KJ. PASSAGE RECAP

“Students can be asked to write a diary entry after a role-play, compare their performance with the original text, or explain what their character’s choices reveal.”

Here:

entry

= one individual written item recorded in a diary

Best Traditional Chinese:

- 一篇日記
- 一則日記記錄
- 日記條目（較技術／直譯）

Natural contextual translation:

學生可以在角色扮演後寫一篇日記、把自己的表演與原文比較, 或解釋角色的選擇反映了甚麼。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

diary entry

= one separate piece of writing in a diary, usually recording thoughts, feelings, or events associated with a particular date

一篇／一則日記

The biggest learner branches are:

diary entry

→ 一篇日記

dictionary entry

→ 詞典詞條

log entry

→ 日誌記錄

database entry

→ 資料庫記錄

accounting entry

→ 會計分錄

but completely differently:

gain entry to the building

→ 進入大樓

No Entry

→ 禁止進入

entry point

→ 入口點

port of entry

→ 入境口岸

Competition English adds:

submit an entry

→ 提交參賽作品

winning entry

→ 獲獎作品

entry fee

→ 報名費／入場費

Business English adds:

market entry

→ 進入市場

barrier to entry

→ 市場進入壁壘

entry-level job

→ 初級／入門職位

Legal English adds:

entry into force

→ 正式生效

Computing adds:

data entry

→ 資料輸入

entry field

→ 輸入欄位

entry point

→ 程式入口點

And the verb family is essential:

enter the room

→ 進入房間

enter a competition

→ 報名參賽

enter your password

→ 輸入密碼

enter into an agreement

→ 訂立協議

enter the market

→ 進入市場

A particularly useful distinction is:

entry

→ often the act/right of entering versus:

entrance

→ often the physical place through which you enter

So:

Entry is free.

→ 免費入場。

but:

The entrance is on the left.

→ 入口在左邊。

The central semantic shortcut is:

ENTRY = something that has entered a place, system, record, activity, or state.

That may be:

1. a person entering a building
2. a traveler entering a country
3. a competitor entering a contest
4. a piece of work entered for judging
5. a piece of information entered in a record
6. a company entering a market
7. a law entering into force
8. a performer entering a scene

In the passage, the meaning belongs squarely to the recorded-item branch: students write one diary item from a character's perspective so that the drama experience is converted into reflective written learning.
