wave = dismissive hand gesture (揮手表示不屑 / 不想理) ****

> “He gave a dismissive wave.”

「他不屑地揮了揮手，示意不想再理會。」

56. dismissive shrug = 不以為意地聳肩

A gesture communicating:

> it doesn't matter / I don't care / not worth discussing.

N. DISMISSIVELY

57. *dismissively = in a way showing disregard or lack of respect (不屑地) ******

Practice 30

> “‘That's ridiculous,’ she said dismissively.”

「『那太荒謬了。』她*不屑地*說。」

O. DISMISSIVENESS

58. *dismissiveness = quality of treating people/issues as unimportant (輕視態度) ******

Practice 31

> “His dismissiveness made the discussion difficult.”

「他的*輕視 / 不屑態度*令討論變得困難。」

Useful especially in:

- * psychology
- * communication
- * relationship discussion

P. DISMISSIBLE / DISMISSABLE

59. *dismissible/dismissable = capable of being dismissed (可被駁回 / 解僱 / 關閉的) ******

The form is context-dependent and relatively specialist.

Examples:

Legal

> a dismissible claim

= 可被駁回的申索

Employment

> dismissible misconduct

= 可構成解僱理由的失當行為

UI/software

> dismissible notification

= 可關閉 / 消除的通知

Both spellings occur; dismissible is often preferred in formal dictionary usage.

Q. USER-INTERFACE / SOFTWARE USE

60. dismiss a notification/dialog/pop-up = make it disappear from the interface (關閉) — 關閉 ; 移除

A major modern technical/UI use.

Practice 32

> “Tap outside the window to dismiss the dialog.”

「點按視窗外的位置以關閉對話框。」

Practice 33

> “Users can dismiss the notification.”

「使用者可以關閉 / 清除通知。」

This develops naturally from:

> send away/remove from attention.

61. dismiss a keyboard/menu/modal = close/hide it (介面) **

Common developer/UI vocabulary:

- * dismiss keyboard
- * dismiss modal
- * dismiss menu
- * dismiss overlay

Meaning:

> remove the temporary interface element from view.

62. dismissible notification/modal/banner (介面) **

Means:

> user can manually close/remove it.

R. MEDICAL / PROFESSIONAL “DISMISS”

63. dismiss a patient from care/practice = terminate professional relationship (醫療 , 部分地區) **

In some healthcare/legal contexts, a clinician or practice may dismiss a patient from the practice, meaning terminate the ongoing professional relationship according to applicable rules.

This is institutional terminology and not universal.

64. dismiss symptoms as trivial = wrongly or rightly regard symptoms as unimportant (醫療語境) **

> “The symptoms should not be dismissed as stress.”

「不應把這些症狀簡單歸因於壓力而不予重視。」

This is ordinary dismiss X as Y, applied medically.

65. dismiss a diagnosis / possibility = rule it out or reject it?

Careful:

In medical/scientific writing, dismiss can mean reject a possibility as not credible:

> “The diagnosis cannot yet be dismissed.”

= 目前仍不能排除 / 否定這個診斷。

But rule out is more precise when evidence excludes a diagnosis.

So:

> dismiss ≠ technically identical to rule out.

S. SCIENCE / RESEARCH

66. dismiss a hypothesis = reject it as unsupported (否定假說) **

Practice 34

> “The researchers could not completely dismiss the alternative hypothesis.”

「研究人員無法完全排除 / 否定另一個假說。」

This is argumentative/evidential dismiss.

67. dismiss a result as noise/error = treat as non-significant (視作誤差 / 雜訊) **

> “The anomaly was initially dismissed as measurement error.”

「這個異常最初被視為測量誤差而沒有重視。」

T. NOT TO BE DISMISSED

68. not to be dismissed = deserves serious attention (不可輕視) **

Practice 35

> “The risk is small but not to be dismissed.”

「風險雖小，但不可輕視。」

Formal useful pattern.

69. cannot be dismissed = cannot reasonably be rejected (不能排除 / 否定) **

> “The possibility cannot be dismissed.”

「這種可能性不能排除。」

Notice the Chinese may naturally be:

> 排除

rather than literal:

> 駁回.

