

Absolutely — drink is a strong polysemy target because your passage uses it here:

> “the shop sells handmade bread, pastries, cakes, and simple drinks like coffee and tea.”

Here drinks means beverages, especially non-alcoholic ones in this context. But drink also works as a verb, can specifically mean alcoholic beverages / drinking alcohol, and appears in useful family expressions.

Word family: drink / drank / drunk / drinking

Base word: drink

Verb forms: drink, drinks, drank, drunk, drinking

Noun: drink

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞)

Important irregular forms:

> drink → drank → drunk

Meaning in your passage: drink = beverage — 飲品 ; 飲料

Your sentence:

> “...simple drinks like coffee and tea.”

Here drinks means:

> liquids prepared or served for people to consume, such as coffee, tea, juice, or water.

繁體中文 :

供人飲用的液體食品 ; 飲品 / 飲料

Natural translation:

> “simple drinks like coffee and tea”

「咖啡和茶這類簡單飲品」

So here:

> drink = 飲品 / 飲料

1. drink = beverage in general — 飲品；飲料

The core noun meaning.

Practice 1 — Original

> “The shop sells simple drinks like coffee and tea.”

「這間店售賣咖啡和茶這類簡單飲品。」

Practice 2

> “Would you like a hot drink?”

「你想喝一杯熱飲嗎？」

Practice 3

> “Cold drinks are kept in the fridge.”

「凍飲品放在雪櫃裡。」 drink = 供人飲用的液體食品

2. drink = an alcoholic beverage — 酒；酒精飲品

A major distinct noun meaning.

Practice 4

> “Would you like a drink?”

Depending on context:

「你想喝杯酒嗎？」

Practice 5

> “He ordered a drink at the bar.”

「他在酒吧點了一杯酒。」 drink = 在酒吧 / 社交語境中常可專指酒精飲品

This is highly context-dependent.

3. a drink = one serving of a beverage — 一杯飲品；一杯酒

A useful countability sense.

Practice 6

> “I bought two drinks.”

「我買了兩杯飲品。」

Practice 7

> “She had one drink with dinner.”

「她晚餐時喝了一杯酒。」

a drink = 一份 / 一杯具體飲品

The exact Chinese depends on whether alcohol is involved.

4. drink = alcoholic drinks collectively — 酒類；酒精

Practice 8

> “He gave up drink completely.”

「他完全戒酒了。」

Practice 9

> “Too much drink can damage your health.”

「過量飲酒 / 酒精會損害健康。」 drink — uncountable = 酒精飲品作為一個整體概念

Register:

* especially BrE / somewhat traditional

5. drink = verb, swallow liquid — 喝 ; 飲

The core verb meaning.

Practice 10

> “She drinks coffee every morning.”

「她每天早上都喝咖啡。」

Practice 11

> “Drink some water before you leave.”

「出門前先喝點水。」 drink = 把液體吞入口中

6. drink = consume alcohol — 喝酒 ; 飲酒

A major verb sense.

Practice 12

> “He does not drink.”

「他不喝酒。」

Practice 13

> “They were drinking at a bar.”

「他們在酒吧喝酒。」

drink — intransitive = 喝酒 / 飲用酒精飲品

Very important:

> “He doesn’t drink.”

often means:

> 他不喝酒
> not:
> 他完全不喝任何液體

7. drink heavily / drink too much = 酗酒；大量飲酒

Practice 14

> “He used to drink heavily.”

「他以前酗酒 / 喝很多酒。」

Practice 15

> “Drinking too much can affect your health.”

「過量飲酒會影響健康。」 drink heavily = 經常或大量飲用酒精

8. drink to + person/event = 為……祝酒

A common social use.

Practice 16

> “They drank to the couple’s future.”

「他們為這對伴侶的未來祝酒。」

Practice 17

> “Let’s drink to your success.”

