Meaning in this passage

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

Here, finance means:

the business function or department responsible for managing an organisation's money, budgets, financial records, funding and financial decisions — 財務; 財務部門

The passage contrasts different professional functions inside a company:

- marketing → customers, demand, branding, promotion
- finance → budgets, costs, revenue, profitability, financial control
- operations → practical execution, processes, capacity, delivery

中文翻譯：

AD. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS

Important distinction 1: finance vs financial

finance

noun/verb:

work in finance 從事金融／財務工作

finance a project 為項目融資 financial

adjective:

financial information 財務資料

So:

finance department
financial department

Finance department is the normal established expression.

Important distinction 2: finance vs finances

finance

field/function/funding:

She works in finance.
她從事金融工作。 finances

money situation:

Her finances are improving.
她的財務狀況正在改善。

The plural finances does not normally mean “the academic subject”.

Important distinction 3: finance vs money

money

the actual medium used to pay.

finance

much broader:

- managing money,
- obtaining capital,
- investing,

- funding,
- financial decision-making.

I need money to buy lunch.
我需要錢吃午飯。

The business needs finance to expand.
企業需要融資擴張。

Important distinction 4: finance vs funding

Very important.

funding

money provided for a specific activity.

finance

can mean the funds and/or the process/system of obtaining them.

government funding for research 政府研究資助 project finance 項目融資安排

Important distinction 5: finance vs accounting

This is one of the most important business distinctions.

accounting

records, classifies and reports financial transactions.

finance

focuses more on:

- obtaining funds,
- budgeting,
- investing,
- capital allocation,
- forecasting,
- financial decisions.

Simplified:

accounting = what happened financially?

finance = how should money be managed and used?

In real organizations, the functions overlap.

Important distinction 6: finance vs economics

finance

focuses strongly on:

- money,
- investment,
- firms,
- assets,
- financial markets,
- funding decisions.

economics

studies broader allocation of scarce resources and behaviour of:

- consumers,
- firms,
- governments,
- economies.

Finance is closely related to economics but is not the same field.

Important distinction 7: finance vs banking

banking

activities performed by banks:

- deposits,
- loans,
- payments,
- banking services.

finance

much broader and includes:

- banking,
 - investment,
 - corporate finance,
 - asset management,
 - capital markets,
 - personal finance.

Important distinction 8: finance vs investment

investment

putting money into an asset or project expecting future benefit.

finance

covers both obtaining money and deciding how to use/manage it.

Investment is one major part of finance.

Important distinction 9: finance vs financial services

finance

the broad field/function.

financial services

commercial services provided by:

- banks,
- insurers,
- investment firms,
- payment firms,
- asset managers, etc.

Important distinction 10: finance vs budget

finance

whole monetary management function.

budget

specific plan for expected income and spending.

A budget is one tool within finance.

Important distinction 11: finance vs treasury

In larger companies:

finance

broad function.

treasury

often focuses on:

- cash,
- liquidity,
- borrowing,
- funding,
- foreign exchange,
- financial risk.

Treasury is often part of the wider finance function.

Important distinction 12: finance vs revenue

revenue

money earned from normal business activities.

finance

the overall management/funding system.

Revenue is one financial measure, not the same as finance.

Important distinction 13: finance vs profit profit

income remaining after relevant expenses.

finance

management and sourcing of money.

A company can obtain finance even when it is not yet profitable.

Important distinction 14: finance vs capital capital

financial resources invested in or available to a business.

finance

process/function of obtaining and managing capital and other money.

Important distinction 15: finance vs credit credit

ability/arrangement to obtain goods or money now and pay later.

finance

broader; credit is one possible source of finance.

Important distinction 16: financing vs finance

finance

can be:

- broad field,
- business function,
- available funds.

financing

usually emphasizes:

the particular process or arrangement used to supply funds

We need finance.

我們需要資金。

We arranged financing through a bank.

我們透過銀行安排了融資。

Important distinction 17: debt financing vs equity financing

debt financing

borrow money:

- repayment required,
- normally interest payable,
- lender does not normally obtain ownership merely from the loan.

equity financing

sell ownership interest:

- no conventional loan repayment,
- investors obtain equity ownership.

A fundamental finance distinction.

Important distinction 18: financial vs fiscal financial

broadly related to money/finance.

fiscal especially related to government:

- taxation,
- government spending,
- public budgets.

financial problem 財務問題

fiscal policy 財政政策

Do not automatically use them interchangeably.

Important distinction 19: financial year vs calendar year

calendar year

January 1–December 31.

financial year

organization's chosen twelve-month accounting period.