U. DISMISS WITHOUT CONSIDERATION

70. summarily dismiss an idea/claim = reject quickly and decisively (斷然否定) **

Be careful because summary dismissal in employment has a technical sense.

But:

> “She summarily dismissed the suggestion.”

means:

> she immediately rejected it.

Context separates the meanings.

V. IMPORTANT COLLOCATIONS

People

- * dismiss an employee
- * dismiss a worker
- * dismiss a minister/official
- * dismiss a teacher
- * dismiss troops
- * dismiss the class
- * dismiss the jury

Ideas/issues

- * dismiss a concern
- * dismiss a complaint
- * dismiss an objection
- * dismiss a warning
- * dismiss a suggestion
- * dismiss a possibility
- * dismiss an explanation
- * dismiss evidence
- * dismiss criticism

Legal

- * dismiss a case
- * dismiss a claim
- * dismiss an action
- * dismiss an appeal
- * dismiss charges
- * motion to dismiss

Mental

- * dismiss a thought
- * dismiss something from one's mind

Sport

- * dismiss a batter

Computing

- * dismiss a notification
- * dismiss a dialog
- * dismiss a modal

W. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS

dismiss vs ignore

ignore

= pay no attention to something.

dismiss

= actively decide/judge that it is not worth attention.

Compare:

> “He ignored the concern.”

Maybe he did not respond.

> “He dismissed the concern.”

He effectively judged:

> the concern is not serious/valid enough to merit attention.

Your passage uses the stronger dismiss.

dismiss vs disregard disregard

= choose not to consider/follow something.

dismiss

often adds an evaluative judgment:

> it is unimportant, irrelevant, false, etc.

> disregard an instruction

> dismiss an objection

dismiss vs reject

reject

is broader:

> refuse to accept.

dismiss

often suggests:

> reject because you consider it unimportant, implausible, or unworthy.

> reject an application

> dismiss an idea as absurd

But legal dismiss a claim is also a formal procedural use.

dismiss vs deny deny

= state that something is untrue / refuse something.

dismiss

= treat it as not worthy of serious consideration.

> deny the allegation > dismiss the allegation as absurd

Not identical.

dismiss vs refute

Critical distinction.

refute

properly means:

> show by evidence/reasoning that a claim is false.

dismiss

only means:

> reject it / not take it seriously.

Someone can dismiss a claim without successfully refuting it.

dismiss vs disprove

disprove

= establish that something is false.

dismiss

= reject it.

Again:

> dismissal is an attitude/judgment; disproving requires evidence.

dismiss vs rebut

rebut

= respond with counterargument/evidence.

dismiss

= reject, potentially without detailed engagement.

Your passage says the concern should not be dismissed—meaning it deserves actual engagement.

dismiss vs brush aside

brush aside

= casually disregard.

dismiss

can be formal or casual.

> dismiss a case — formal legal > dismiss a concern — may mean brush it aside.

dismiss vs brush off

brush off someone

= ignore/treat them rudely or casually.

dismiss someone

can mean:

* send away;

* fire;

* stop taking seriously.

> “She brushed him off.”

does not normally mean she fired him.

dismiss vs belittle

belittle

= make something/person seem less important or valuable.

dismiss

= refuse to give it serious consideration.

Someone can belittle a concern while discussing it; dismissing it goes further toward rejecting it.

dismiss vs minimize minimize

= make the importance/severity seem smaller.

dismiss

= reject it as effectively not worth considering.

> minimize a risk

> dismiss a risk

The second is stronger.

dismiss vs overlook

overlook

may mean:

> fail to notice.

dismiss

usually means:

> notice but reject.

Very different.

dismiss vs fire

fire

ordinary informal AmE/international workplace usage:

> terminate employment.

dismiss

more formal and especially common in BrE/legal employment contexts.

- > He was fired.
- > He was dismissed.

Same basic event, different register.

dismiss vs lay off

dismiss/fire

often focuses on terminating a particular employee, sometimes for performance/misconduct.

lay off

typically refers to job loss for organizational/economic reasons rather than individual fault.

Terminology varies by jurisdiction.

Do not treat them as synonyms.

dismiss vs terminate employment

terminate employment

neutral/formal umbrella phrase.

dismiss

usually means termination initiated by employer.