「讓我們為你的成功乾杯 / 祝酒。」 drink to X = 舉杯飲酒以祝賀、紀念或表示敬意

9. drink in = absorb eagerly (片語) **

By your no-phrasal-verb rule, I'll only flag this briefly:

> drink in the view

> = 如饑似渴地欣賞 / 吸收眼前景色

This is figurative and useful, but best kept under the phrasal layer.

10. drinking = act/habit of drinking alcohol — 飲酒；喝酒習慣

Practice 18

> “His drinking became a problem.”

「他的飲酒問題變得嚴重。」

Practice 19

> “The doctor advised him to reduce his drinking.”

「醫生建議他減少飲酒。」 drinking = 飲酒這個行為 / 習慣，尤其指酒精

11. drinking water = 飲用水

A major compound.

Practice 20

> “The village needs clean drinking water.”

「這條村需要潔淨的飲用水。」

Practice 21

> “Always carry enough drinking water.”

「一定要帶足夠的飲用水。」 drinking water = 適合人類直接飲用的水

12. drinking glass = 飲水杯；玻璃杯

A practical compound.

Practice 22

> “She placed a drinking glass beside the plate.”

「她在碟旁放了一個玻璃飲水杯。」

Practice 23

> “The cabinet contains several drinking glasses.”

「櫃裡有幾個飲用玻璃杯。」 drinking glass = 用來喝水或其他飲品的玻璃杯

Important distinction: drink vs beverage

drink

general everyday word.

beverage

more formal/commercial.

> hot drink

> = 熱飲 > hot beverage

> = 熱飲品，較正式

In your bakery passage:

> drinks

is more natural than:

> beverages

Important distinction: drink vs alcohol

drink

can mean any beverage or alcohol depending on context.

alcohol specifically means alcoholic substance/drinks.

> “Would you like a drink?”

could mean:

- * any beverage
- * alcoholic drink

Context decides.

Important distinction: drink vs have a drink

drink

verb:

> “I drink coffee.”

= 我喝咖啡。

have a drink

can mean:

- * 喝一杯飲品
- * 去喝一杯酒

depending on context.

> “Let’s have a drink after work.”

often means:

「下班後去喝一杯酒吧。」

Important distinction: drink vs sip

drink

general action of consuming liquid.

sip

= drink in small amounts slowly.

> drink coffee

> = 喝咖啡

> sip coffee

> = 小口啜飲咖啡

Important distinction: drink vs swallow

drink

specifically ingest liquid.

swallow

= move food/liquid from mouth down throat.

You can swallow food, but you don't normally "drink" solid food.

Important distinction: drink vs eat

drink

for liquids.

eat

for solid/semi-solid foods.

But some foods blur the boundary:

* soup can be eaten or drunk depending on context/container

* smoothies are usually drunk

Important distinction: a drink vs drink

Countable:

> “I ordered a drink.”

= 我點了一杯飲品 / 酒。

Uncountable alcohol concept:

> “He gave up drink.”

= 他戒酒。

Same word, different countability and meaning.

Important distinction: He doesn't drink

This is a classic learner trap.

> He doesn't drink.

Normally means:

> 他不喝酒。 **

Not:

> 「他不喝任何液體。」

To say the latter, you would need explicit context.

Important distinction: drunk — participle vs adjective

Past participle:

> “He has drunk the coffee.”

「他已經喝了咖啡。」

Adjective:

> “He is drunk.”

「他喝醉了。」

Same form, very different grammar and meaning.

This is worth flagging.

Important distinction: drank vs drunk

Correct:

> Yesterday I drank coffee.

> I have drunk coffee.

Not:

> I have drank ❌

So:

> drink → drank → drunk

Important distinction: drunk vs drunken drunk

usually predicative:

> “He is drunk.”

= 他醉了。 drunken usually attributive:

> “a drunken argument”

= 酒後爭吵

Drunken often describes behaviour/state associated with intoxication.