They may coincide, but do not have to.

Important distinction 20: financial position vs financial performance

financial position

what the organization's financial situation looks like at a point in time:

- assets,
- liabilities,
- equity, etc.

financial performance

how well it performed financially over a period:

- revenue,
 - expenses,
 - profit, return, etc.

Important distinction 21: financial health vs financial performance

financial performance

results over a period.

financial health

broader ability to remain stable and meet financial obligations.

A company can report a good quarter yet still have weak long-term financial health.

Important distinction 22: financial loss vs accounting loss financial loss

broad everyday/business term for loss of money.

accounting loss

more precisely calculated according to accounting rules.

Do not assume every use of financial loss refers to an accounting statement.

Important distinction 23: financial support vs loan

financial support

broad:

- grant,
- family support,
- subsidy,
- donation,
- loan.

loan

must normally be repaid.

So financial support does not automatically mean debt.

Important distinction 24: financial aid vs financial assistance

They overlap strongly.

financial aid

especially common in education:

student financial aid

financial assistance broader:

assistance to families/businesses.

Important distinction 25: financial security vs financial stability

financial security

often individual:

feeling able to meet current/future needs.

financial stability

can describe:

- an institution,
 - or an entire financial system.

Important distinction 26: financially viable vs profitable profitable

makes profit.

financially viable

financially capable of continuing successfully.

A project can be financially viable with modest profit; a temporarily profitable activity might still be structurally unviable.

Important distinction 27: financially independent vs wealthy financially independent able to support oneself without relying on another person.

wealthy possesses substantial wealth.

Someone can be financially independent without being rich.

Important distinction 28: financier vs financial adviser

financier

typically involved in providing, arranging or controlling substantial capital.

financial adviser

gives financial advice to clients.

Completely different roles.

Important distinction 29: financier vs investor investor

puts capital into assets expecting returns.

financier

broader/formal term for someone engaged in major financing or capital provision.

A financier may be an investor, lender, deal arranger, or combination.

Important distinction 30: public finance vs personal finance

public finance

government:

- taxation,
- spending,
- public debt.

personal finance

individual:

- income,
- expenses,

- saving,
- debt,
- investing.

Same root, completely different scale.

Important distinction 31: corporate finance vs accounting

Corporate finance asks things such as:

- Should we invest in this project?
- Should we borrow or issue shares?
- How should we allocate capital?
- How much risk should we accept?

Accounting asks things such as:

- What transactions occurred?
 - How should they be recorded?
 - What do the financial statements show?

Important distinction 32: trade finance vs international finance

trade finance

specifically supports transactions involving goods/services, especially import/export.

international finance

much broader:

- exchange rates,
- global capital,
- international investments,

- cross-border financing.

Important distinction 33: project finance vs corporate finance

corporate finance

financing and investment decisions of the whole company.

project finance

financing structured around a particular project's assets and future cash flows.

Important distinction 34: microfinance vs ordinary bank finance

Microfinance particularly focuses on small-scale financial services for people or businesses with limited access to conventional banking.

It is not simply:

“very small finance.”

It is an established development-finance concept.

Important distinction 35: financialisation

This does not simply mean:

“more people studying finance.”

It means that:

financial markets, financial institutions, financial incentives and financial returns become increasingly influential in economic or social activity

Important distinction 36: finance in your passage

In:

marketing, finance and operations

finance is being used as the name of a corporate function.

It therefore does not mean merely:

money.

It means a professional group that may deal with:

- budgets,
- costs,
- forecasts,
- profitability,
- cash flow,
- investment appraisal,
- financial reporting,
- funding,
- financial control.

That professional perspective may differ sharply from marketing or operations.

For your original sentence

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

Here:

finance = 負責管理公司金錢和財務決策的專業職能, 包括預算、成本控制、財務分析、資金安排、預測和財務報告等

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

這個問題在大型機構中特別嚴重, 因為市場推廣、財務和營運等不同部門可能使用不同的專業語言, 亦有不同的優先事項。

For this paragraph, the particularly useful contrast is:

marketing = 顧客、需求、品牌、市場機會
finance = 預算、成本、盈利、資金、財務風險 operations = 流程、執行、產能、交付

And three words that learners very often blur should stay separate:

accounting = 記錄、分類及報告已發生的財務交易 finance = 籌措、管理及決定如何使用資金 economics = 分析更廣泛的資源分配、供求及經濟行為

That difference in professional perspective is exactly why the passage says separate departments may use different language and pursue different priorities.