A contract can terminate for other reasons without anyone being “dismissed.”

dismiss vs release — person release

= free/allow to leave.

dismiss

= formally tell someone their presence/duty is no longer required.

> release a prisoner > dismiss a class

dismiss vs discharge

discharge

can mean:

- * release from hospital;
- * release from duty;
- * terminate military service;
- * fire an employee;
- * legal discharge.

dismiss

overlaps in some institutional contexts but not all.

The exact noun/verb collocation matters.

dismiss vs adjourn — court/class/meeting

adjourn

= temporarily suspend/end a session, often to resume later.

dismiss

= release people or terminate a claim/case.

> court adjourns for lunch > judge dismisses the case.

dismiss vs acquit — criminal law

acquit

= formally find defendant not guilty after appropriate adjudication.

dismiss a charge/case

= terminate it procedurally or substantively without necessarily making the same kind of not-guilty finding.

Legal effects vary.

So:

> dismissal ≠ acquittal.

dismiss vs withdraw/drop — legal

dismiss

often court action.

withdraw/drop

often describes the claimant/prosecutor abandoning something.

Exact procedural terminology varies.

dismissive vs rude

rude

= broadly impolite.

dismissive

= specifically communicates:

> “you/your idea are not worth serious attention.”

A dismissive person may be outwardly calm rather than openly rude.

dismissive vs indifferent

indifferent

= does not care.

dismissive

= actively treats something as unimportant/unworthy.

dismissive vs condescending

condescending/patronising

= treats the other person as intellectually/socially inferior.

dismissive

= refuses to take them/their views seriously.

They can occur together but are distinct.

X. GRAMMAR

71. dismiss + direct object

- > dismiss a concern
- > dismiss an employee
- > dismiss a case
- > dismiss a student

The meaning depends heavily on the object.

72. dismiss someone from + job/post/service

- > dismiss him from his post
- > dismiss her from employment

= remove from that position.

73. dismiss X as Y

Extremely productive:

- > dismiss it as nonsense
- > dismiss him as inexperienced
- > dismiss the event as insignificant

74. dismiss X from one's mind

- > dismiss the possibility from your mind

= stop considering/thinking about it.

75. be dismissed for + reason

Employment:

- > “He was dismissed for misconduct.”

Cricket:

- > “He was dismissed for 42.”

Same surface construction, completely different meaning.

Employment

for = reason.

Cricket

for = score.

Context is crucial.

76. dismiss something out of hand

- > reject without serious examination.

Y. COUNTABILITY

dismissal — employment/legal act

Can be countable:

- > a dismissal
- > three dismissals

or mass-like:

- > unfair dismissal
- > dismissal from employment

dismissal — cricket

Countable:

- > three dismissals

though other terminology may be more usual depending on context.

dismissiveness

Usually uncountable:

- > his dismissiveness toward complaints

For your original sentence

> “That concern is real and should not be dismissed.”

The exact meaning is:

dismissed = 因為不同意「在餐廳補習」這個解決方法，就連帶把「學生真的缺乏合適學習空間」這個問題也當成不重要或沒有根據

So:

> should not be dismissed

= 不應被輕視 / 不應被置之不理 / 不應在沒有認真回應前就被否定

There is an important logical distinction in the paragraph:

> The concern may be valid

> 學生缺乏學習空間可能是真問題。

but:

> the proposed response may still be wrong

> 不代表佔用餐廳就是合適解決方法。

That is why dismiss is well chosen: the writer is saying that rejecting one proposed solution should not automatically lead to rejecting the underlying concern.

For the core database, I would keep 6 major semantic branches for dismiss:

1. send/release someone from a class, meeting, duty, or presence
2. terminate someone's employment or official position
3. reject an idea, concern, claim, or person as unworthy/unimportant
4. remove a thought/possibility from one's mind
5. legal: terminate or reject a case, claim, charge, or appeal
6. sport: cricket — get a batter out

Then I would separately index the major modern technical extension dismiss a notification/dialog, together with dismissal, dismissive, dismissively, dismissiveness, because those forms have become important enough to deserve independent retrieval.
